U.S. no. 1 arms peddler--Carter

Wants pact with Russ limiting arms sales

WASHINGTON (AP) — Decrying the United States as the world's No. 1 arms peddler, President Carter says he will make proposals to the Soviet Union "before long" to limit sales of conventional weapons.

It was the first time Carter has proposed a U.S.-Soviet agreement limiting the sale of conventional weapons, which he has said is a $20 billion-a-year business.

Last May, the President announced a unilateral policy of restraining U.S. sales of conventional arms, citing "the threat to world peace embodied in this spiralling arms traffic." He said arms sales should be approved only to protect the security of this country and that of its allies.

Carter's statements came during an interview with a group of newspaper columnists, a transcript of which was released by the White House on Saturday. Carter has held such interviews about twice monthly.

During the 45-minute session Friday, Carter also repeated earlier statements that he supports degregulation of natural gas but differs with a Senate measure on how soon controls should be removed.

And the President declared anew that "there has not and will not be any violation" of U.S. commitments to Israel by his administration.

In disclosing plans to propose a limit on conventional arms sales, Carter said the United States is "the worst violator at this time; the Soviets perhaps next; and the French, British, Belgians, to some degree participate in this excessive arms sale."

But he acknowledged it would be very difficult to find a way to limit sales.

Asked if a joint U.S.-Soviet statement on the Mideast issued a month ago represents an erosion of American support for Israel, Carter declared, "I have never violated any commitments made to the Israelis, either by my administration or by the previous administrations."

He said he and Israeli Foreign Minister Moshe Dayan recently reviewed all public and private agreements between their two countries. "There has not been and will not be any violation of those commitments," Carter said.

On his beleaguered energy program, which has been torn apart in the Senate, Carter said he does not believe he has changed his position "that I would work with Congress, as has President Ford, for deregulation of natural gas... The difference (with Congress) is in the rapidity which with natural gas is deregulated."

Carter said his proposal to raise the price from $1.46 to $1.75 per thousand cubic feet would be a substantial step toward ultimate deregulation.

"But I think it would be quite disruptive and very costly to the American people ... to deregulate it now," he added.

The House has passed Carter's plan, but the Senate rejected it, voting instead to deregulate prices after two years.

Boyfriend wounded; 2 men arrested

Gang warfare held as motive in shooting death of woman

Gang warfare was blamed for the death of an 18-year-old San Gabriel woman and the wounding of her West Covina boyfriend, Sheriff's deputies said Saturday.

Dead is Angela Ramos. She died instantly Saturday when a bullet fired from a nearby parked car ripped through her heart, authorities said, Wounded, but not critically, was Maxi J. Flores, 21.

Homicide detectives said both victims were standing at the edge of Ringrove Park in Valinda when a car containing three young men pulled up near them. Auto occupants shouted several gang slogans, then opened fire with an unidentified weapon, officers said.

Twenty minutes later as other deputies stopped an auto for a traffic violation, radio dispatchers broadcast a description of the suspects' car which matched the one deputies had just stopped.

Both occupants were arrested and held on murder bookings. Deputies said they confiscated ammunition from the suspect's car, but no weapon.

Held in Los Angeles County jail are Rudy Gomez, 18, of West Covina, and a 17-year-old boy from La Puente, police said.

Girl, 4, killed in freeway pileup

One child was killed, her father critically injured and a Pomonan hurt Saturday in a three-car pileup on San Bernardino Freeway east of Millikan Avenue in Ontario.

Dead is Scholle Margaret Zismann,4, of Los Olivos, a small Santa Barbara community. Her father, Edward Zismann, 33, suffering chest and head injuries, underwent surgery at San Antonio Community Hospital Saturday night and was listed in grave condition. Released after treatment was Geary Lee Luke, 26, of 1158 N. Gordon Ave., Pomona.

Highway Patrol officers said the accident occurred at midmorning Saturday in eastbound lanes of the freeway. A 1968 sedan lost a left rear wheel and came to rest headed west in the second fastest lane, officers said. All passengers managed to flee the disabled auto moments before Zismann's car slammed into it head-on and Luke's van, following Zismann, hit both other autos, Highway Patrolmen said.

Surrender after reign of terror

4 hijack Viet airliner, kill 2

SINGAPORE (AP) — Four hijackers commandeered a Vietnamese airliner and killed two Vietnamese officials Saturday during an airborne reign of terror before surrendering here and appealing for political asylum.

Authorities said the Singapore government, which has no formal diplomatic ties with Communist Vietnam, was considering the hijackers' request.

Details of the hijacking remained sketchy. Officials here said the vintage DC3 plane was on a domestic flight with between 36 and 40 persons aboard when it was diverted. But it was not known where or when the hijacking occurred.

Authorities provided no identifications of the hijackers or of the two dead Vietnamese. A third person, also unidentified, was reported seriously hurt during the hijacking.

There was no immediate official Vietnamese comment on the hijacking.

The hijackers, reportedly armed with one pistol and three knives, forced the plane to land in Thailand for fuel before flying about 1,000 miles south to Singapore, at the southern tip of the Malay peninsula, and putting down at a military airport.

Officials said the plane carried a crew of two. The injured person was taken off the plane first, and the crew members and surviving passengers disembarked after the hijackers surrendered.

The twin-engine, propeller-driven plane was allowed to land at Selatar military airport after the pilot radioed he was running out of fuel, a spokesman for the Singapore Civil Aviation Department said.

Unofficial sources said the plane landed first at Utapao, a former U.S. Air Force base in Thailand, where it was refueled. But the hijackers were refused asylum there.

In August 1976, 1½ years after the Communist takeover in Vietnam, a former South Vietnamese soldier tried unsuccessfully to hijack a French plane at Saigon's Tan Son Nhut Airport. The official Vietnam News Agency said the would-be hijacker killed himself with a grenade, but there were no reported injuries among passengers or crew.

Since the 1975 defeat of the U.S.-backed Saigon government, thousands of Vietnamese have fled their homeland, most by boat.

Many of these "boat cases" have had serious problems in finding countries to accept them. Most Southeast Asian nations have all but shut their doors to new refugees.

Even those that do provide haven try to move the refugees on as quickly a possible. Despite these efforts boat camps have sprung up from Thailand to Japan with refugees forced to live aboard the vessels that carried them from Vietnam.

If you forgot, turn clocks

If you forgot to set your clocks back one hour before retiring Saturday night, you are one hour ahead of everyone else today. At 2 a.m., clocks were set back to 1 a.m.

Today is a 25-hour day, giving Californians back the hour they lost last April when the state officially went on Daylight Savings Time.

If you haven't set your clocks back yet, better do it now. Would be embarassing to show up at 10 a.m. your time and find it was actually 9 a.m.

Trying to avert hospital crisis

LOS ANGELES (AP) — County health officials have invoked emergency measures to forestall a crisis following the closure of three psychiatric wards at Metropolitan State Hospital in Norwalk, a Los Angeles newspaper reported in today's editions.

Personnel from the county health services department and the public guardian's office are monitoring hospital conditions around the clock and a pool of county physicians is standing by to help out if needed.

Meanwhile, a county health services department inspection report was delivered citing the hospital for staff shortages and violations of various state and federal regulations.

The inspectors criticized the facility for staff deficiencies, medication errors and lax chart-keeping, and said some patients had been found in leather restraints locked in rooms without a doctor's order.

The hospital's administrator, Nick Burgeson, said in an interview Saturday: "We are out of compliance. In some of the areas they mention, we were aware. It has been a topic of heated discussion for a matter of time between ourselves and the state."

Burgeson stressed that only admissions to the three acute care psychiatric wards had been closed, and that other admissions to the hospital were continuing Saturday.

Dr. Harold Mavritte, acting deputy director of mental health services for the county, said Saturday that the closure of the wards will have "a serious impact . . . by limiting the number of overflow patients we can admit to the hospital."

60 years after the revolution: Soviet lags behind the West

But life is better than it was, say Russian citizens

MOSCOW (AP) — The Soviet Union marks 60 years of communism this week secure in its status as a superpower but far from realizing the dreams of the Bolshevik revolution.

Despite — or perhaps because of — its military might, the U.S.S.R. lags behind the West and even some East European countries in such critical areas as industry, agriculture, science and technology.

In many ways it is a developing country, lacking many of the facilities common to smaller industrial nations and anxious to obtain Western products and plants.

On the political side, the Kremlin often uses heavy-handed tactics to suppress dissent.

But these problems and practices will not be the focus of the anniversary observance. Instead the aging leadership in the Kremlin will stress the positive in observances culminating with the traditional parade in Red Square Nov. 7.

The Soviets are expected to continue playing down the military display in the parade in line with their policy of calling for an end to the arms race and a decrease in military spending.

Western diplomats with long Soviet experience acknowledge there have been genuine achievements in recent years. But they often remark on the contrast between the reality of Soviet life and the picture drawn by the official media.

"In foreign affairs, the most significant development since the 50th anniversary has been the accommodation reached with the United States," said one senior envoy, referring to detente and the Strategic Arms Limitation Treaty.

"At home, living standards have improved slightly. Life is more open than it was. But you do not have the dynamic nation the revolution envisioned. Just the opposite. It's immobile, frozen, resistant to any change."

The mobs that stormed the Winter Palace in St. Petersburg — now Leningrad — in 1917 set in motion the transformation of a mass of backward peasants into a world power roughly equal in military strength to the United States.

Soviet President Leonid I. Brezhnev boasted recently there was hardly a corner of the globe that was outside Soviet interest and influence. He and his Kremlin colleagues believe in the inevitable triumph of communism everywhere.

But the schism with China continues, most regimes in East Europe remain subservient to the Kremlin simply out of fear of open intervention, and the Communist parties in Western Europe are demonstrating increasingly that Moscow-style Marxism-Leninism is not for them.

The revolution also held out the promise of a classless society in which no one would want for the necessities of life because the state would own, plan and manage the economy. The one area where centralized planning seems to work is arms production, and then it is at the expense of consumer goods.

While the Soviet system shields citizens from the unemployment and inflation that plague industrialized nations, its performance has been less than brilliant when measured by official promises to become No. 1 economically.

With twice the land area of the United States and 20 per cent more people, the Soviet gross national product for 1976 was $3,300 a person, not quite on the level of Greece or Spain, while the U.S. figure was $7,936. The Soviet growth rate is about average compared with other industrialized nations.

The Soviet Union produces more oil, coal, steel and cement than the United States and is second only to South Africa in the production of gold. Yet little of this wealth filters down to the consumer.

In the current five-year plan, 31 per cent of all investment has been allocated to agriculture, but by Western standards the U.S.S.R. remains incapable of feeding its people without resorting to food imports, even in years of good harvests. Meat shortages are a particular difficulty.

Many Soviet citizens are not interested in such comparisons. They agree with the state-controlled newspapers that life is better than it was 60 years ago and even 10 years ago.

But they expect conditions to keep improving. They want better living conditions and a greater supply of consumer goods.

The problem the Kremlin faces is that when it promises more, expectations rise. When the performance falls short of promise, the leaders run the risk of popular dissatisfaction.

Some analysts believe such dissatisfaction could lead to economic reforms at a future date, reforms that were vaguely discussed in the late 1950s and 1960s and then shelved.

SAN FRANCISCO (AP) — He's finally arrived, but Erwin Kreuz' heart is nowhere near this city by the bay. The German tourist wants to go back to Bangor, Maine, the city he fell in love with by accident.

Kreuz, a Bavarian brewery worker from the community of Adelsried, decided to take a charter flight to San Francisco after seeing television shows about the city. But when his plane made a brief stopover in Bangor last weekend, he mistakenly deplaned, and spent three days sightseeing before he realized he had stepped out 3,000 miles too soon.

He became a celebrity in Bangor, but a San Francisco newspaper decided to put up the money to bring him here.

"He's gotta catch his plane back from here, but he didn't really want to come," his interpreter, Ralph Coffman of Bangor, said Friday.

"I'd just as soon have stayed in Maine," Kreuz said in German. Later, he said, "I want to go back to Maine or home."

Coffman said Kreuz' only comment about San Francisco on the trip between the airport and the mayor's office was, "There's no trees," unlike the heavily forested Maine or the wooded hills of Bavaria.

Asked if he was disappointed he would have only three days here, Kreuz shrugged and said, "Buy me a ticket home and pay for me to stay in a hotel and I'll stay a few more days."

During a meeting with Mayor George Moscone in Moscone's opulent office, Kreuz wore a red-white-and-blue cap with Maine in big letters and a map of the state on it.

He smiled and nodded and said "wunderbar" over and over again as Moscone shook his hand, patted him on the back, gave him a framed map of San Francisco in 1846 and told him, "We are very proud you wanted so desperately to come to San Francisco."

Earlier, when asked if he really wanted to meet Moscone, Kreuz began talking rapidly in German and ticking off on his fingers the famous people he had already met. "He says he's met them all," translated Coffman, shrugging his shoulders.

But Kruez faced more adventures Saturday night. Kreuz, feted beyond his wildest dreams because he got off a plane 3,000 miles short of target last weekend, was to become an honorary Chinese.

"I'd say the lost son has finally come to San Francisco," Kreuz announced in German as he traveled to the domed seat of San Francisco goevernment.

"Alles okay," pronounced the beaming Kreuz at one point. At his hotel, the lavish Hyatt Regency, Kruez found two gifts: a cold case of beer and two pairs of jeans. The beaming brewer celebrated by downing a bottle. He said he usually drinks eight quarts a day.

"I don't drink it. I gulp it down," he announced contentedly, speaking through an interpreter. That night at the Grand National Rodeo and Horse Show, Kreuz got a hero's welcome. He posed for dozens of pictures, including one between a pair of 2,000-pound Brahma bulls. Kruez kissed one of them.

The German's full weekend also includes an affair Saturday night at a Chinese restaurant, where he was to be made honorary member of the Wong Family Association in a special ceremony. He leaves for home Sunday.

DOUGLAS, Ariz. (AP) — U.S. Border Patrol agents were expected to be watching closely today to see if the Grand Knights of the Ku Klux Klan expand their vigil for illegal aliens to the Arizona-Mexico border.

The Klan said its patrol, organized by Grand Dragon David Duke of Jefferson, La., would expand today despite warnings from Atty. Gen. Griffin Bell and other federal officials that "activities by vigilante groups of any kind will not be tolerated."

Duke, who started the patrols in the hills south of San Diego along the California-Mexico border earlier this week, said Klan members would remain "totally law abiding." He said they would be unarmed and would report the sighting of any illegal aliens to the Border Patrol.

After setting up the Arizona patrols, Duke said, he would head for New Mexico and Texas today and Sunday to organize further patrols in those states.

"We will have a very small operation in Arizona, three dozen or so," he said. "We are not going onto the Indian reservations or anything like that ... We're simply going to do some spotting."

The Arizona patrols will be concentrated around this border town near the state's southeastern corner, Duke said.

"We will be monitoring the situation along the border," said Herbert Walsh, chief agent in the Border Patrol's Tucson sector, which covers most of the state. "Should they interfere with our operations or break the law, then we will act."

Duke refused to reveal the names of Klan members participating ,in patrols or the times and places that patrols will occur, citing security reasons and the oath Klan members take not to reveal identities.

"Some of our people are ranchers and businessmen," he said. "They're concerned about their jobs. They're not out there for publicity or notoriety."

Totie scheduled to leave hospital

LOS ANGELES (AP) — Comedienne Totie Fields, who underwent surgery for the removal of her right breast last week, was scheduled for release from Los Angeles New Hospital Sunday, a spokesman said.

The mastectomy came only a year and half after doctors amputated her left leg because of a circulatory problem. Later, she suffered two heart attacks and underwent surgery on her left eye. In all, she was hospitalized eight months.

Miss Fields, 46, was admitted to the hospital last Monday night suffering from exhaustion after embarking on 15 weeks of professional appearances, a spokesman said. The tumor was discovered during testing, and doctors decided to operate immediately.

The comedienne's engagements for the next few months in California and Las Vegas have been cancelled.

Berman's son, 12, dead of cancer

LOS ANGELES (AP) — The 12-year-old son of comedian Shelley Berman died of cancer Saturday at Cedars-Sinai Hospital, a family spokesman said.

Joshua Berman had been ill for 15 months and spent half of that time in the hospital, said spokesman Joe Siegman. Services were scheduled for Tuesday.

He is also survived by his mother, Sarah, and a sister, Rachel, 11.

One killed, 2 injured in Pomona free-for-all

One youth was slain and two other slightly wounded in a knife and tire iron free-for-all in Pomona Saturday in what police described as the aftermath of a fist fight between two girls.

Coroner's investigators said Johnny Rodriguez, 15, of 2472 Barjud Ave., Pomona, died of multiple knife and tire iron wounds. Friends dumped him at the front entrance of Pomona Valley Community Hospital and sped away before police could question them.

Most combatants and partygoers had fled by the time police arrived, officers said. So far no arrests have been made.

Chino brothers killed in crash to be buried

Two Chino area brothers, killed in a fiery collision involving a school bus and two trucks in Hundred Palms Wednesday, will be buried Tuesday in Pomona Cemetery.

David Danny Yamas, 34, and Edwin (Eddié) Rudolph Yamas, 30, were killed when the truck carrying a load of cotton they were driving struck another truck headon near Avenue 66 about 2 p.m. Wednesday in Hundred Palms.

The California Highway Patrol said that a schoolbus from the Coachella Valley Unified School District was struck by one of the trucks prior to the headon collision and sustained some damage from the collision and resulting fire. Bus driver Ida Curtwright was able to get all 52 of the children on board off safely.

Officials said the truck driven by the Yamas brothers was following the school bus northbound on Highway 86 when the bus stopped to make a left turn. The Yamas truck swerved to avoid hitting the bus glancing off the bus and into the southbound traffic lanes where it struck the other truck.

The two trucks burst into flame killing David Yamas outright along with the occupants of the other truck.

They were identified as Calvin Birlew, 51 and his wife, Naoma, 42, both of Los Banyos.

Edwin Yamas, who was driving the truck, was pulled from the vehicle by a passerby and taken to Indio Community Hospital where he died Thursday morning.

A spokesman for the Riverside County Fire Dept. said a plume of smoke could be seen from the burning vehicles 20 miles away in Indio.

The highway was closed for four hours after the accident.

But there's jealousy among city employees

More money for a better worker

By LEE MITGANG
AP Urban Affairs Writer

As labor costs for city governments continue to soar, some are turning to the idea of offering more money in city contracts for better worker productivity.

A relative handful of cities have experimented with the idea for at least five years, but now that New York City has adopted the practice, productivity is becoming a more common bargaining chip for other cities trying to hold down labor costs.

The theory is fine for city governments because it can produce faster, if not always better, work from its employes, cut down on overtime costs, and pave the way for job reductions. But in some of the cities it has been tried in, it has also created jealousy between workers who get productivity bonuses and shorter workdays and those who don't.

And generally, many union leaders fear that productivity is just a nice word for fewer workers.

For New York, there was practically no choice. Because of the city's severe financial bind, unions have been forced to accept the idea that any wage or cost of living increase will have to be funded by productivity savings. It is almost certain that any new union contracts resulting from negotiations set for January and April next year will include many productive features.

"The unions have accepted it. They feel there is no other way out,"says an official of New York City's Office of Labor Relations who asked not to be quoted by name.

Other cities have been trying productivity bargaining, although urban experts hesitate to call it a trend. Most notable are contracts covering sanitationmen in Flint, Mich., police in Orange, Calif., and water meter workers in Philadelphia.

A 1976 survey by the International City Management Association showed that out of 372 cities reporting, 36 of them, or less than 10 per cent engaged in productivity bargaining. Among various methods cities say they use to get more work for their labor dollars, putting bonuses or other sweeteners in labor contracts or otherwise offering to share the fruits of productivity savings with city workers remains the least prevalent.

Sanitationmen in Flint have had productivity cash incentives in their contracts for four years and are now in the midst of renegotiation.

In 1973, the city's sanitationmen demanded some sort of compensation for the growing amount of trash they had to pick up. But the city had the problem of reducing a growing burden of overtime costs. The agreement finally reached paid workers a productivity bonus of eight cents an hour if they cut overtime by 25 per cent. In addition, workers could go home after six hours if their routes were completed.

By 1975, the city was paying out about $208 a person in productivity bonuses, and was adding $2,000 to the bonus pool for each person it could eliminate from the payroll through attrition. And by 1976, workers were allowed to go home after only five hours if their routes were completed.

But this year, the unions, the city government and Flint citizens have taken a harder look at the productivity incentive idea, with no resolution so far. On the bargaining table are further refinements, notably a "complaint factor."

"Citizens were complaining that workers rush through their work to go home earlier," says Rita Patton, director of labor relations for Flint. Thus the city is trying to reduce a worker's bonus by a certain percentage based on any citizen complaints about his work.

On the positive side, the city has found it has reduced overtime hours from 6,700 in fiscal 1973 to only 45 hours in fiscal 1975, according to a study of Flint's program by the Urban Institute published last April.

There has been difficulty in the union ranks. Workers covered by the productivity agreements were working side by side with those who didn't have any. Sanitationmen were allowed to go home early each day, while workers who maintained garbage trucks felt resentful.

The approximately 60 sanitationmen covered by the productivity agreement belong to Local 1600 of the American Federation of State, County and Municilal Employees — AFSCME — representing approximately 1,000 Flint employes. The local's president, Jack Johnson, said in an interview he opposed productivity agreements for other workers he represents because such agreements seem to go hand in hand with fewer city jobs.

While urbanologists haven't given up on the idea of contract incentives for increased city labor productivity, Sam Zigoria, director of the Labor-Management Relations Service of the National League of Cities cites five problems cities have found with the idea:

—Productivity bargaining gets mixed up with other bargaining issues and can lead to costly or unwise tradeoffs.

—Productivity formulas that reward work improvements can self-destruct. In Orange, Calif., for instance, police who had agreed to a contract that rewarded lower crime rates with bonuses found that crime rates can only be improved so much.

—Since productivity incentives usually apply to only one unit in a given city agency, it can often create envy among other workers.

—Finally, in a time of urban financial stress, many taxpayers resent paying bonuses for work they feel city employees should be doing anyway.

Memorial fund set for slain mother

Students and faculty at Cal Poly Pomona have set up two memorial funds for Barbara Newton to take care of general expenses and to provide for the education of her two young daughters.

Mrs. Newton, senior secretary in the teacher preparation program at the university, was killed on campus last Monday. She also served as secretary of the Black Council for Unity (BCU) and corresponding secretary of the Black Faculty and Staff Association.

The Barbara Newton Memorial Fund is to help offset funeral expenses for the young Montclair woman. The Associated Students Inc. (ASI) and BCU arranged the Educational Fund for Kathy and Regina Newton as a special trust for her children.

Willie Wright, adviser to the BCU, said the ASI offered $500 to kick off the trust fund and will sponsor annual events beginning this year to raise additional dollars to assist in the education of the Newton girls. Clubs and organizations under the auspices of the ASI and affiliated with the BCU will participate in these events, leaders said.

The faculty and staff of the Teacher Preparation Center will also select a spot on campus to establish a living memorial to Mrs. Newton.

Persons interested in contributing to either funds may make checks payable to ASI/Newton Memorial Fund or ASI/Newton Educational Fund and send donations to Helen Master, senior accountatnt, ASI/University Union, Cal Poly, 3801 W. Temple Ave., Pomona 91768.

Neighborhood center to get CETA funds

The Pomona City Council has decided to approve CETA funding of the South Hills Neighborhood Service Center on a probationary 90-day status.

The council took that action this week because REAC, another agency on probation, has chosen not to accept its allocation of CETA Title I funds of $26,599 for the current funding year.

The council acted on a recommendation of the city's Manpower Advisory Council which voted in favor of funding South Hills, which did not receive any money during 1976-77.

At a recent study session, the council had aired many of South Hills' past conflicts and problems, and voted to reconsider South Hills at a later time, if, and only if, there were available funds pending the outcome of the appeal of REAC (Re-Employment Action Committee for Greater San Gabriel and Pomona Valleys).

In September, the council approved federal funding for REAC for 1977-78, but also put REAC on probation until Dec. 1 when REAC's program would be reviewed.

REAC has notified the city that it is not accepting its allocation of CETA Title I funds this year.

REAC and South Hills are the only two agencies to request CETA Title I funds under a manpower services category, which trains a person how to find a job, but does not provide for any skill training.

South Hills with the funding will be able to assist 26 persons who are unemployed and whose family income is below the federal poverty guidelines.

The council also took the following actions:

—Read a proclamation urging support of the charity ball Oct. 28 at Griswold's Pavilion to benefit the Blind Children's Center.

—Approved an agreement with the Pomona Chamber of Commerce for $35,000 for commercial and industrial promotion.

—Accepted a plaque and a key to the city from Tijuana, Mex., visited recently by city officials and the Chamber of Commerce. Councilwoman Georgia Grove presented the plaque and Councilman Adrian Wright the key.

—Approved an agreement with the Pomona YMCA for $15,000 of general revenue-sharing funds on a one-time-only basis for the Y's outreach program.

Parking moratorium due

A recommendation that the Pomona City Council set a four-month moratorium on enforcing city laws against parking or storing recreation vehicles in front yards will be considered by the council Monday at 8 p.m.

The recommendation was voted by the planning commission last Wednesday night after a large turnout of recreational vehicle owners protested the ordinance.

During the four-month moratorium, the commission will try to define a recreational vehicle.

Westmont residents protested to thg city council recently because complaints from neighbors had led to citations.

In other matters, the council will consider an appeal by Burger King, 1245 E. Holt Ave., of a commission denial of an application for a larger sign.

The council will continue its discussion of a tax on bingo game receipts.

A contract, with an engineer's estimate of $190,000, will be awarded for upgrading street lights in the area south of Phillips Boulevard and west of Park Avenue.

Clinic offers immunization

People who are 55 years of age or older will -have the opportunity to receive free flu immunizations at a Pomona clinic Tuesday from 10 a.m. to 2 p.m.

The free clinic at Palomares Community Center, 499 E. Arrow Hwy., is sponsored by the county health department.

"It is essential that senior citizens obtain the immunizations before mid-November to protect them against this year's strain of flu," said Dr. Annabell Teberg, medical director of the San Gabriel Valley Health Services Region.

She added the fact that the yearly flu shot provides immunity for only about six months.

The vaccine being given this year is a combination of A-Victoria and B-Hong Kong.

Old Mexico, California today

Teens in 'fashion' parade

By TONY AULT
PB Staff Writer

Earlier this month a small group of youths not unknown to local police agencies brought tears to their parents' eyes.

They were not tears of sadness, as the parents had been accustomed to, but hears of happiness.

The special show was presented by a new and unusual organization called "Creole Productions," created through the Aztlan Community Service Center, 635 S. Taylor St., Ontario.

Although not widely publicized in the Chino area, the fashion show filled the Chino Community Center to near capacity with not only residents of the Chino Mexican-American community, but civic leaders, businessmen and community leaders.

The participants were largely members of the Chino Sinners street gang, and other young men and women who might otherwise have been wandering the streets, running afoul of police.

It was both a relief and a joy to the parents attending who saw, perhaps who never would have imagined, their children taking center stage in a show of such nature to please rich and poor alike.

According to Maricela S. Ferguson, director of Creole Productions, and Tony Vicario of the Atzlan Community Service Center, the show is only the beginning of a series of fashion productions to be given in the valley by barrio youths, who will be selected at random.

Cooperating with the production company is a group of merchants from Montclair Plaza and Olvera Street in Los Angeles.

Funds donated for the shows, according to Mrs. Ferguson, will go into the Escholito programs.

The shows will include a parade of styles dating from Old Mexico through to barrio street dress and today's modern businessman. There will be dancing of the period shown, and other entertainment.

Included in the fashions is the original Mexican charro attire, the dress of the female warrior, barrio dress and business suits.

The next performance tentatively is scheduled Nov. 12 at the Claremont Colleges, where a national conference on minorities will be held.

Street, violent crime still pays

EDITOR'S NOTE — Violent crime is a young man's game and for another decade at least sheer numbers will ensure plentiful supply of players. If the teeming prisons neither deter nor reform, what other ways are open?

By JOHN BARBOUR
AP Newsfeatures Writer

CHICAGO (AP) — While bulging prisons struggle to contain the tide of lawbreakers, street crime, violent crime, still pays and the flow of youths through the criminal justice system continues unabated.

The young gangs that terrorize inner city streets play the odds, and by the time they are caught and the later time they are imprisoned they are committed to a life of predation.

Serious crime has risen in the United States by 70 per cent in the last 10 years. while the population has grown 7 per cent.

"And the gap between the amount of crime reported and the amount of crime experienced is vast," says Norval Morris, dean of the University of Chicago law school.

"It is authoritatively estimated that only half of all robberies of individuals and household burglaries, less than half of all assaults, rapes and attempted rapes, and less than a third of household larcenies are reported."

Even though crime statistics are considered grossly inadequate, there is no doubt that most serious crimes are committed by relatively young people, and criminals are getting younger all the time. The peak age for violence is now 16, and there is no decline in the 15-20 age group until at least 1980.

"The pill came late to the ghetto," Morris says.

"There is no reason to expect that the most serious forms of youth crime — homicide, rape, armed robbery and serious assault, which are concentrated in center-city poor minority populations — will have been reduced by 1990."

The expert consensus is that the certainty of capture and punishment would likely reduce street crime.

There is no such certainty now, and none in the foreseeable future. Street youths know it.

"They've gambled the odds," says Norman Carlson, director of federal prisons. "They know very well that the odds of apprehension are fairly small. And they know they can plea bargain and the chances of imprisonment are pretty low."

In the last seven years, more than half the states have reformed their criminal law codes or are in the process. Congress, for the second time in recent years, is studying a bill which would recodify the federal code. Even these efforts would not produce uniformity.

Bank robbers average 17-year sentences in Georgia and xx years in northern Illinois. But federal judges may sentence bank robbers to anything from probation to 25 years in prison. The new federal codification would at least modify that.

"Sentencing maximums are inconsistent and irrational," says Sen. Edward Kennedy, who with Sen. John McClellan, is sponsoring the bill. "If one robs a federally insured bank today, a 25-year term of imprisonment is possible; but if one robs a post office, the maximum term is only 10 years."

"Let's face it," says prison director Carlson, "we play games. The courts give long sentences knowing full well that it will be written up as 99 years. But hell, the judge knows, the inmate knows, the defense counsel knows that the guy isn't going to serve 99 years. He's going to serve five, six, seven, something like that."

The new federal code would establish a sentencing commission to set guidelines. Sentences would be firm, after appeal, and the prisoner and everyone concerned would know how long he would stay in prison.

The new federal code also would establish four firm measures of culpability. A crime would be judged on whether it was intentional, knowing, reckless or negligent. The code has 80 such levels now.

It would provide standard measures of crime, standard sentences, fixed punishment. Presuming breakers of the law are also students of its severity, this would soon filter down to would-be offenders.

It could also serve as a model for state codes.

Morris proposes that police deal only with crimes such as homicide, robbery and arson. Civilian agents or undercover officers would handle nonviolent crimes such as embezzlement, drug trafficking and prostitution.

Criminal law, he says, should not be used "to regulate the private moral conduct of citizens and to coerce them into virtue . ..

"We annually set our police to arresting four million assorted drunks, addicts, loiterers, vagrants, prostitutes and gamblers ... We overload our criminal justice system to a degree that renders it grossly defective where we most need protection from violence and predation ...."

Study of homicides suggests 'reasons'

CHATTANOOGA, Tenn. (AP) — Southerners tend to react more violently than other Americans when their code of personal honor is challenged, says geography of crime authority Keith Harries.

The Oklahoma State University professor said at a recent crime analysis conference here that a mix of cultural and economic factors helps explain why the South has the highest rate of homicides in the country.

He said there were 12.7 homicides per 100,000 population in the South, 7.6 in the Northeast, 8.1 in North-Central America, 9.0 in the West, and 9.6 for the entire country in 1975.

Harries also noted that homicide rates for both whites and blacks in the South were above the national average.

Southerners have a set of attitudes that generally condone interpersonal violence and they tend to live by their own code of personal honor, he said.

As far as economics and crime are concerned, Harries' view of violence in the South is that it "is nothing more than a function of the relative poverty of the region."

Whereas homicides occur everywhere, quite often as spurof-the-moment acts between relatives and friends, robberies and crimes against property occur more frequently in urban areas where there are more "opportunities" to rob people and to steal and destroy, he said.

Harries cautioned that crime rate data can be deceiving. For example, annexation of a suburb by a city should be taken into account when police report a decrease in the rate of crimes committed in the city, he noted.

By the same token, the media do not always make it clear whether they are reporting crime rates for the incorporated city or the Standard Metropolitan Statistical Area (SMSA).

The week-long conference for state planning employees was sponsored by the University of Tennessee at Chattanooga's Center for Criminological Analysis and Training.

Deafness hits one-in-ten

NEW YORK (AP) — About 20 million persons, or one in every 10 Americans, is partially deaf, and some 2 million hear so little that they are unable to understand normal speech, according to the National Health Education Committee.

The group says premature children and older people have the highest incidence of hearing problems. In premature births, partial deafness occurs almost seven times as frequently as in normal deliveries.

EDITOR'S NOTE — The bottom line in the criminal justice system is death — when society draws it. And more and more states are restoring capital punishment along Supreme Court guidelines. In this account, Richard Tuttle, managing editor of the Rochester Democrat and Chronicle, vividly recalls a double execution he covered in 1961.

By RICHARD TUTTLE

In the flatland of North Florida when the fog is lifting at dawn the pine trees are black against the sky.

It is cool and damp, even in August sometimes, and there is a certain alertness to it when you are 15 and camping beside the brackish creeks and the salt marshes.

Then you hear the screech of a bluejay or the song of a mockingbird. As the sun comes up, the trees are still black, but all of a sudden the first ray of sunlight strikes through the mist. The trees that were black are now bathed in red and yellow.

The color is life.

"We have to get up early," the corrections commissioner said, cutting into the thick steak on his plate. "We'll have to be there from the beginning."

We were in a restaurant in Starke, Fla., a small town which serves as a commercial center for that farming district but which mostly has one industry: Raiford Prison.

"Well, the one guy ... the first one ... he killed a cop," the commissioner said, "and the other one raped a child. So what do you do with these people. I've seen men go mad on death row; change into raging animals, crying out ... not for mercy, for death."

"I don't think it is right," I said. "Instinctively, I think it is wrong."

I had been to Raiford before to interview prisoners and once to cover a riot. I had a sense of the day-to-day mood of the place. The white buildings sitting there in open fields behind electric fences with the August sun beating down.

The warden gathered the witnesses together in the administration building along with the reporters. He said everything was calm. He led us out into the inner compound and down a crushed stone path that led to the death house, a separate white, flat building that contained the condemned and the electric chair.

The mockingbirds and bluejays were acting up, fighting and chirping in the trees off to the left. Otherwise there was no movement.

There were about 30 chairs lined up for the witnesses, all facing the electric chair, eight to 10 feet away.

A few witnesses were

HE'S ALL ALONE — A South Bronx teen-ager sits locked alone in a cell of the Old Tombs jail in New York City, experiencing firsthand the feeling of lost freedom. The youngster was part of a group experiencing a free taste of jail atmosphere in a city program aimed at heading off youth crime before it starts.

Youth crime is continuing unabated—

Most experts agree that the best answer to crime is prevention — a way somehow to intervene in young lives before they become committed to crime. But how far can society go?

"We know that most of the offenders we deal with have not come from stable family backgrounds," Carlson says. "It doesn't matter if it's an impoverished black kid from a ghetto family in New York, or a wealthy kid from the suburbs of Milwaukee who lived near a golf course. The lack of family solidarity is responsible for most of the social breakdown in this country."

But he would not break in on the family and take the child away to more stable situations. "I grew up in a time when we talked of boys' and girls' homes. I don't think that's any better and might be even more disastrous than letting them grow up in a family situation. At least they have some contact with a real mother or fa-

Halloween came every night in Washington

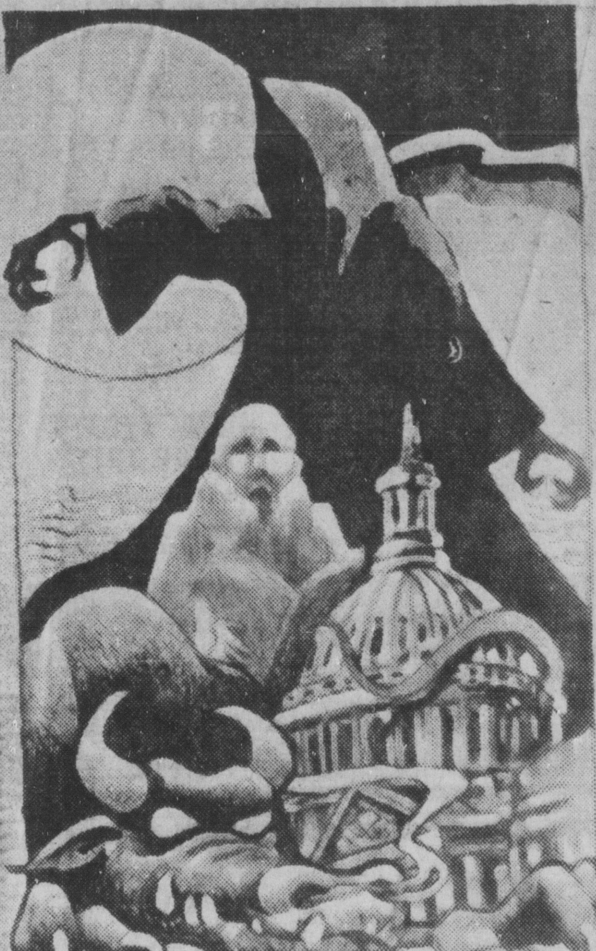
WASHINGTON (AP) — A gigantic cat prowls stately halls. Brick walls yield muffled scraping. Phantom footsteps echo. And the ghost of Mr. Twine keeps stamping, stamping, stamping ....

Journey back, if you dare on this day before Halloween, to the Capitol's gaslit era. Then, Halloween came every night and even between elections members of Congress ran scared.



The Capitol, said an 1890s paper, is "probably the most thoroughly haunted building in the world" with "not less than 15 well-authenticated ghosts infesting it."

And nervelessly it pointed out the Demon Cat, the Walled-Up Workman, the Solitary Stroller and the ghosts of John Quincy Adams and Civil War Gen. John Alexander Logan.

The Demon Cat was a Poesque puss that patrolled the corridor near the unused tomb of George Washington. Kittensized when first sighted, it swelled into a fierce, fire-spitting monster, emitted a horrendous yowl and sprang. Luckily, it always missed its terrified intended victim, then vanished. The Cat was said to be the last of the feline brigade once recruited to battle the Capitol's rat population.

Statuary Hall is spooky enough at night with its row of silent, stone figures of the men who once walked these halls as living lawmakers. But crossing the hall was a chilling task when John Quincy Adams' footsteps sounded close behind. The ex-president died in this hall when it was the House chamber, and his restless ghost returned for decades.

The Solitary Stroller paced his beat in the basement beneath the House. Erect, with a great moustache, his hands were invariably clasped behind him, said those who saw him. Some thought him to be a foreigner in the diplomatic service; others, the ghost of Pierre L'Enfant, the designer of the capital. His expression was variously described as melancholy, serious, and friendly and smiling.

Mr. Twine worked for the Library of Congress, stamping books with a mixture of alcohol and lampblack in an office resembling a large iron cage. Twine's ghost kept revisiting his office long after the library moved from the Capitol basement. When guards heard rubber meeting flyleaf, they knew Twine was back at his old stamping ground.

The Walled-Up Workman was thought to be a laborer

From the 'Golden Era'

Old film buff bases career on 'nostalgia'

COLUMBUS, Ohio (AP) — The lights dim, the tinkle of a piano begins, the credits flicker, and Rudolph Valentino again gallops across the desert sands.

For those old enough to remember, it is a nostalgic return to the early 1900s, the golden era of silent films.

For those too young to remember how Valentino thrilled movie audiences with his portrayal of the Sheik, or Buster Keaton's antics in "The General," it is a lesson on movies in their infancy.

Sending the old, the not-so-old and the young back to these beginnings is how Bob Verbeck makes his living.

Verbeck, a piano and organ player for silent-screen stars as a teen-ager in Neenah, Wis., now shows old silent films around the country. His career has taken him to the White House, Carnegie Hall and to thousands of theaters and campuses.

Interest in early-day movies has been phenomenal in the last 20 years, he said. He has competition but says, "I believe myself to be the only original, silent-movie piano player on the circuit."

"I think the interest — nostalgia -- shows a conscious feeling on the part of the public that they're missing something — that life is not as good, not as romantic, not as much fun and not as exciting as it was then," he said. "Today's casual social attitude is not as much fun as they first thought. We've all got to have a dreamland in our lives such as romance, idealism."

Verbeck shows the old films at the original speed — about one-third slower than the speed adopted after 1925 for sound pictures. This eliminates the jerkiness, mistakenly associated with silent movies shown on TV and elsewhere, he said.

"For as long as I can remember — I must have been 6 or 7 years old — I've been interested in show business," said Verbeck, who began to play the piano at age 10.

"I've never had a lesson in my life and I can't read music," he said.

His break came when a piano player at the Neenah Theater allowed him to play during his lunch break. From then on, Verbeck said, he played often. "But just when I was getting into it, we moved and the talkies came in," he added.

His family moved to Columbus, where he attended Ohio State University, got a master's degree and stayed on as a sociology professor. But the lure of show business drew him back and 25 years ago he left the university to show the old films he had collected.

During the early 1900s, Verbeck said, about 200,000 silent films were made in this country. He believes fewer than 100,000 still exist.

Initially, "the old silent movies could be picked up for a song — $2 or $3 each — because they were considered worthless, a storage problem and a fire hazard," Verbeck said.

Because they were printed on highly flammable nitrate, which disintegrated quickly, many films self-destructed, rotted in their cans.

"Today, the films cost hundreds of dollars when collectors are lucky enough to find them," he said. He values most of his at $250 or more apiece. Others are priceless, either because of their rarity or their sentimental value as gifts from actors who starred in them.

One film he treasures as a gift is "Elegy," starring Tyrone Power Sr. and Ethel Wales. Miss Wales, also from Neenah, gave it to him. Another gift is a piece of film featuring the classic love scene from Valentino's "Blood and Sand" (1922), from Nita Naldi, Valentino's co-star.

Two treasures in his collection are Edison's 1894 film recording of a sneeze and an 1895 film called "Washday Trouble," which was the first ever shown to the public. Each lasts just one-half minute.

Verbeck's piano accompaniment is unobtrusive — a background to the film's action — not a performance.

Air freight users seen

WASHINGTON (AP) — The electronics industry has become the biggest single user of air freight, according to a survey by the Air Transport Association on air cargo statistics of U.S.-scheduled airlines.

The ATA said the electronics industry was followed closely by producers of printed matter, machinery parts, cut flowers and wearing apparel.

Auto parts, photographic equipment, fresh fruits and vegetables, tools and hardware, and office machines rounded out the list of the top 10 air freight commodities.

Capitol ghosts—

sealed behind masonry during construction of the Capitol. Passersby could hear the unfortunate fellow's ghost scraping with a trowel to draw attention. But it never got so bad that any walls were torn down to free him.

The Spectral Scrubber, a departed janitor, returned night after night for unpaid overtime at the expense of the flesh-and-blood cleaning force.

Terrified, the workers listened to phantom water swash and watched an invisibly guided mop glide over the floor.

A fellow worker of Mr. Twines', the Careless Cataloguer, went to his reward with about $6,000 in government bonds hidden among books in his subcellar den. For years after, he haunted the library's vaults looking vainly for the cache he'd been unable to take with him.

At exactly 12:30 a.m. nightly, the doors of the room occupied by the Senate Committee on Military and Militia silently opened. Out stepped the form of Civil War genius and statesman Gen. John Alexander Logan, recognizable by his long black mane, erect carriage and real-life hat. Known as a hard worker, Logan presumably returned to check on his committee's progress.

The biggest ghost story was probably that of a guard who claimed he witnessed a complete reconvening of the 1848 session of the House of Representives. However, the guard was found to be a part-time student who'd been studying that period of American history. His account was dismissed as a dream.

Another spectral visitor was the ghost of ex-Vice President Henry Wilson, who died in the Senate wing in 1875. According to reports, his ghost almost frightened to death a watchman guarding the coffin of a Tennessee senator lying in state in the Senate chamber.

What stopped the parade of ghosts and haunts? Perhaps the advent of electric lights and disappearance of kerosene lanterns. Perhaps the clatter of new construction drove them into hiding. And maybe helping usher them out was the closing of the Capitol bar in the 1890s.

women. The wives of guards, I guessed, and maybe some friends. They chatted quietly, almost in a whisper. The way you talk in church.

A door leading to death row opened and a priest walked in. Behind him was the cop-killer and guards.

The cop-killer swaggered over to the electric chair and sat down. He was trying to be macho. Tough.

The warden was on the phone. Had there been a reprieve? No.

The cop-killer made a short speech about the uselessness of capital punishment. He was trying to die the way he thought a man should die, trying to keep the tremor out of his voice, but his hands trembled.

After the man was strapped into the chair and the electrodes were fastened to his shaved head and his leg, the door to death row opened again and in walked a tall man wearing a black robe and a hood. He went to the electric panel behind the chair and checked the dials.

The warden nodded and the executioner turned the switch.

It smelled like burning hair.

Three trusties came into the room and took the cop-killer out of the chair and put him on a stretcher and wheeled him away.

"We shave the head so that the 23,000 volts goes right through the brain with good contact," the official had said. "We wet the sponge under the head device so the contact is complete. We hit him with the first jolt and sometimes we do it again to make sure."

Davis had been in and out of state institutions since he was 12. He was Miami's best-known sex offender but had never been committed to a mental hospital.

"They knew what I would turn out to be and they never gave me no help," Davis said in a trembling voice.

The warden nodded his head a fraction of an inch and the executioner turned the switch again.

Davis's body was thrown just inches but with tremendous force against the leather straps that held him in the chair. He was shaking and turning purple, and then a scream that is not a scream.

When the body hits the strap across the chest, air is forced out of the lungs and across paralyzed vocal chords. The sound is inhuman, the last breath. It faded away and the switch was turned off.

The doctor and the warden walked over to Davis and looked at him. He was white now, slumped in the chair. They didn't touch him. They stepped back and the warden nodded again.

This time there was no scream but they didn't turn off the switch until smoke started to rise from Davis's head.

The witnesses and reporters walked out of the room into a blast of heat and stillness. The August sun was pounding down hard on Raiford. The prison compound was still deserted.

The bluejays and the mockingbirds had gone.

Women alone: facing life's uncertainties with new perspective

When a mate dies, a woman loses interest

By JON MORRIS
PB Staff Writer

The woman had just returned from her husband's funeral — but she rubbed her eyes. There he was, sitting in the living room.

"She was hallucinating," said Dr. Howard Schuman, an Upland psychologist, in describing one of the many problems facing widows in the United States.

Granted, the case may be rare but the pain of losing their husbands can cause women to do many things they might not normally do, says Schuman. "When a mate dies, the woman loses interest in evething because her main interest was her husband."

One of every eight women in this country is a widow. Out of nearly 85 million females in the U.S. in 1976, more than 10 million had buried their husbands.

That figure represents an increase of about 400,000 from the 9,600,000 widows reported by the Census Bureau in 1970.

The rise in the number of widows is due mainly to the greater number of women who live to older ages, and the fact most women outlive their spouses, experts say.

Husbands have the pressures of earning a living, and their hearts give out sooner, according to the Rev. Don Keepers, associate pastor of the Pilgrim Congregational Church in Pomona.

Mr. Keepers expects the trend to change a bit in the future, however, because of the advent of women's lib. With more women working, they are facing more pressures than before, he noted. "So there might be more widowers in future years."

Widows, however, outnumbered widowers by more than 5 to 1 in 1976 according to the Census Bureau. There were less than two million widowers compared to more than 10 million widows.

Remarriage rates are substantially higher among widowers than widows — which is another problem facing women without husbands.

The median age for widows has risen to 71.1, which may be one reason the widows are not remarrying as often as widowers. Most widows are at least 55 years old, Census Bureau statistics show.

And many of them share the same problems, according to Schuman, who has had a number of widows come to him as patients.

"One of the most common problems is loneliness," said Schuman in a recent interview. "Along with loneliness is the feeling of inadequacy, or worthlessness. Some people enjoy solitude, but others panic. Those who were dependent on their husbands will suffer the most during widowhood."

Various other problems of widows range from sexual to handling children (among younger widows) to utter grief and abandonment by friends who are married, says Schuman.

Widows often are told to seek out other men for companionship, but Schuman noted that they resist it. "They say they're not interested in going to bars. They'll say 'All men want the same thing.'"

Schuman indicated he's had patients whose loneliness is compounded by depression and withdrawal — and guilt. "They have the feeling they could have prevented the husband's death. If he was sick, they figure they should have gotten to the hospital on time."

If the woman starts dating soon after the husband's death, and she has children, they will resent it, said Schuman. "The son might be almost ready to murder his mother. He feels she hasn't been true to his father's memory."

And some women can't accept the fact their husbands are dead. The case of the woman who returned from the funeral to "see" her husband sitting in the living room is a prime example of "blocking it out."

Mr. Keepers said that many widows seek the church out for comfort in their time of loneliness. He noted that he was worked with many younger widows who have children.

"They have terrible fright at being left alone with kids. Some had never worked before, and now they have to find their own way."

The problem is that many widows don't want to burden friends with their sorrows, said Schuman.

"But if I was giving advice to a widow, I'd say take advantage of friends. One shouldn't worry about bringing troubles out in the open. Widows should not isolate themselves."

WOMEN ALONE WITH CHILDREN

Women without husbands and children without fathers comprise a sizeable portion of the current valley population. Statistics show that 1 of each 8 women in the country has buried her husband. Most of the women have passed their 45th birthdays, but many have not.

Her new role—father on weekdays and mother on weekends . . .

By TONY AULT
PB Staff Writer

Mrs. Marta Escobar, 39, of Cucamonga has a "deal" with her five children. On weekdays she is "father" and on weekends she is "mother."

Her deal with her children came quite unexpectedly on Feb. 22, 1969 in a La Puente supermarket. She and her husband of 12 years, Oscar Escobar, were walking down the aisle when he suddenly collapsed at her feet. Mr. Escobar, a civil engineer for the California Highway Department and an emigrant to the United States, died a short time later in a hospital of what doctors said was a brain hemorrhage.

That same day Mrs. Escobar became one of an estimated 10.7 million widows residing in the United States, or one of every eight women in the country who have buried a husband.

Admittedly "confused and frightened," Mrs. Escobar gathered up her five young charges, Eric, then 18 months; Carolyn, 5; Mario, 8; Ingrid and Marta, 13, and took them home.

Although their dreams of a bigger house and eight children were shattered, Mrs. Escobar, despite a lack of vocational skills and a command of the English language, knew it would be her responsibility alone to provide a home and rear her children. Mrs. Escobar said, "I never told them, but I was scared to death."

She explained that in the first months that followed the death of her husband her main difficulty was adjusting to the reality that her husband was gone.

"The first six months were hard for everyone. Eric cried and cried for his father. The other children were extremely quiet."

She recalled how the family's financial needs seemed to have been taken care of because Mr. Escobar had "good insurance and benefits. It was a good plan."

But, she said she had turned her families financial affairs over to a trusted relative and "in less than a year it was all gone." She said the relative and a friend of his had spent the entire benefit package.

She said things were so bad at one time she packed up her entire family and went to San Francisco for three weeks "so we could forget."

She said, "It was the best thing that ever happened."

It was during this time that Mrs. Escobar struck up the deal with her children. "It was understood that on weekdays I would be the father, and that on the weekends I would be the mother — doing all the housework and cooking." She said, "The children accepted it. They were wonderful."

Mrs. Escobar, having resolved the family's initial adjustment problems, then set to work. "I went to school for key punch classes. I began looking for work, but found none. My English was so poor, and I didn't even know how to drive a car."

She said she finally graduated from the key punch school and found a job and went to work at a Whittier computer firm. But, she said, she soon was out of work again and started school again.

Meanwhile, Mrs. Escobar said she had applied for and began receiving assistance from Aid to Dependent Children. The assistance helped her in feeding the children, making the house payments and returning to school.

She said in the next few years she worked at various firms, "learning everything I could."

"I really needed to learn," she said.

During that time, Mrs. Escobar said that other unexpected problems cropped up. She had to quit work for more than two months when she learned that Caroline needed major surgery and would be placed in a full-body cast for the time and would need constant care. Later, she said, she had to have major surgery.

She said after her surgery, she happened to apply for a job with thg Los Angeles Department of Social Services as a clerk-typist after passing a civil service examination.

Finally, she was transferred to the Los Angeles District Attorney's office, where only a week ago she learned she had passed a promotion test and would likely become an investigator.

Mrs. Escobar said that during the past eight years, "I haven't had much time to be lonely. I had to bring the children up and get them working." She said that often she had to give her older children "a little push so they wouldn't give up."

She said that she has had little time to think about remarrying. "I will just leave that to God. It it comes, it comes," she said philosophically.

"I'm pretty lucky and pretty grateful. It just takes a lot of courage and being pretty stubborn . . . and a whole lot of pride.

Mrs. Escobar recently moved into a new, two-story house but not without difficulty. She said she received word her loan had been approved, but later the bank said she was ineligible. She managed to come up with some extra money and regain the loan.

"What made me mad, the bank told me my loan had not gone through after I had moved into my home," she said.

Now she is hoping that Mario, a good student, will receive a scholarship so he can continue his education. After that she would like to become a citizen. "That would be wonderful."

Mrs. Escobar said, "I knew at the beginning that we had to finish what my husband and I had started. And . . . we will."

Learning to survive after a great loss

Three generations of widows face life alone

By CONRAD CASLER
PB Staff Writer

ANNIE OAKLEY . . . WIDOWED IN 1915

HELEN HARDY

Mrs. Oakley was widowed in 1915 after seven years of marriage to a doctor in Porterville. Mrs. Hardy became a widow in 1950 after eight years of marriage.

Another member of the family, Mrs. Oakley's mother and Mrs. Hardy's grandmother, lived with the family 30 years as a widow before she died in 1945 at the age of 84.

Mrs. Oakley now is 94 and recovering from a broken hip she suffered last month. She expects to be out of her wheelchair and walking again by Christmas.

Mrs. Oakley and her husband-to-be attended nursing and medical school together in New York. They were married in Los Angeles in 1908 after Dr. Oakley had practiced in Porterville two years where he had relatives.

The newlyweds settled in Porterville where their three daughters were born. Mrs. Hardy is the middle daughter with Virginia, now living in Palo Alto with her husband, the oldest and Eleanor, living with her husband in Chillicothe, Ohio, the youngest.

Dr. Oakley was a general practitioner in Central California his entire brief career.

"He was a wonderful man," Mrs. Oakley said. "He would drive out to a farm or anywhere at any time of the day or night. He just worked himself to death."

Mrs. Oakley never practiced as a registered nurse. She did accompany her husband when he made house calls to outlying farms and Indian reservations. "I got what I wanted out of nursing school . . . a husband," she said.

"We always had a high wheeled automobile so we could ford streams. There were no paved roads than and few bridges," she said.

Oldest daughter Virginia was sent to Pomona College from Porterville and spent two years in the dormitory there before Mrs. Oakley moved to Claremont with her other two daughters when Mrs. Hardy entered Pomona College. For one year, all three daughters were Pomona College students together.

Mrs. Oakley never took a job after her husband's death, but concentrated on raising her girls.

Mrs. Hardy worked as a physiotherapist in Santa Barbara and San Luis Obispo during her marriage, but stopped practicing her vocation after her husband's death to raise her son, now 34, and daughter, now 28.

She now works part-time at Honnold Library on the Claremont Colleges campus. Two years ago she moved in with her mother as Mrs. Oakley's advancing years began to slow her somewhat. Mrs. Hardy still owns her home in Claremont.

Mrs. Oakley almost remarried before moving to Claremont but her fiance was killed in an auto crash.

Mrs. Hardy, a widow 27 years, said of remarriage, the main thing a young widow with children should look for is a man who would be a good stepfather to her children.

"It's important for children to have a devoted stepfather, if a mother remarries," she said.

She also believes it is important for a widow who does not remarry to stay at home and devote her time to rearing her children.

Opinion
Pomona, California ■ Sunday, October 30, 1977

We can learn from history

Years ago, when the Metropolitan Water District was formed to bring Colorado River water to Southern California the Pomona Valley passed up an opportunity to become part of the district and share in the imported water supply. Local citizens were of the opinion at that time that there was no need locally for additional water supplies. It seemed to be a prudent decision at that time. Years later many of those same citizens wished they had joined the MWD at the start.

As the valley grew in the post World War II period, it became apparent that the need for water was outstripping local well water sources. Thus, the Pomona Valley Municipal Water District was formed and citizens of Pomona Valley voted overwhelmingly in 1950 to annex to the MWD. It was costly, however, since the newly formed Pomona Valley Municipal Water District was required to pay into the MWD over a period of years whatever amount it would have paid had it joined when the MWD was formed. We are still paying for it.

The upcoming PVMWD water bond measure appears to us to be a repetition of history. Present facilities for providing imported water for Pomona and eight surrounding communities are fast becoming inadequate and need to be replaced and in some cases expanded to meet future demands.

Pomona Valley Municipal Water District spends about $200,000 a year for electric power to pump water uphill from its treatment plant in north Pomona to supply the needs of water users in Glendora, San Dimas, Covina, La Verne, and Claremont. This cost is certain to go up dramatically in the coming years as the cost of energy increases. Naturally, these costs of operation are included in the cost to the consumer. By the same token, if electric costs can be reduced, savings will also accrue to the consumer.

The Pomona Valley Municipal Water District is asking for voter approval on Nov. 8 of a $26 million bond issue that in the next few years will provide for new water distribution lines, a treatment plant and storage facilities that will provide the thousands of householders in the valley with a better quality of water than they now receive.

The cost of electric power will be reduced to practically nothing because the treatment plant proposed would be built above Claremont at an elevation where the water can be distributed to the various water companies in the valley entirely by gravity flow.

Valley communities have for years pumped water from the ground, using Colorado River water supplied by the Pomona Valley Municipal Water District to augment local supplies.

We know, for instance, that the ground supplies have been overdrawn, that the quality of water is not as good as it used to be, and that dependence on imported water will be greater in the future. We know, too, that the demand for water — high quality water — will increase as the area enters a new period of population growth.

To meet the future needs of this valley, to insure that valley residents will get water when they turn on the water faucet, we must not delay in the construction of new and improved distribution facilities.

We are convinced that the project is a necessity and that a postponement, if the ballot measure is rejected by the voters, will only mean higher costs in the future, and perhaps even the possibility of water rationing down the road.

Let us not repeat the mistakes of the past regarding water development. Let us use that experience to the best advantage of every resident of this valley by voting YES on water bonds on Nov. 8. Future generations of valley residents will thank us for it.

Let the lowly brother boast in his exultation, and the rich in his humiliation, because like the flower of the grass he will pass away. — James 1:9,10.

"No man can tell whether he is rich or poor by turning to his ledger. It is the heart that makes a man rich. He is rich according to what he is, not according to what he has."Henry Ward Beecher, American clergyman.

As when a hungry man dreams he is eating and awakes with his hunger satisfied, or as when a thirsty man dreams he is drinking and awakes faint, with his thirst not quenched, so shall the multitude of all the nations be that fight against Mount Zion. — Isaiah 29:8.

It has been testified to somewhere, "What is man that thou art mindful of him, or the son of man that thou carest for him? Thou didst make him for a little while lower than the angels, thou has crowned him with glory and honor." — Hebrews 1:6,7.

Two types of arbitration

Dear Editor:

Two articles recently appearing in the Progress Bulletin are, I believe, in need of clarification. One appeared on Sept. 27, bylined by Phyllis Cannon (Labor Council Will Boycott Fund-Raiser for Ayala); the other appeared Oct. 4 and quoted Steve Edwards, president of the California Teachers Association. Both related, generally, to arbitration.

There are two types of arbitration. First, if the parties attempting to negotiate a contract reach a stalemate and other efforts to resolve differences fail, they could agree to submit the issues to arbitration and agree to be bound by the decision of the arbitrator — this is termed "interest" arbitration. Second, if the parties to negotiations consummate an agreement containing a grievance procedure which has as the final step of the grievance process binding arbitration that is termed "rights" arbitration.

SB 164, referred to in Mrs. Cannon's article, related to "interest" arbitration. Its purpose was (is) to provide a realistic method of settling disputes which reach an impasse stage in negotiations between public agencies and their uniformed services (police and fire), and in so doing, avoid strikes by police and/or firemen. Probably few, if any, citizens condone strikes by firemen and policemen (including firemen and policemen), but if they are not to strike, some reasonable and viable alternative must be found to resolve differences in negotiations.

There are, of course, valid arguments on both sides of the issue. This association did not take a position of SB 164. Current collective bargaining law for school employees (both certified and classified) permits a binding arbitration clause ("rights" arbitration) to be negotiated into a contract. I suspect it was this type of arbitration to which CTA's Steve Edwards referred on Oct. 4.

No matter how skillfully a negotiated contract is drawn (even under the best of circumstances), differences do arise in the application and interpretation of its various clauses. (That is why a grievance procedure is included in a good contract. It provides a system for resolving problems which arise from the contract). Most problems should be and are resolved before the final step is reached, meaning arbitration. However, if a contract is to have validity, there has to be a disinterested third party (arbitrator) to decide differences which exist over contract interpretation and application.

We are opposed to "interest" arbitration (a binding decision by a third party over disputes that arise during negotiations) as relates to classified school employees. We think there are better methods of solution, BUT it may be the only real solution re police and fire personnel.

On the other hand, we believe, without reservation, that every collective agreement should contain a grievance procedure with binding arbitration as its final step. "Rights" arbitration tends to resolve issues quickly and is far less costly (to all concerned) than litigation through the courts system.

I think Sen. Ruben Ayala's comments referred to "interest" arbitration (re SB 164) and not "rights" arbitration as currently authorized (but not mandated) in law for school employees. I believe Steve Edwards' comments were, as are mine, directed toward principal support of "rights" arbitration.

Sen. Ayala correctly stated that, currently, despite the "arbitration" issue, we are supporting him.

The story of a leak

WASHINGTON — Buried in the Justice Department's musty files is the story of a leak that might have prevented the Watergate break-in.

The files reveal that the State Department in 1970 began an investigation of a Washington Star story taken from classified documents. The story was traced to the celebrated leaker, Daniel Ellsberg. But strangely, the case against him was dropped.

If Ellsberg had been prosecuted, it is unlikely he would have leaked the Pentagon Papers to the New York Times the following year. This was the leak that caused Richard Nixon, then ensconced in the White House, to form his notorious plumbers.

It was the White House plumbers, of course, who staged the Watergate break-in. Thus, the government's failure to prosecute Ellsberg in 1970 began the chain of events that led to Watergate.

To compound the irony, then-Undersecretary of State Elliot Richardson was linked to the 1970 Ellsberg leak. Richardson went on to become attorney general and then dramatically resigned in protest against Nixon's handling of the Watergate investigation.

Here are the fascinating details: The Washington Star story, revealing dates and details from classified State Department cables, told in terms favorable to Richardson how he was trying to free a persecuted South Vietnamese assemblyman.

The leak was traced to a trusted Richardson aide, Charles M. Cooke Jr., who slipped the documents to Daniel Ellsberg, who was then working in Richardson's office. This came to the attention of the Pentagon's dogged chief investigator, W. Donald Stewart, during one of many investigations of us.

'During the course of a series of Jack Anderson leaks in February-May, 1971," Stewart reported in a memo, "I came across Cooke's name . . . I reviewed his State Department security file and learned that he had been identified as the person who allowed Daniel Ellsberg of the Rand Corporation to review highly classified information."

No disciplinary action had been taken against Cooke for the security breach. Thereafter, Stewart himself went to the Justice Department. This resulted in the criminal investigation.

Cooke admitted under intense questions that he gave Ellsberg access to the classified information and that Ellsberg undoubtedly was responsible for the leak.

"I talked to Richardson immediately and said, 'I'm pretty sure, 99 percent sure, that Ellsberg was the guy who leaked the stuff,'" Cooke confessed to Justice Department attorneys.

"What action was taken against Ellsberg?" demanded the attorneys.

"It just sort of fell into limbo at the time," he replied. "Nobody did anything that I know of. Richardson, I know, had discussed the case with (then-Secretary of State William) Rogers a couple of times."

If Rogers and Richardson had not left the case in "limbo," history probably would have been different.

Footnote: Rogers told us he had "no recollection" of any talks with Richardson about the leak. If he had been informed of the leak, he would have referred it to the Justice Department, he said. Richardson's memory was vague, too, but he said he was sure Cooke's version was correct.● Cooke confirmed the Justice Department account, saying the Richardson-Rogers talk had occurred "within a week" after the leak. Stewart, now retired, has just finished a book called "Leaks." He is "almost sure," he told us, that the Pentagon Papers leak could have been prevented if earlier action had been taken against Ellsberg.

Water in the gas tank

I must preface this with a personal note because I am going to be talking up something in which I have a vested personal interest -- hydrogen power.

I am an investor, albeit a small one, in a company which is operating buses — and will soon market automobiles — using water in the gas tank.

I am similarly excited about the potential for several other energy options, but on this one I've put my money where my mouth is and it's only fair that you know that.

Roger Billings of Billings Energy Corp. in Provo, Utah, has converted 21 passenger buses to run on water.

The hydrogen and oxygen in the H2O are separated electrically.

And the company is presently modifying 10 subcompact cars with dual fuel systems — hydrogen or gasoline at the flick of a switch. And these cars will be sold to the general public for the kind of "uncontrolled road testing" which must be the final test of anything this innovative.

From what is learned from these first 10 cars another hundred will be built late next year.

And that's not all. A hydrogen-powered homestead is now in operation, first phase of a hydrogen-powered village.

The modern farmhouse is completely powered by hydrogen. Also the lawn, garden and farm implements burn pollution-free hydrogen.

While the government's only energy program to date has emphasized slowing down, using less, conserving, curtailing — scientists engaged in hydrogen research are excited about its limitless potential.

The hydrogen buses now in operation in Utah generate no pollution. The air coming out of a hydrogen vehicle is cleaner than the air going in. The only byproduct is water vapor. And these buses promise to carry passengers profitably at 25 cents.

The city of Riverside, Calif., is next in line for hydrogen buses on regular runs.

Why buses first? Because not every gas station has hydrogen fuel — yet.

The Energy Research and Development Administration has affirmed the safety factor. You can run a hose from the exhaust pipe into the closed passenger compartment — safely.

So the only "if" in the outlook for this particular fuel is availability.

Gasification of coal is a practical and economical source of hydrogen.

Billings is convinced that hydrogen pumps will appear at service stations as did gasoline 50 years ago — necessarily gradually.

Innovative, imaginative Americans will do what they have to do.

And of the several optional energy forms, hydrogen presently seems to offer the most advantages for the most purposes with the least investment.

Cashing in on the canal issue

WASHINGTON — (NEA) — Although party moderates remain deeply uneasy over the Sept. 30 vote of the Republican National Committee condemning the new Panama Canal treaties, GOP leaders have wasted no time cashing in on the action.

On the strength of the resolution adopted by the national committee in New Orleans, Ronald Reagan has lent his name and his considerable drawing power to a GP fund-raising letter pegged to the canal issue.

The appeal which was mailed Oct. 21 to some 450,000 potential contributors, represents the Republican party's first attempt to capitalize on the anti-treaty sentiment which is proving such a gold mine for right-wing groups outside the party structure.

With the aid of direct mail wizard Richard Viguerie, a plethora of conservative organizations have been raking in hundreds of thousands of dollars by playing on the Panama Canal issue.

Now the Republican National Committee hopes to do likewise with the help of Reagan, who virtually created the issue last year during his hard-fought primary battle against former President Gerald Ford.

In his letter, Reagan is asking for $2 million in contributions to "defeat those Democrats who vote time and again to support actions that weaken our national security."

Ironically, GOP Chairman Bill Brock had done his best in New Orleans to head off an official party denunciation of the Canal treaties. But conservatives on the national committee prevailed.

Both the New Orleans vote and the Reagan letter create awkward problems for Ford, who staunchly supports the treaties, and for Senate Minority Leader Howard H. Baker Jr., who will be bucking the official party line if he ultimately votes for ratification.

Yet neither man objected to the Reagan fund-raising appeal, apparently believing the GOP's need for money outweighed any personal embarrassment.

And indeed, the Republicans have been hurting financially. As of Oct. 3, the national committee had raised only $6.8 million of its targeted $10.5 million budget for 1977.

Some of the party's fund-raising difficulties have been caused by the success of independent conservative groups, including Reagan's own Citizens for the Republic, in grabbing off donations that might otherwise have gone to GOP organizations and candidates.

But Reagan is being careful to stay within the GOP fold. He is holding off on a Panama Canal fund-raising pitch for his own Citizens for the Republic until after the appeal for the Republican party is well under way.

Furthermore, Reagan has steadfastly refused to step outside the party structure in order to lead a conservative charge on the canal issue, annoying some of his erstwhile supporters by his caution.

The national GOP will be indebted to both Reagan and Ford if it winds up reaching its budget target this year. A mid-September fund-raising letter from Ford, stressing a whole array of "critical issues" apart from the Panama Canal, has proven unexpectedly successful.

The Ford appeal, like the Reagan letter, was mailed to about 450,000 potential donors and had produced over $800,000 in contributions by mid-October, an extraordinary return.

It isn't easy, considering the tensions of last year's primary battle, to keep both Ford and Reagan — and their respective backers — under the same umbrella.

But with some fancy footwork, Brock may yet pull it off — to the financial benefit of the entire Republican party.

Psychologists are now in agreement. There IS such a thing as female intuition. And one of the reasons women have this ability, those experts say, is because females are more sensitive to nonverbal communication. Well, maybe so, maybe so! But sensitive though they may be, imagine how frustrated they would become if they actually had to communicate nonverbally.

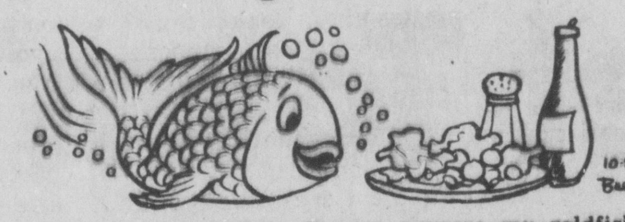
Salad good for goldfish



DEAR DR. MILLER: Do you suppose my goldfish, Gorgeous George, ever needs a salad? I never feed him any. — J.N.

DEAR J.N.: Since goldfish are omniverous, George should do best when greens are available. While spinach is one source, an even better one is bright green, healthy anacharis (available from many aquarium supply stores). He'll munch on a bunch if you simply drop it in his tank.

DEAR DR. MILLER: Poor little Joey. The doctor tells me he has a tumor in the abdomen and wants to operate. In a case like this, does a little parakeet ever have a chance? — L.T.

DEAR L.T.: Skilled veterinary surgeons do successfully remove abdominal tumors from parakeets though, obviously, there is considerable risk involved. The bird's age, general condition, and the type and extent of the tumor are all vital factors. If surgery is to be successful it must be done early.

DEAR DR. MILLER: If only you could see Toy San now. She is not that scroungy, destructive little puppy we first wrote you about. She has developed into a handsome dog and, most importantly, the obedience and training work you recommended have made her mannerly and a joy to have around. Many thanks for encouraging us to stick with her during those early trying times. — S.S.

DEAR S.S.: While I wouldn't encourage the seeking and selection of puny, problem puppies, those who already have one can usually rehabilitate it. Physical rehabilitation can be accomplished with a veterinarian's help and undesirable behavior patterns can often be erased with patient, persistent and knowledgeable training. Thereby, psychological rehabilitation of sorts can be accomplished, too, over a period of time. Remember, though, it's enough of a challenge to raise a well-mannered, well-behaved puppy who has a desirable background and temperament. It is an increasingly greater challenge (and one that often meets with frustration) to even cope, let alone completely remold, those early behavior patterns which are partially or completely undesirable.

The more visible the better

Dear Ann Landers: Our 16-year-old daughter is a nervous wreck and my husband is so burned up he can't see straight. Three weeks ago someone started the ugly rumor that Janet is pregnant.

There is absolutely no truth to this vicious story but once something like this gets loose, it's impossible to trace it — or stop it. Janet wants to change schools. She says everyone stares a hole through her and she just dies when she sees them whispering behind her back.

My husband feels we should go to the principal and ask for permission to transfer her to a school on the other side of town. Janet would prefer to leave the city and stay with her married sister who has a nice home about 70 miles from here. We await your counsel. — Dayton Parents

Dear Parents: The best way to prove the story is a lie is to have Janet stay right where she is — and maintain a perfect attendance record. To allow her to leave town in order to run from the gossip would suggest that it might be true. The more visible and active and cheerful she is, the better — and the same holds true for you, her parents.

Dear Ann Landers: My mother-in-law died recently and left my husband a few acres of worthless land. There's an old rundown shack on the property. No one has lived in it for at least 20 years.

My husband has the bright idea that he wants to have the shack "remodeled" into a summer home so we can rent it out as income property. If you saw this place you wouldn't believe it. It should be torn down. I've tried to explain this to him but he says he'll do a lot of the work himself. (In a pig's eye he will. I'm still waiting for him to fix our roof that has been leaking for two years.)

If he goes ahead with this project it will cost a fortune. When you remodel anything it always costs twice as much as you thought it would. Please say something, Ann. He thinks you are smart because you write a column. I am dumb because I am only — A Wife

Dear Wife: Your husband should contact a construction expert and ask for an estimate on the remodeling job. When he hears what it will cost he'll probably shut his mouth. And if you're smart, you'll let the expert do all the talking.

Dear Ann: We love those "regional" versions of that old song, "Does Your Chewing Gum Lose Its Flavor on the Bedpost Overnight?" The South, North, Midwest, and West was represented, but not the East. Here's one that was popular when we spent summers at Bungalow County in Monticello, New York. — P.J. From Brooklyn

Does Your chewing gum lose its flavor
On the bedpost overnight?
When you mother says, 'Don't chew it!'
Do you swallow it for spite?
Can you catch it on your tonsils
Does your chewing gum lose its flavor
On the bedpost overnight?

Dear P.J.: Now that all parts of the country have been heard from, this winds it up. So help me!

Why Halloween was canceled

This column is an apology to the children of the '70s on what happened to Halloween.

Because this is a generation conceived after the Tonight Show, born during a commercial, educated by a big yellow bird, and has Baretta as a night light, I will explain it in language they can understand, Television.

I am saddened to inform you, kiddies, that Halloween has been canceled due to poor ratings and a preponderance of sex and violence.

One of the original holidays, it has enjoyed high ratings for 66,304 weeks. (Second only to Christmas and "Roots".)

The holiday, an ASD (All Saint's Day) Production, was originally created to focus attention on fun and games. (Like a Gong Show with taste). Little children would dress up like witches, ghosts, and goblins and roam the streets at night, then rush up to a door and yell, "Trick Or Treat." In keeping with the game, the person answering the door would opt for a treat and give them an apple or a piece of candy. Then they would try to guess who was behind the mask.

In the '50s, Halloween got the "Cher" touch. It became more elaborate, costumes became more sensational, and I opened my door to one group who were choreographed. The little bags gave way to pillow cases and the patter of little feet on the porch to track shoes. It was like a greed Olympics. Cars and buses would bring in kids from all over the city and dump them into plats. Olders dominated the night. Some of them had mustaches that tickled their masks.

In the '60s, the critics did a number on Halloween, as did sickies who put razor blades in apples and drugs in the candy, and Halloween fell out of its primetime spot and into daytime programming. It lost a lot of its audience and those who wanted to roam the darkness were at the mercy of parental discretion. Charlie's Angels couldn't have protected the little people. (The bionic dog? Maybe.)

Holidays are a ratings game. Few of them have the clout to name their own day. Many have been delegated to Mondays where they compete with Monday Night football. The cancelation of Halloween should never have happened. We, as a people, should have been so outraged that a small band of of people could take away an imaginative fun day for children that we would have fought to keep it.

I, for one . . . apologize.

Exercise may aid leg veins

DEAR DR. LAMB — I suffer from varicose veins and so was very interested in your column about them. I found out the hard way what standing without support can do. I got a mild case of phlebitis after doing it one New Year's Eve.

I want to know if a person with varicose veins should jog. I would like to take up jogging — not to excess, but 15 minutes to half an hour a day on the grass or a thick carpet. Jumping rope is another activity I would like to start to increase circulation and the strength of my feet.

As varicose veins are inherited in my family but not in my husband's are there any precautions I should take with my 9-year-old daughter to prevent her from suffering from this condition? She loves gymnastics.

DEAR READER — The point everyone with varicose veins needs to understand is that when you work the muscles in the legs they contract against the deep veins in the legs. This milks the blood up toward the heart. Exercise involving the legs actually decreases the pressure of blood in the veins in the legs.

As long as the deep veins are working properly exercise may even help empty the surface veins you can see over the legs.

By contrast, if you stand still there is nothing to milk the veins empty and the blood pools under pressure. This increased pressure tends to stretch the elastic veins in the legs. That is why standing is hard on veins but walking or jogging is not.

Of course you can jog if your physical status is otherwise normal. Start gradually, though, not because of your varicose veins but to avoid discomfort and muscle soreness. I'm not as enthusiastic about jumping rope unless you are already in good shape and know how to do it without jarring the feet too hard. An inexperienced rope jumper can damage the bones in the feet and it will not make the feet stronger. I'll vote for a jogging program for you instead.

I am sending you The Health Letter number 5-8, Varicose Veins, to give you a better understanding of what causes varicose veins, how to prevent them and how to manage them if you already have them. In some cases, but not all, surgery is indicated. Others who want this issue can send 50 cents with a long, stamped, self-addressed envelope for it to me in care of this newspaper, P.O. Box 1551, Radio City Station, New York, NY 10019.

Yes, varicose veins often occur in families. The best thing you can do is prevent the veins from being overstretched. Think of them like a rubber balloon. If you stretch them too much too often they become like overstretched sacks.

The way to prevent overstretching is to provide support outside the leg. That is why I think anyone who has to stand long hours for any reason should have some support. This is also a good idea during pregnancy. The developing baby creates pressure on the veins and causes them to become overfilled. However, unless you already have severe varicose veins you do not need to wear support hose as a preventive measure during exercise. Your daughter might need support if she ever takes a standing job or during pregnancy. Never wear anything tight around the thigh that impedes the emptying of the veins either. Other than these measures there isn't much you can do to prevent varicose veins.

DEAR DR. LAMB — You recommended that women past the menopause should get a least 1000 milligrams (1 gram) of calcium a day. I try to eat foods that contain a large amount of calcium but I am one of those who cannot tolerate dairy products. I'm 58, in the age group you mentioned, and I don't want to start having softening of the spine. I was diagnosed as having a spastic colon years ago and have a severe gas problem.

I am wondering if it is wise to take calcium with magnesium as a supplement. We have a water softener and I understand these chemicals are lost.

I am in a quandry about the supplement and had stopped taking them for fear I could be getting more than I need by taking three a day.

DEAR READER — There is nothing wrong with taking a calcium supplement. Some of the various preparations are irritating to the digestive system and others are not. A frequently overlooked source of advice on a good supplement preparation is your neighborhood pharmacist. He may be able to help you choose one that is good for you.

You wouldn't get enough calcium in your water, even without the softener to really solve your problem. You may find that you can use uncreamed cottage cheese. It contains far less lactose than ordinary milk and you may be able to build it into your diet without causing you to have digestive problems.

There was nothing wrong with South's three-notrump contract except it turned out that South didn't come close to making it.

After the spade lead he could be sure of nine tricks if he could bring in four clubs without letting East into the lead. Hence, he should have played a low club from dummy at trick two and finessed in his hand. Back to the board with the ace of clubs and a second finesse to bring in all five clubs.

Instead, he led the ace to guard against a possible singleton queen in the West hand. Not that a club trick won by West would hurt South. West could not lead a spade successfully.

Anyway, South played the club ace, finessed the second club, played the king of clubs and jack of clubs. East took his queen, led a spade and it was bingo time.

Before a hundred readers write in to tell us that South could still make his contract after misplaying the clubs, we know that he could have done just that.

He should simply cash the red ace-kings and throw West in with the seven of hearts. West could take whatever hearts he still held, but would then have to play a spade and give South a trick with the queen.

'Supplier' best for marriage

By R. CLIFF WATERS
Marriage and Family Counselor

One primary purpose of marriage is to satisfy a basic human need: the need for the security of affection, companionship, "belonging." Marriages cannot, however, be held together merely by the pressures of law, religion and society. Marital stability depends on the cohesive power of an inner harmony between husband and wife which is built on mutual love and comradeship.

So many people today are convinced that marriage is dead. Their dissatisfaction with marriage is very real. It is not just the cry of the young who believe in "free love" and who are sure you can't really know if you are in love with another unless you have lived together first, or some caught up in the women's liberation movement.

Just about one out of every two marriages in California this year will end in divorce. So, to many, there is abundant evidence all about us that the institution of marriage is defunct.

I am often asked to supply a prescription for keeping a marriage healthy. A good marriage is established in love, but it is sustained only as that love develops and is given expression in a special pattern of relationship. Mark Twain, in one of his mellower moods, put it this way: "Love seems the swiftest, but is the slowest of all growths. No man or woman really knows what perfect love is until they have been married a quarter of a century." That may be a bit extravagant, but it does reflect a significant truth.

A young man or a young woman will have great difficulty making a good marriage if he or she approaches it as a consumer of love, not a supplier. So often I hear that he or she was looking for "someone to make me happy, someone to satisfy me, someone to serve my aims and yearnings."

Alfred Adler, one of the pioneers of modern psychology, said this about marriage: "Each partner must be more interested in the other than in himself or herself. That is the only basis on which love and marriage can be successful."

An Rx for a healthy marriage: Express affection and appreciation to one another day in and day out. This is the most effective technique for smoothing the rough edges of marriage.

A good marriage is made by two people, who, motivated and directed by love for one another, establish and sustain their marriage on a foundation of such respect and trust and concern for one another that it cannot be shattered by all the buffetings and menaces and challenges which come to every marriage.

EDITOR'S NOTE — A group of Associated Press executives and directors recently toured Chin for 16 days. The trip started in Peking, went north to the farmland of Inner Mongolia, and then back south through Peking, Shanghai and other cities in the south, leading finally to the exit point in Canton. Following are some items from the notebook of one of the travelers, the executive editor and vice president of AP.

By L. D. BOCARDI

PEKING (AP) — China is different, that's all. In every way. And once you get that into your consciousness, things begin to fall into place better and you stop wasting your time being surprised.

The differences started to appear soon after our plane, a four-engine jet belonging to the Chinese national airline CAAC, took off from Tokyo.

A stewardess, dressed in the same plain white, open-collared shirt and gray trousers we would see as a virtual Chinese uniform, came down the aisle and offered packages of candy, gum, a cup of tea and a fan to each passenger.

Then, our first brush with "rules": "It is forbidden to use a camera, binoculars or a radio while flying over the territory of the People's Republic of China."

The announcements all started with a crisp "Passengers." No relaxed "Ladies and Gentlemen" for this crew.

Toward the end of the four-hour flight, three minutes before touchdown in Peking, Chinese martial music clicked on the airplane sound system. We hit the runway in Peking with a song about Chairman Mao in our ears and his portrait looking down from the terminal wall.

Even the cabin crew's send-off would be different. "Goodbye, everybody, and may you all be successful in life and work," one of the attendants said.

Street Scene

Still not adjusted to the 12-hour time difference from home in New York, we wake up at 5 a.m. and look out on the main street outside the Peking Hotel, where foreign visitors are regularly lodged.

Already the bicycles are starting. Soon the trickle becomes a flood as Chinese ride their black bicycles to work 20 or so abreast in a stream that continues for hours.

Because the bicycle is THE means of street transportation, the infrequent auto is the interloper. As a sometime bike rider at home, I'm a minority against the motorized masses. Here, in our compact government-owned sedans, it's the bikers who hold sway.

During the 16 days, we stayed in six hotels. In only one — the Peking — did we have a room key. And there, when we went out, we just hung it on a numbered hook on a rack at the elevator.

We left money, cameras and other valuables in the rooms. Nothing was ever taken.

Before the trip, we had been told not to worry about figuring out the cost of our purchases in yuan, the local currency. Just hold out your cash in your hand and the clerks will take what they need.

FACES OF CHINA

Once I figured out the money, I tried it a few times, feigning confusion. A clerk would peel off big yuan and little yuan. They never made a mistake and never took more than they were supposed to.

When we asked about crime, we were told that there is some in the cities but it was impossible for us to make any real assessment.

We found it virtually impossible to lose anything.

At the airport in Kweilin, one of our guides produced a hanger with a damp yellow washcloth on it. Someone left it at the hotel, he said. Then the forgetful one claimed it.

Our hosts either did not notice, or perhaps were too polite to mention, that it had been taken from the hotel we had stayed in in Tokyo.

Courtesy

The courtesy and hospitality which mark the Chinese handling of a visiting American group such as ours are extraordinary.

Someone in the group mentions that he has a sore throat. Minutes later one of our translator-guides is at his side with medicine for the throat and some pills to help if a cold is coming.

You sit in a meeting room with 50 people in it. The host notices that the sun is shining in the eye of one guest. He stops his briefing and orders the curtain drawn.

Worker Incentives

Two types of banners and posters are common in factories and workshops throughout China.

The first carries a political slogan or exhortation.

"Warmly celebrate the 11th Party Congress" said a red-on-yellow streamer in the composing room at People's Daily in Peking.

"Unite around the central committee under Chairman Hua" said a banner in a woolen mill in Inner Mongolia.

The other type is a work performance chart that hails those workers who exceed their quotas and outproduce the rest of the work force.

The composing room at the newspaper in Peking was adorned with a citation for the "third shift of the workshop in this advanced collective, given by the revolutionary committee of this press organization for making 135 per cent of its typesetting quotas."

Waste Not

Nothing is wasted. Lighting is minimal in most places. Interior hallways in factories and offices were often unlit. If something were left on the floor you would trip over it. The Chinese solve this by leaving nothing on the hallway floors.

Land use shows the same distaste for waste.

In the countryside and even on the outskirts of cities, every usable scrap of land is being used for agriculture of some sort.

At Mao's birthplace in Shaoshan, there is a patch of land a few hundred feet wide between his family home and a neighbor's house. The patch is planted with rice, and visitors to the national landmark walk along a narrow path at the edge.

Strangers

Except in Inner Mongolia, which gets up nearer to the Russians, we were able to walk about without guides.

The reaction of the people to us varied. Some smiled. Some looked the other way. Some fixed us with hostile stares.

Some Chinese on the streets cooperated when we asked to take their pictures. More waved us off, or just turned away. A guide said that particularly among some of the elderly, the idea lingers that when your picture is taken, some of your spirit goes into the photograph.

NATIONAL CAUSE — Billy Birdsong stands near the union notice welcoming his fellow employees at J.P. Stevens in Roanoke Rapids, N.C. Birdsong is a union man, the Amalgamated Clothing and Textile Workers' Union which represents the Roanoke workers — the first of Stevens' to be organized. Stevens' labor policies are a national issue, a national cause to some. There's a nationwide boycott of Stevens' products organized by the textile union.

Town divided; rift runs deep

Textile industry labor battle is centered in Roanoke Rapids

EDITOR'S NOTE — For the national labor movement, organizing the southern textile industry long has been a major objective. The battle is centered on Roanoke Rapids and the J.P. Stevens Co. But for the workers caught in the dispute, the issues are less sweeping and more immediate, and the rift runs deep.

ROANOKE RAPIDS, N.C. (AP) — Billy Birdsong joined the union because he didn't like the way the boss man was treating young Danny Cook. "I figured it could be me next," he says.

Wilson Lambert doesn't like the union and wants it kicked out of the mills, where he's worked for 35 years. The company, he says, has never done him wrong.

The Birdsongs and the Lamberts are the bottom line of a struggle that labor considers vital to efforts to organize the South, where new industries are proliferating, but where organized labor is lagging. Conversely, many southern business leaders see unions as a threat to the region's economy.

Billy Birdsong is 31. His father, now retired, was a foreman in the mills where his mother still works as a weaver. Billy started there 13 years ago.

Wilson Lambert is 57. He's a machinist, and he's worked in the mills for 35 years.

Billy Birdsong and Wilson Lambert, both employees of J.P. Stevens, both peas from the same southern pod, a generation apart. But the Wilson Lamberts don't talk much to the Billy Birdsongs these days. "It's like a football game," Lambert says. "If you're trying to beat the other side, you're not gonna be friendly to them."

The other side, to Wilson Lambert, is the Amalgamated Clothing and Textile Workers' Union. It represents the 3,000 workers at Stevens' seven Roanoke Rapids plants. Three years ago, by a vote of 1,685 to 1,448, they became the first of Stevens' 45,000 workers to be organized, but there is no contract and little movement toward one.

There is no strike and there probably won't be

Italian birds are getting 'itchy feet'

MILAN, Italy (AP) — City officials think they may have found a formula for ridding the artistic downtown area of pigeons.

After experiments with contraceptives, bans on tourists' feeding the birds, and attempts to capture and transfer them elsewhere, the experts have come up with a chemical that gives the pigeons itchy feet. A recent test of the British-made product "Scarecrow" on the cornices and eaves of Milan's Merchant Palace forced the pigeons to fly to other roosts in the city.

Municipal experts said a battle has been won, but several months more will be needed to extend the chemical campaign to other sections and prove its effectiveness. Even then, they say, other control methods will have to be combined with the itchy feet.

The Merchant Palace is an artistic building a few yards from the Gothic Cathedral Square. It and other monuments and buildings in the city have been subject to corrosion from the droppings of the pigeons.

The number of pigeons in Milan is estimated at 300,000 to 400,000, or one for every four inhabitants, a level termed intolerable by city officials both for the monuments and for the health of the people.

Professor Giorgio Persiani, head of the municipal veterinarian office, said short-term effects of "Scarecrow" proved good.

"Pigeons kept away from the Merchant Palace after the experiment with 'Scarecrow.' If it also works in the longer term, we would extend painting the chemicals to all municipal buildings and artistic monuments," he said.

He said a German-made contraceptive for birds, to be given once a year, and massive capture of birds and their transfer to distant areas, would be compulsory and parallel choices.

"The German product is especially good for reducing the number of the city pigeons as it can be given once a year, while previous contraceptives were needed every month, mixed with seed," the professor explained.

As far as transfer of pigeons was concerned, the professor recalled that authorities of a natural park south of Rome had announced its availability for housing pigeons expelled from the cities.

The pigeon problem is not in fact limited to Milan, but also involves the municipalities of Venice and Siena where pigeons are a major attraction for tourists and at the same time a major threat to the monuments.

MILL WORKER — A worker leaves a J. P. Stevens' textile plant in Roanoke Rapids, N.C., lint clinging to his clothes. The cotton dust and noise are points union organizers are using in its boycott literature.

But there is a nationwide boycott of Stevens' products, organized by the textile union and the AFL-CIO, with strong backing from civil rights organizations. It has been going on for a year, and the union maintains it will go on until the company ends actions that have led to a number of National Labor Relations Board and court decisions against Stevens. The company has been ordered to pay $1.3 million to workers held to have been laid off improperly.

Workers against the union say the boycott could cost their jobs.

Many business and civic leaders in textile towns agree. They contend the southward move of the textile industry over the past 50 years has brought prosperity and that the unions will bring inflation.

Whatever the reason — and the union claims it is threats by management to close plants and lay off workers — fewer than 10 percent of southern textile workers are organized.

Wilson Lambert and a number of other Stevens workers, most of them over 50, are trying to organize an election that would throw the union out of the plant. They call themselves the Education Committee.

Union members claim the Education Committee members, many nearing retirement, are scared and misled by management innuendoes that a stringent contract would lead to layoffs and possibly a shutdown.

Stevens had closed a number of its New England plants when it arrived in Roanoke Rapids on Jan. 11, 1956, to take over from the Simmons Co. the seven mills that ring the town like a horseshoe.

Stevens is the major employer, both in the city of 15,000 residents who are 90 percent white and in Halifax and Northampton counties where at least half the population is black.

Businessmen say Stevens has brought a lot to Roanoke Rapids.

Stevens management and people like Towe bristle at the union's boycott literature, which tends to make the plants sound like 19th-century sweatshops.

Union stalwarts show equal disdain for Stevens' self-portrayal as a benevolent modern employer, with clean plants and the most up-to-date equipment, wishing nothing but the best for its employees.

The company says it has raised wages an average of 7 percent to $3.98 an hour in Roanoke Rapids. The union puts the figure 30 cents below that, but there is little argument that textile workers are among the lowest-paid manufacturing workers in the United States.

There is a continuing dispute over the worth of the Stevens pensions. After the pension plan was revised, some recently retired workers get $20 a month — $2 for each of the last 10 years they worked. Those still working get that money plus $4 a month for each additional year they work.

Most also got cash settlements from the Simmons pension fund, as much as $12,000 for some, but that was 20 years ago and a lot of that money is gone now. Stevens has a profit-sharing plan, but union leaders claim it has been eaten up by inflation and bad investments.

Most mills are air-conditioned and have cafeterias, but the company says little can be done about the noise from the looms and the cotton dust, which can lead to brown lung disease. Many workers wear ear plugs and communicate by hand signals and by reading lips.

Billy Birdsong has quit the mills half a dozen times. He's back as a loom fixer at $5.17 an hour, the best-paying non-supervisory job.

Birdsong was hired after he quit school because his parents worked in the mill. He moved up even though, he says, there were people who had been sweeping the floor for 25 or 30 years who should have been offered promotions first.

"Most of 'em were black folks," he says. "In those days, if you had a dark suntan, you had trouble getting hired."

Wilson Lambert likes to talk about how expensive it is to live in areas where unions have a lot of influence. What bothers him most, though, is what's happened to Roanoke Rapids since the union came.

"It used to be I'd go down to the movie over 'round the corner and it'd be 'Hi Wilson, how're ya doin?' Now people don't speak to each other," he says. "It's just not the same."

VITAL TRACE

Dr. Michael K. Hambridge analyzes blood plasma for its zinc content, using a spectrophotometer in a University of Denver Medical School laboratory. After years of concentrating on vitamins, "now we are in the trace element era for nutrients," says Dr. Hambridge. And zinc is one of those essential elements needed in minute quantities by the human body — the average adult contains two to three grams of zinc, about the weight of two paper clips.

Zinc traces vital

Minerals needed in healthy body

EDITOR'S NOTE: That little bottle of pills on the breakfast table should contain more than vitamins, researchers say. Equally important are a number of minerals, like zinc.

By C.C. MINICLIER
Associated Press Writer

DENVER (AP) — Americans have been counting their vitamins since the early days of World War II, when Army doctors complained of puny and poorly developed draftees.

"For so many years we concetrated on vitamins,' says Dr. Michael K. Hambidge of the University of Colorado Medical School. "But now we are in the trace element era for nutrients."

Illustrative of the new emphasis on trace elements, named for their underepresentation in the body, is the research conducted on zinc.

Researchers say zinc may speed the healing of wounds, aid in fighting some diseases and even prevent the "blahs."

Human requirements have also been established for iron, iodine, copper, chromium, manganese and cobalt, Dr. Hambidge says.

"The fact that you can hardly see them has nothing to do with their biological effectiveness," says Dr. Bert Vallee of the Harvard Medical School.

For instance, the average 154-pound adult contains only two to three grams of zinc. There are 28.5 grams in an ounce.

All the evidence isn't in yet. "An enormous amount of benefits have been claimed," says Dr. Vallee, one of the nation's leading zinc experts. "Not all are equally valid."

This past spring, Dr. Hambidge finished a study for Kelloggs on the effects of adding zinc to breakfast cereals. He concluded that it produces no ill effects.

Kelloggs has started adding zinc to some products, and it and General Mills list the zinc content of most of their cereals on the package.

The makers of two infant formulas, Similac and Enfamil, also began adding zinc after some of Dr. Hambidge's early findings.

Among the chief sources of zinc for humans are oysters, beef, liver, peanuts and lima beans.

But its level is borderline in many prepared foods, says Nancy Glick, a spokeswoman for the Food and Drug Administration, which includes zinc among its nutritional guidelines. She says tha' processing robs food of its natural zinc content.

Researchers at the University of Detroit School of Dentistry have found in tests on animals that zinc supplements speed the healing of surgical wounds and mending of fractures.

Speakers at a Fort Lauderdale, Fla., conference on zinc in health and disease agreed that there is accumulating evidence of some relationship between zinc and the body's ability to fight disease.

And Dr. Donald F. Caldwell, a psychologist at Wayne State University, has associated zinc deficiency with lethargy, apathy, unwillingness to learn and a general "blah" attitude.

Professor lives past

NEW YORK (AP) — Professor John Kouwenhoven gets that rare chance — to step back into time and "live" the history he once taught — thanks to the magic of television make-believe.

Dr. Kouwenhoven, professor emeritus of Barnard College, and an expert on American cultural history, was asked to serve as an advisor on the new fall television series of the Public Broadcasting Service, "The Best of Families."

Following the show's progress in person over a period of two years, he helped the producers at the Children's Television Workshop authenticate vital details of the 1880-1900 era treated in the dramatic series. The producers, in turn, drafted him as an actor. It's not a big role, but he will play a preacher in a brief but poignant scene at an 1883 wedding.

"My acting debut was kind of a joke," he laughs. "I think that Ethel Winant, the series' executive producer, thought that I had been hanging around the set for so long that it would be fun to get my face into the show like Hitchcock does in his movies. I play a minister and my line is predictable, 'Who giveth this woman to marry this man?'"

Ephemera is 'wastebasket' archeology, not just trash

EDITOR'S NOTE — For years, parents have saved kids' recital programs and report cards and paper doily Valentines. Vacationers save travel brochures, diners collect matchbooks. Saving paper pasts has a name, and if you're serious enough about what you save, you might qualify for membership in a recently formed society for savers.

By GEORGE ESPER
Associated Press Writer

BENNINGTON, Vt. (AP) — Uh, hold it.

Don't throw this away.

Save it.

This is ephemera.

You could be an ephemerist but don't know it.

At the recent "This Is Ephemera" exhibition at the Bennington Museum, people came out of curiosity then commented:

"I thought it was a disease."

"I throw that junk out."

"That's trash."

That's right.

Ephemera is wastebasket archeology, the collecting of printed or hand written material meant to be thrown away.

"The whole field," says Calvin P. Otto, "is intended to be those things which man normally does not keep."

Product labels, bills, greeting cards, ticket stubs, menus, newspapers, posters, parking tickets, tour guides, honorary certificates, promotional material, to name a few.

Why would anyone keep them?

"Why does man keep anything in the sense of a historic nature," Otto responds. "What we're really trying to preserve and what in fact has been preserved are historic records in print. It's a copy of that part of society."

Otto became an ephemerist when he quit being a philatelist — stamps are in a class by themselves. Now he is one of eight founding fathers of the two-year old Ephemera Society and chairman of its North American office headquartered in Bennington.

"If you're a collector, you're probably an ephemerist but don't know it by its name," he says.

Otto, 47, is the president of the Wood Fong Corp., of nearby Hoosick Falls, N.Y. His company, which makes wood fiber board used by newspapers in making the curved, one-piece plates necessary in letter press printing, also has a plant in England.

A few years back, Otto was ephemerizing in a market in London. A friend introduced him to Maurice Rickards, an Englishman who has written 23 books on ephemera, including the interpretation of World War I through posters, which were a strong propaganda medium.

"It just happened to be a circumstance that we met one another and one thing led to another. We realized each other's interests and the next thing you know a society is born," Otto said.

Of the eight founders, Otto is the only American. The others are Englishmen, all professionals in graphic arts or design. The society's president is Sir John Betjeman, poet laureate of England.

"We didn't know whether we were the only eight humans in the world who cared or not, but we now have well over 350 members and are growing very rapidly," Otto said.

"The society's basic purpose is to get together people who do collect to help preserve material, to help others to interpret it ... To the majority of the people, if they run into grandma's old trunk or the company archives, it's trash. It heads for the fireplace. That's what we're trying to stop."

Otto says he uses ephemera "as an escape mechanism to allow your mind to do something different than your normal work."

"The collecting of ephemera is a great deal in my mind like prospecting for gold. The fun is in the search. Searching and then putting together a collection of things regardless of what they are that you can then enjoy both visually and historically."

Otto has between 3,000 and 4,000 items in his collection of ephemera, including advertising cards, receipts from steamship companies, posters and old newspapers. His personal collection ends about 1920.

His two most prized possessions are the Oxford Gazette of 1665, the first English language newspaper that was produced as a regular newspaper, and a poster from Italy dating back to 1630 that warned of plague in an Italian town.

EPHEMERA — Other people might have thrown all this away. Calvin Otto, at home in Bennington, Vt., displays what to him is prime ephemera. Otto, who defines ephemera as those things which man normally does not keep but which have value as historic records, is one of the founders of the Ephemera Society.

An orphan of Sonora Desert

Poet-philosopher 'guides' tourists in Mexican ruins

VILLA HERMOSA, Mexico (AP) — Sooner or later a visitor to this tropical capital of the state of Tabasco will come across Raul O. Mendoza.

Raul is a tourist guide who has been leading travelers and scholars in and out of Olmec and Mayan ruins in the nearby jungle for 22 years.

But Raul is more than a tourist guide. He is part Yaqui Indian, an orphan of the Sonora Desert in northern Mexico who has developed a personal, mystical view of life through his contact with jungle trails, ancient ruins and the archeologists who visit them.

Many of his ideas come from nightly meditation in view of the stars which shine down on his penthouse apartment atop the battered San Rafael Hotel in the center of town.

Raul is 56 years old, 6 feet tall, husky and bearded. When he smiles, his white teeth shine like the sun and he looks 20 years younger.

He calls himself "the wandering man" or "the child of the sun." He says local residents call him the "white witch" because he does good and no harm.

Sudden windfall for LA. shareholders

LOS ANGELES (AP) — Things are going better for the shareholders of Coca-Cola Bottling Company of Los Angeles — the value of their stock has shot up more than 60 per cent in two weeks.

L.A. Coke is a solidly profitable company but it hasn't discovered oil under a bottling plant. Instead, its shareholders are the beneficiaries of a wave of tender offers currently enlivening a depressed stock market.

Tender offers, in which one company offers to buy out the shareholders of another, are an esoteric area of corporate finance involving millions of dollars and hard-fought court battles. Although the action takes place in brokerage houses and boardrooms, tenders can provide a sudden windfall for investors, as in the case of Coca-Cola.

L.A. Coke stock, which was trading in the low 20s two weeks ago, jumped to $30 a share last week after MCA, Inc. announced a tender offer at that price Oct. 7. L.A. Coke's management contested the entertainment conglomerate's takeover bid in court, but later said they were in favor of an offer by Northwest Industries at $40 a share.

Because of the short-lived bidding war, an investor who bought L.A. Coke stock only two weeks ago has seen it soar from $24 or $25 a share to its current level of $40, a hefty — and rare — profit.

"Mergers and acquisitions are the only thing going on in the stock market these days," says Ron Fox, a broker with Drexel Burnham Lambert here. "As the prices of these securities are coming down, the asset value of the corporations are becoming more realistic and therefore they are more prone to takeover bids."

As measured by the Dow Jones Indstrial Average, the stock market is drooping along at a two-year low. In the last 10 months, the 30-stock average has tumbled from about 1,000 to the low 800s. Some stocks swim against the tide but most don't, and their low prices have made companies attractive to other corporate buyers.

W.T. Grimm, a Chicago consulting firm, says there were 20 mergers or acquisitions involving $100 million or more in the first half of the year, compared to only 12 in the first six months of 1976.

"The market has been rather depressed the whole year, so you can probably acquire a company at a bargain price," explains Miss T. Simick, a Grimm research analyst.

MCA, flush with cash from "Jaws" and other entertainment ventures, clearly saw an opportunity to expand into areas already tapped by competitors. Twentieth Century-Fox controls Coca-Cola Bottling Company Midwest of St. Paul, Minn., and General Cinema bottles Pepsi and Seven-Up. A tender offer for the L.A. bottler, which markets Coke and other soft drinks in the West, was the quickest way to do it.

The purpose of a tender offer "is for the tenderor to gain control of the tenderee in a very quick manner without having extended negotiations with the target company's management," says Robert Rifkind, an attorney who has participated in numerous takeover battles. "In a tender situation, the management of the target company is generally unfriendly and would not agree to a negotiated acquisition."

L.A. Coke's management was definitely unfriendly. The company urged its shareholders to reject MCA's offer as inadequate and accused the entertainment firm of violating securities laws in connection with the tender. Meanwhile, L.A. Coke was looking for what Rifkind calls "the white knight."

"Many target companies escape the clutches of tenderor by being acquired by a third company," he says. "The point going for the third-party tenderor, which we usually refer to as 'the white knight,' is that management of the target company is cooperative and friendly."

L.A. Coke found its white knight in Northwest Industries, a Chicago firm whose consumer products group accounted for 40 per cent of its $1.6 billion in 1976 sales. Northwest, which has interests in steel, chemicals and various consumer products, topped MCA's bid with an offer of $40 a share.

Those who bought stock in L.A. Coke before the original tender offer weren't the only ones to benefit from the bidding contest. In the week between the MCA and Northwest offers, more than 25 per cent of L.A. Coke's 4.3 million outstanding shares changed hands, with most of the buying coming from arbitraters, highly sophisticated stock traders whose profits come from guessing right on tenders.

"Basically," says Rifkind, "the arbitrager is an investor, usually an investment banker, who is willing to buy the stock of the target company in large quantities in the hope that the tender offer will be successful or that a white knight will come along and make a topping offer."

Arbitragers, says Rifkind, "buy many thousands of shares, sometimes hundreds of thousands, and can afford to buy at just a little under the tender price and make a small profit on each share but a large profit overall because they own so many shares."

Such traders are "the catalyst which makes the normal tender offer successful," says Rifkind, because they can be counted on to sell to the highest bidder. Arbitragers "are always unsentimental about the stocks they own," he notes, and have no interest in the company except for the price of its stock.

never-ending source of energy which comes from the sun. He advocates "love and peace for everyone."

Raul believes in the power of colors to heal the sick and he often visits the local hospital to apply colored ribbons to the patients.

He has heard that the Yaqui Indians in northern Mexico also experiment with colors and see the light of life, but they use peyote and other drugs to practice witchcraft. "I think the drugs damage the brain. I would never use them," he says.

A visitor looking for a guide can usually find Raul at his hotel or at the La Venta Museum, an outdoor collection of ancient Olmec ruins, including a giant, 20-ton stone head.

His tour of the museum is a mixture of scholarly information he acquired while attending a two-year guide school at the University of Mexico in Mexico City and Raul's personal interpretations.

Raul says he was born in the Sonora Desert and is part Yaqui Indian. He doesn't remember his parents, was raised for a time by his grandmother.

One day he ran away, never to return. His wanderings took him to the sea, where he spent 14 years aboard a Norwegian freighter.

Raul has written many of his thoughts in free verse.

Despite government efforts to suppress it

Soviet 'dissident' movement marks 10 years of survival

By THOMAS KENT
Associated Press Writer

MOSCOW (AP) — "The Chronicle of Current Events" — a crudely duplicated, secretly distributed journal of the Soviet dissident movement — is marking its 10th year of survival despite efforts to suppress it.

Police dragnets and infiltration campaigns have led over the years to the arrest of several Chronicle editors and distributors. But the typewritten journal, like the dissident movement itself, has never been snuffed out. Its editorial board — size and location unknown — is quickly replenished following the arrest of any member.

The Chronicle's latest issue, emblazoned "10th Year of Publication," began to be slipped hand-to-hand among readers just a few weeks ago. It totals 115 pages of closely typed onionskin paper, designed to be recopied by readers for further clandestine distribution around the country.

Each issue is bound in plain white paper to appear as inconspicous as possible.

"Just a few copies of the journal are made originally and then the Chronicle relies on readers to spread it further," says one Soviet dissident familiar with the journal's distribution. "For that reason, no one knows just how many copies are finally made of each issue. But it certainly is many hundreds."

The latest issue of the Chronicle, like most others, contains news of dissident activities and alleged Soviet government misdeeds from scores of Soviet cities, villages and labor camps.

Items include stories about a Lithuanian priest who was blocked by officials from publicizing a forthcoming Mass; the cousin of a Ukrainian dissident allegedly taken off a train by police and interrogated about his relative's dissident activity; a young man in the Crimea whose efforts to leave the Soviet Union are being blocked; and the punishment of dissident prisoners who conducted a hunger strike in Mordovia.

Each report is in the dry, terse style traditional of the Chronicle, without editorial comment. Some reports are lengthy an legalistic. Even small errors in the Chronicle's reporting are painstakingly corrected in subsequent issues.

The Chronicle uses an extensive network of volunteer correspondents, who are warned by the journal itself not to try to find out too much about the publication they are reporting to.

"Tell (your news) to the person from whom you received the Chronicle," the journal instructed in one issue. "He will pass it on to the one from whom he received it, etc. Only do not try to pass through this whole chain directly yourself, so as not to become a suspected (police) informer."

The Chronicle first appeared April 30, 1968, and now comes out about five times a year.

Dissidents accused of involvement in its publication or distribution have included poet Natalya Gorbanevskay, sent to a mental hospital shortly after the first issue came out; Vladimir Nekipelov and Sergei Peragov, sentenced to two and three years' imprisonment respectively in 1974; and Sergei Kovalev, sentenced to seven years' imprisonment in 1975.

Dissident sources say KGB security police interrogators are continuing their efforts to destroy the journal and have even asked dissidents they question to bring them the latest issues. But the police pressure stopped publication only once, for 18 months in 1973-74, despite a reported Communist party decision at the end of 1971 to bend every effort to stamp out the Chronicle.

Ballad origins

The term "ballad" originated in medieval England. Although the word is currently used to denote romantic and often sentimental narrative songs, the first ballads were dancing songs.

Treating ills

Project uses old remedies

NEW DELHI, India (AP) — In an unusual project joining Western and traditional medicine, doctors in south India are searching for a treatment for rheumatoid arthritis using herbal medicines, oils and pastes prescribed by ancient Hindi scriptures.

The World Health Organization (WHO), which is conducting the four-year project, says the initial results are encouraging.

"Since the project began, we've had about 20 cases of rheumatoid under study. Two have been cured and most of the others are showing good improvement," Dr. Purshottam Diesh, the WHO project director, said in an interview.

The project, being conducted jointly with the Indian Council of Medical Research, is being run in Coimbatore, a city in southern India, at a clinic specializing in a branch of traditional Indian medicine called ayurveda.

Ayurveda, a Hindi word meaning science of life, is based on the holy Hindu scriptures called Vedas and has been practiced on the Asian subcontinent for more than 3,000 years.

According to Diesh, ayurvedic medicine does not isolate and treat a particular ailment the way Western medicine does. Rather it seeks to treat the ailing body as a system somehow out of balance.

In the case of rheumatoid arthritis, the painful stiffening and inflammation of joints, muscles and tissues is seen by ayurvedic medicine as being caused by an imbalance in the body's metabolism.

The system imbalance in the arthritis sufferer may have been brought on by anything from grief or shock to overexertion or poor eating habits.

Diesh said Western doctors have been aware for years that certain ayurvedic cures practiced for centuries in Asia do relieve arthritis symptoms, sometimes permanently. But never before has modern science sought to scientifically analyze ayurvedic remedies for arthritis sufferers.

At the Ayurvedic Trust Hospital in Coimbatore, which uses herbs gathered by peasants from a nearby mountain range, a patient is first examined by both modern and ayurvedic doctors before treatment begins, Diesh said.

If the diagnosis is rheumatoid arthritis, an ayurvedic treatment begins consisting of cleansing baths, herbs taken internally, massages with herbal potions and oils, and other physiotherapy, all designed to restore the entire body to its proper balance.

The project is being confined to a limited number of cases, taken on both an in-patient basis and out-patient basis. Cases of severe deformities brought on by later stages of the disease are not being considered because of their low possibility of cure.

There are no accurate estimates of how many Indians suffer rheumatoid arthritis nor how many people throughout the world are slowed, crippled or killed by its treachery, Diesh said. But guesses run into the tens of millions, he said.

Exhibit of Peruvian gold major art event

The exhibition was designed by the American Museum of Natural History here, where it will be until the end of the year. Then it will be shown in Chicago, San Francisco and Detroit.

The show is a major art event — 225 of the finest examples of ancient Peruvian gold from the famous Museo Oro del Peru, in Lima, the largest display of Peruvian gold ever seen in this country.

The wonders it encompasses range from a gold spider you could hide in the palm of your hand to a showy poncho made of about 13,000 airy little gold plaques sewn together. There are designs showing fierce warriors or playful animals, as well as those based on geometric abstractions. There are elegantly simple shawl pins, and there are elaborate royal crowns.

Ironically, most of these items were made not to be used but to be buried, as funerary objects, yet they still say much about everyday life, about the customs and habits of the people of those little-known cultures, up to 2,000 years ago.

For example, beautiful, crescent-shaped tweezers, some decorative enough to have been worn as pendants, indicate the method of "shaving" used by this lightly-haired people. A ceramic included in the New York installation depicts a man using his tweezers to pluck hair from his chin and holding a polished stone mirror — there's one in the same case.

These exhibits have special meaning in other ways. They are extremely rare, a tiny sampling in existence today that can only hint at treasures that are lost forever. For when the Spanish conquistadors arrived in 1532 they took all the gold, primarily Inca, they could lay their hands on and melted it down for easier shipment out, without regard for its beauty, craftsmanship or any value other than as wealth.

Most of the gold in the show is from pre-Inca times, gold which was overlooked because it was buried in tombs around the country. The Spanish rifled tombs, too, but they didn't find all the gold.

Another irony: although the Spanish so predominantly valued the gold in terms of money, the ancient Peruvians never made gold into money at all. They didn't use money, in fact, probably exchanging work for goods.

Gold to them was a symbol of power, of the sun god they worshipped, a substance of light and beauty, easy to work. Some of their gold objects were painted over, or covered with feathers, jewels or other metals: the fact that objects were gold gave them an instrinsic significance and the gold itself didn't always have to show.

Physically, the exhibition doesn't cover much ground. It's compact and easy to get around. Objects are simply and spaciously shown on backgrounds color-keyed to the four main pre-Inca periods, covering a span of 2,000 years. While the show is in New York it includes some rare items from the Museum of Natural History's collections — ceramics, priceless embroideries and other contemporary items.

Master baker's life is 'bread'

PARIS (AP) — In a country where everyone eats his own weight in bread yearly, Bernard Ganachaud is in a very tough position. He's a master baker, a French artist in dough fighting an uphill battle against the philistines of mass production.

"Bread is life itself," he said in an interview in his oak-beamed bakery in northeast Paris the other day. "It represents all the trials of my youth, all the suffering it took to learn the profession."

Ganachaud, who began baking at his father's side 39 years ago at the age of 8, added, "You have to have a love both of bread and the craft of making it, not just a love of money. Otherwise, you should be in a factory turning out bread by mass production.

"An artisan, a true craftsman, must be available permanently to show his apprentices by his own example what must be done. He can't accept the least imperfection in making bread. It would be a catastrophe."

There are 112,000 bakers in France; 42,000 of them are certified makers and most have their own shops. There are also about 100 big industrial bakeries in France, and their operations are expanding constantly.

Ganachaud said the quality of bread is threatened by the giant bakeries and supermarkets that stock their packaged loaves, but that the small shopkeeper must survive because only he can cater to the trice-daily French need for "warm, blond and crusty bread."

Ganachuad led a visitor to a tray of steaming croissants, picked up one of the golden brown, crescent-shaped rolls and pulled it slowly in two. "Look how flaky and airy it is," he said. "If a customer eats one of these, a second isn't necessary. How can factories compete with this?

"They can't, mainly because of distribution problems," he said, answering his own question. "Their trucks get bogged down in traffic and can't deliver morning, noon and night when the French want their bread, and want it hot and fresh. They also can't provide the variety of tastes an artisan can."

"If bread is made from wholesome, natural ingredients and well prepared it's good for your health," Ganachaud remarked as he passed his medieval-style, wood-fired stone ovens that bake at a slow, gentle heat in full view of customers. "A big problem is that many doctors advise against eating bread. They denigrate it.

"Another problem is recruiting qualified help. It's getting harder and harder to find good bakers. Nowadays there's too much emphasis on the intellectual side of baking, the theory of it, rather than the practical side. the technique itself."

Ganachaud said he and his helpers prepare their dough in the evening using only natural leavening, put it in refrigerators to retard the fermentation process, fire their furnaces with oak or pine, and bake in the morning.

"We do nothing to hasten fermentation process," Ganachaud said of the 30 types of bread he makes. "Some of the industrial bakeries speed it up to three hours. Here it's six hours. Everything is slow and natural and our bread tastes better and lasts longer."

Ganachaud gained his master's title at the age of 20 in Brittany, where his father Jean had a bakery. He originally wanted to be a lawyer but baker's hours made study impossible. At the age of 25, with his bride Josette, he opened a shop in Tours.

Five years later he had saved enough to buy a bakery in the French capital, and in the next 17 years he bought surrounding property, tripling the size of the original establishment.

He also gained the rare distinction of becoming a Chevalier of the Order of Good Bread.

New 24-exposure film to appear soon on market

By IRVING DESFOR
AP Newsfeatures

Be prepared to accept 24-exposure rolls of Kodacolor 400 and Kodacolor II films. It's a new film length that will eventually replace the present 20-exposure roll size in these two films only. The 36-exposure roll will continue unchanged. The change to the 24-exposure roll has already been under way in Japan and in some Europen countries and it reflects what photographers prefer, according to Kodak officials.

A convenient low-cost "Rechargeable Battery System" for popular-size batteries is now available from General Electric. They are introducing nickel-cadmium batteries in four commonly used sizes along with a miniature modular charger that accepts all of them for recharging. With the proper modular accessory, the batteries are capable of being recharged up to 1,000 times for convenient overnight re-use.

The rechargeable nickel-cadmium batteries come in pairs of AA, C and D sizes and a single 9-volt size. These are the sizes used in still and movie cameras, flash units and in other home and office gadgets like calculators, transistor radios, tape recorders and toys.

Individual modules hold each size of battery in pairs of AA, C and D or a single 9-volt size. Each module can be snapped onto one miniature BC-3 charger unit, plugged into an electric socket and the batteries they hold can be brought to full power in from 12 to 16 hours. GE estimates that it costs less than a nickel to recharge one of their D batteries 200 times.

The new rechargeable battery system is the result of modern engineering technology which has miniaturized bulkier and more expensive units to make them compact and economical. Now you buy the components you need in the size you need and stop throwing dead batteries away.

The rechargeable battery system seems to offer the advantages of long-term convenience and low-cost maintenance for the ever-increasing number of battery-powered gadgets being offered for photography, home and office use. For further information, write: GE Rechargeable Batteries, Box 992, Gainesville, Fla. 32602.

A simple way to mount photos in albums is being offered with "Foto-Mount," a new type of adhesive tape. It comes in half-inch-wide rolls which resemble other adhesive tapes. It differs in application.

When "Foto-Mount" is pressed down firmly on the back of a photo and the backing paper is removed, it leaves behind a strip of adhesive. The photo can then be placed anywhere on a smooth surface and it will remain in place indefinitely. However, the photo can be removed easily at any time and placed elsewhere without tearing or struggle. And whenever you wish, you can lift the photo and remove the adhesive by rubbing your finger over it. It peels away like a thin layer of dried rubber cement.

Are you tired of simple things and pinching pennies and being practical? How about splurging $14,200 on one lens? Then you could shoot candid pictures on a moonlight night by available light at an exposure of 1-500th of a second on ASA 400 film. Or, if there is no moon and you had to shoot by starlight, you could get pictures at ¼th of a second.

Yes, there is such a lens and it's available in the United States now. Just ask for the Zeiss N-Mirotar lens. You'll also have to get a Contax-RTS 35mm camera from a Yashica dealer to go with it. That's extra, of course.

How does the $14,200 lens work? It consists of three essential parts: a wide aperture catadioptric (mirror) lens, a three-stage image amplifier tube, and a wide aperture macro lens.

Ornithologist surrounds himself with life's work

By MAUREEN CONNOLLY
Associated Press Writer

WAYNE, Maine (AP) — Ornithologist Olin Sewall Pettingill Jr. surrounds himself with his work, in a house filled with pictures and books of the birds he has spent half a century studying, writing about and photographing.

The former director of Cornell University's ornithology laboratory and wildlife filmmaker for Walt Disney is the noted author of books that have helped students and amateur bird watchers for years.

Pettingill, who is 69, has a comfortable, Victorian-era house by the water in this lakeside community. Outside, there is little indication of his life-long devotion to birds. But inside, the walls, floors and furniture are covered with paintings and small wooden and procelain sculptures of birds. Eagles grace a rug, an owl mobile hangs in the kitchen and ducks are imprinted on light switches and lampshades.

He laughs telling visitors how as youngsters, his two daughters complained they were tired of seeing only birds throughout the house, and asked their parents to consider another decorating scheme.

Pettingill, called Sewall by friends, recently completed a revision of his popular Guide to Bird Finding East of the Mississippi, first published in 1951, and is rewriting his similar Western handbook.

"When I wrote those books, I had no idea that in 25 years I would be doing it all over. There have been appalling changes in bird life and the environment. Many fine areas for birds are gone," he said.

After learning that prime sites named in his earlier books have become highways and shopping centers, Pettingill's new books will focus more on sanctuaries and public areas that he hopes will remain untouched for some time.

His films of penguins attracted the attention of Walt Disney, then starting his True Life Adventure series. He called on Pettingill for a film on penguins and later for several other wildlife films.

Pettingill made the penguin movie on the Falkland Islands, 300 miles off the southern tip of South America. He has made several trips to the Falklands since to photograph the penguin.

His wife, Eleanor Rice Pettingill, who died earlier this year, described a Falkland visit in her book, "A Penguin Summer." She was her husband's companion and helper throughout his career.

Although he claims no favorite bird, Pettingill likes seabirds, the penguin, puffin and albatross, and birds of the prairie, especially the American woodcock. "Seabirds stir my excitement," he said.

He keeps no live birds at his house, but has boxes for tree swallows and several feeders at his nearby summer house. He said he likes watching birds feed by his window while he has breakfast or lunch.

"Birds are very useful in a number of ways," he said. "They are monitors of the environment. They are with us where ever we go, except for the far reaches of the artic, and sometimes, the midocean."

Old forge is coming back

WASHINGTON (AP) — There's renewed interest in the old craft of blacksmithing, according to the National Geographic Society.

It points out, however, that the emphasis nowadays is on fine craftwork and not on horseshoes.

Pilots, business people, doctors and scientists are among those taking up the challenge of turning a chunk of iron into a thing of beauty, it says. In addition, more universities and art schools are offering courses in blacksmithing, and wrought iron objects are turning up in art galleries.

Liz revisited: cast in new role as political wife on farm

By JURATE KAZICKAS
Associated Press Writer

WASHINGTON (AP) — These days her life is as much corn on the cob as caviar, political scenarios instead of movie scripts, a tractor alongside the limousine.

Elizabeth Taylor says that suits her just fine.

Gone are her personal hairdresser, trunks of clothes and private jets. Now when she travels it might be by bus or commercial airliner — economy class — with an overnight bag stuffed with jeans and electric hair-curlers.

Warner, a former secretary of the Navy and onetime head of the American Bicentennial Administration, wants to become a Republican senator from Virginia in the 1978 election. He has taken his famous bride of 10 months on a blitz of the state, logging more than 14,000 miles appearing several times a week at fairs, barbecues, rallies and fund raisers.

"Liz has brought the role of political wife out of obscurity and into the forefront," Warner says, beaming with pride.

For those who remember Elizabeth Taylor as a movie queen in diamonds and ermine, it's incongruous to see photos of her riding in a pick-up truck or on a tractor, calling to the cattle on her husband's farm, mingling with the folks at dozens of small town receptions.

"There's no way I'd be doing this if I didn't believe in it," says Mrs. Warner. "In acting, you're so closeted and protected. This is so much more one to one. You're not playing a role in politics, you're dealing with real life issues."

The Warners were honored guests at the Old Time Fiddler's Convention, and despite an attack of bursitis and back problems that put her into a wheelchair, in the truest tradition of "the show must go on," Mrs. Warner insisted on keeping the engagement.

She tottered to the microphone, her eyes glistening with tears of pain as she held her smile for the cameras. Then a power failure forced her to wait a pain-wracked hour before she could finish her speech.

Two days later, Elizabeth Taylor Warner entered a hospital in Washington and was put into traction for a week.

"She would have kept right on going, but I just had to ground her," says Warner.

The Warners met on a blind date for a party for Queen Elizabeth II given at the British Embassy in Washington last year. Warner, now 50, had been divorced for three years from his first wife, Cathy Mellon, and Miss Taylor was single again after six marriages. They courted on weekends between New York, where she was finishing a movie, and Warner's 2,000-acre farm in Middleburg, Va.

Warner was doing some campaigning for Gerald Ford and Miss Taylor asked if she could join him.

"It was a new experience for her," said Warner. "She had been on the fringes of the Carter campaign and really did not have a background in partisan politics. We had a lot of fun together and when I saw people's reactions to her, I realized we had an interesting team relationship."

Shortly after their marriage in December, they began their campaign.

"I told her if we're going together into the public arena, we must share it."

"You have to believe in what you're doing," she says. "People detect it very quickly if you are a phony. You have to care about people."

If Warner gets past the Republican convention next June and makes it to the Senate, Mrs. Warner could be an interesting political wife. She's already said she is enthusiastic about the Equal Rights Amendment despite her husband's reservations.

And when he expressed doubt that she could make a contribution to foreign policy or defense strategy, Mrs. Warner shot him a stern look and said: "There's no reason why a woman can't know as much about defense as a man, no reason at all. It's all in the training."

NEW ROLE FOR LIZ — Elizabeth Taylor Warner, plagued with back trouble, is helped out of a helicopter by her husband, John Warner, at home in Middleburgh, Va., recently. The Warners were giving a country supper there for the Republican candidate for governor. Since her marriage, Mrs. Warner has embraced a new role on a new stage — that of political wife in Virginia, where her co-star, her husband, aspires to the Republican Senate seat.

Refurbishing their own rooms

Teen-age decorators can wax creative, and it helps

By VIVIAN BROWN
AP Newsfeatures

Young people may come up with some creative ideas when they are given the opportunity to refurbish their own rooms. In any event, it will improve their dispositions, two mothers have learned.

One parent provided a sum that was far less than the investment she might have made in her 17-year-old daughter's room. "And I would not have been able to inject so much personality into it," she said.

Another mother indulged her 15-year-old son. He was restless and unhappy with all the castoffs he had been living with, and wanted to do it himself. She was hesitant, but now says "I was truly amazed that he could do this in such a mature way and that it cost so little."

Both parents recommend the idea, not only because it puts youngsters on their own, and makes them feel as if they have accomplished something, but because they work better in surroundings they enjoy.

Daughter kept her studio-lounge bed (it was two years old) but she moved it from its place along the wall so that she could put a headboard on the wall. She painted a length of picket fence white, and put it behind the bed to serve as a headboard.

Two ice cream chairs bought at a tag sale for $9 and then painted white were used in the corner of a room with a wire spool from a building supply store that made a very good table. She covered the table in a plain white fabric and stenciled little flowers to its border. She did the same thing at the windows where she used some old white sheets as curtains.

The walls were painted vivid pink and the molding white. In the corner with her little patio grouping, she put a large poster of a waterfall. In another area there was an environmental poster showing mountains and streams.

Her red rug went very well with the vivid pink and white room scheme. She had also painted her old chest of drawers the same pink as the walls which gave it a nice fresh appearance.

The mother of the male decorator was surprised that he pitched into it with "such gusto." She thought that the agreement to provide funds would be a starter and then after that she would be spending additional money for the things he really wanted. But, no.

He retained his brown rug, and kept a buff color on the walls. A rug that he found at the dump was cleaned and put on one wall and below it was a long free-form barn board that he also found at the dump. He attached it with angle irons to the wall, strong enough to hold his stereo system. A minijungle of green plants — nine or so, in every size — was created by putting the greenery around the room on high and low tiers of cinder blocks that he found about the house outdoors. It gave the room a cool, refreshing look.

The bureau was discarded. In place of it he stacked heavy boxes he had obtained from the local liquor store. He painted them shiny brown and used the bins for clothing and all sorts of things. Each box was attached to another with four screws used in the corners of the boxes.

One good purchase was a draftsman's table that was put in the area formerly occupied by the bureau. It is a good place to do homework and it would be useful when he begins studying for his chosen career, architecture, he told his mother.

Japanese turn to U.S. cars

By NAOAKI USUI

TOKYO (AP) — Japan may be known for its compact cars, but there is one field here where big American vehicles dominate. This is the reikyusha, or "soul forever" car used as a hearse and complete with a built-in, Buddhist-style temple to hold the casket.

"Engine output, size and dignity make us use the full-size American cars," said Kiyoshi Yoshikura, director in charge of vehicles for one company in Tokyo, in an interview.

"Japanese cars are too small to carry caskets as long as 7 feet," he said, "and the temple itself weighs at least 1,100 pounds. American cars with their bigger space are much easier to operate."

Yoshikura's company owns 12 American funeral coaches. Mechanics cut away the rear section of the body to install the heavy, decorated temple structure. Each temple is made of select Japanese cyprus wood, its walls and ceilings covered with silken cloth. The floor is of tatami, the traditional Japanese straw matting. Each costs $27,000 to $34,500.

The reikyu-sha leads the funeral procession to the site of the service, to the crematory, the cemetery and then back to the home of the deceased. Each of Yoshikura's 12 American cars is used an average of 47 times a month. The trip usually covers about 16 miles and costs 18,000 yen (about $68.)

It is "a very modest fare, set by government regulations," Yoshikura said.

Driving the soul forever car is a difficult task in Japanese traffic and on narrow Japanese streets.

"You have to be very careful not to make a sharp turn, which happens frequently in Tokyo," Yoshikura, the son of an undertaker, said. "The car is top-heavy and may capsize if banked more than 49 degrees."

The first motorized reikyusha in Japan appeared in 1923 when a Tokyo undertaker converted a Model-T Ford into a funeral vehicle complete with Buddhist temple, Yoshikura said. Before that the temple cart was pulled by animals, usually cows. And before that the pot-shaped caskets then in use were placed in a temple-like structure carried on human shoulders. shoulders.

Mystery of Lady Lindy . . .

By RANDOLPH SCHMID
Associated Press Writer

WASHINGTON (AP) — The mystery of the Lady Lindy has jogged back into American thoughts this year with historians recalling the disappearance 40 years ago of Amelia Earhart.

And still no one really knows what happened over the bleak Pacific Ocean that night in 1937 when the pioneer aviatrix and her navigator vanished.

It was her second try to fly around the world near the equator, something never before accomplished. All previous flights around the world had followed northerly routes, shorter and over more populated areas.

And, having started from Oakland, Calif., on June 1, 1937 she had gone more than 22,000 miles before being lost, the night of July 1-2, between Lae and Howland Island.

The 18-day search covering 265,000 square miles of ocean turned up nothing, and Miss Earhart and navigator Fred Noonan were listed as lost at sea.

But rumors began almost immediately that she had been on a secret spy mission to look at Japanese island fortifications and was captured.

No U.S. government documents exist to document such a theory, and no evidence of such a capture has ever been found. But rumors persist about native stories that a white man and woman were held prisoner by the Japanese and later died in prison.

But J. Gordon Vaeth of the National Environmental Satellite Service, who spent three years studying her disappearance, concluded in a recently published article:

"My own conclusion is that there is no hard evidence of any kind — to support a finding other than that the Electra simply ran out of gas and the pilot and navigator were lost at sea."

LEWIS HOMES' Prestige Series — Upland

Prestige. To Daniel Webster the word means having or showing success, rank or wealth. "Precisely what we were aiming for," agrees Richard A. Lewis, president of Lewis Homes and developer of the Prestige Series homes now under construction.

Prestigious, for example, is Plan 455; a five-bedroom home of 2,693 square feet situated on a 10,000 square foot lot. Pass through the ceramic tile entry to the living room, formal dining room and wonderfully modern kitchen. The luminous ceilings light up the pass-through serving counter, trash compactor and built-in microwave oven. Just off the breakfast nook is the sunken family room with custom designed fireplace and its own wet bar. Adjacent is the guest bath, laundry room and a bedroom/den room. All this and a three-car garage with room enough for a work bench and storage space.

Three additional bedrooms and another bath are upstairs plus the master bedroom suite with a private bath, dressing area and balcony. And while storage space is already ample throughout this model, there is further space in the attic.

"In areas like Orange County, San Marino and Encino where residential growth is so spectacular these days, we estimate this home would run upwards of $140,000," says Lewis. "Upland, however, is newly discovered and while it offers so many advantages to home buyers it has the to feel the financial wallop the more heavily developed areas are suffering." The Prestige Series Plan 455, hence, starts for as low as $105,000. Mountain view settings and the highly rated Upland School District are a complementary part of the area, and the noted Claremont Colleges are just minutes away.

"In keeping with our aim for quality," continued Lewis, "we've limited construction of the Prestige Series to only 37 homes." In each home you'll find cedar shake roofs, refrigerated airconditioning, shag carpeting throughout, customized fireplaces and wet bars.

Prestige Series homes are available in 3, 4 and 5 bedrooms with 2½ or 3 baths and 3-car garages in one-and two-story and split level stylings. All homes are situated on 10,000 square foot lots.

Lewis Homes' Prestige Series range in price from $86,500 to $109,000.

To reach the homes please take the San Bernardino Freeway (10) east to the Mountain Avenue exit in Upland. North on Mountain to Foothill Boulevard. Right on Foothill to San Antonio Avenue. Left on San Antonio to 22nd Street and left to models.

New energy guidelines

WASHINGTON — The National Association of Home Builders' new guidelines for conserving energy in new housing are gaining wide acceptance throughout the country.

The NAHB Thermal Performance Guidelines for One and Two Family Dwellings were unveiled at a recent conference here to more than 160 representatives of housing related industries, utilities, governmental agencies and consumer groups. During a question and answer period, the guidelines were described by industry and government officials as "innovative . . . impressive . . . practical . . . flexible . . . extremely workable . . . " and worthy of the support of the Carter Administration and the new Department of Energy.

David Stahl, executive vice president of NAHB, noted that the NAHB guidelines were unique, blending the best and the latest technology with sound consumer economics to produce a "practical, flexible and comprehensive" energy program for new housing.

The NAHB guidelines are based on energy index numbers, which are determined locally from data on local weather conditions, fuel costs and the efficiency of the heating and cooling systems used in the home. The index numbers then are matched to bar graphs representing 19 different construction areas to determine the amount of insulation or type of energy conserving features which are most effective for the money invested.

All the energy saving recommendations are cost-effective; that is, the energy saving materials and techniques used in building the home will be repaid to the homeowner within at least a seven year period through energy cost savings.

In the Washington, D.C., area, for example, the guidelines call for R-30 insulation in the attic (9-

The median sales price of an existing home in California climbed once again to hit a new high of $63,394, a nearly two percent increase from a month ago and 30 percent higher than last year's figures.

The statistics, released today by Jerome Blank of Albany, president of the 110,000-member California Association of Realtors, were based upon August sales reports taken from a statewide sampling of real estate boards representing approximately 42 percent of the Association's membership.

Speaking before Bakersfield area Realtors, Blank noted that while prices continue on an upward trend, the real estate market, which took a dramatic upward spiral earlier this year, appears to be stablizing at a "more reasonable" relationship to the overall economy.

"I believe the so-called 'Gold Rush' of California housing prices has begun to wane," Blank told Valley Realtors. "Earlier this year we experienced a price explosion resulting from a pent-up demand for housing which drove prices to an all-time high, but as new construction adds to the supply we are beginning to see a leveling-off of prices throughout the state."

He noted that the Central Valley area traditionally follows the pattern set in the highly urbanized Los Angeles and San Francisco areas.

Interestingly, Blank added that the greatest frequency of sales, nearly 20 percent of the total, occurred in the $90,000 and more price bracket. Homes in the $50-$60,000 price bracket ranked second at 17.5 percent.

On other matters of both public and Realtor concern, Blank re-affirmed his Association's opposition to proposed federal enforcement of a 1902 law which would place a 160-acre limit on the size of farms using water from federally-funded irrigation projects.

He explained that the 1902 law was originally intended to offer family farmers low-cost irrigation water in arid areas, primarily in the western states. The Act, which Blank termed a "horse and buggy law" limits farm size to 160-acres per person, or 320 acres for a husband and wife residing "on or near" the property.

Since that time, more than a million acres of agricultural land has been irrigated with waters from federal projects with more than 85 percent of that land in California.

"Both the technology and economics of agriculture have changed dramatically in the past 55-years," Blank explained. "We can't expect California farmers, either large or small, to meet the nation's greatly expanded food needs by adding further federal restrictions on our functioning free enterprise system."

He said the Realtors intend to take the issue to Congress and the President, if needed, to block proposed Department of the Interior enforcement of the outdated law.

Property management seminar set

The full spectrum of property management will be explored by leading experts during a one-day seminar to be held at the Riviera in Palm Springs on Nov. 4.

Sponsored by the Property Management Division of the California Association of Realtors, the broad based seminar touches on management of such properties as condominiums, commercial and industrial facilities, office buildings, residential and resort developments and shopping centers.

According to Edward T. Clare Sr., CPM, chairman of the division and a participant in the seminar, the session is designed for the real estate professional, investor and members of the public interested in the "dollar and sense" of good property management. He said that the Palm Springs location was selected because of it's proximity to a wide variety of property uses including resorts.

Clare of San Diego, who will touch on such subjects as Owners Goals, Investment Properties, Operations and Making Money in Management, will be followed by Posey Carpentier, CPM, of Long Beach, who will present the Diarv of a Shopping Center Manager. She will be followed by Hans J. Prufer, CPM, of San Juan Capistrano, who will speak on the topic, How to Win in Small Claims Court.

The day-long seminar begins promptly at 9 a.m. and concludes at 4:30 p.m. with an hour and a half break for lunch.

Fee for the educational event, including all course materials, is $25 for members of the C.A.R. Property Management Division and $35 for non-members. Advance reservations are suggested and may be made by mailing checks to the California Association of Realtors — PMD, 505 Shatto Place, Los Angeles, CA 90020.

Energy efficient home displayed

RIVERSIDE — Bendix Home Systems, Inc. will display a totally balanced energy efficient home at the Dodger Mobile Home Show, November 2-13. Built for the average mobile homeowner at an affordable price, the display home will offer an energy conversation package that covers: Solar water heating, insulation for air infiltration control, devices for water saving and heating and recommendations for energy efficient mechanical systems, lighting and decor.

The Bendix Energy Efficient Home is the result of support technology conducted by the Bendix Research Laboratories, Southfield, Michigan.

At the Dodger Show, Bendix research personnel will demonstrate and answer questions about energy conservation. With the aid of $55,000 worth of camera equipment and infra-red lighting, viewers will see how air filters and heat is lost in the average home.

Americans still buying large homes

Despite rising energy costs and declining birth rates, Americans still are buying large homes, according to the National Association of Realtors. The number of Americans buying homes with four or more bedrooms increased to 26.6 percent in 1976 from 22.4 percent in 1968. The number of homes sold in the four-or-more-bedroom category in 1976 was only .2 percent below the percentage recorded in 1975.

UCB economist predicts spry '78 business year

LOS ANGELES (BW) — After a sluggish pace of economic activity early in 1978, which will be felt especially in the industrial sector, Los Angeles County will turn in a rather "spry" business performance in 1978, United California Bank (UCB) said.

Dr. Raymond Jallow, chief economist, in releasing the bank's 15th annual economic forecast, cited two prime reasons for this trend.

The first was continued population growth, which will add 42,000 new residents in 1978. The second was a "strong upsurge" in 1977 in commercial building — up more than 10 percent — and an "astounding surge" in industrial building activity, with permit valuations up more than 140 percent. Many of these facilities will become operational in 1978 and will provide a firm base for employment growth.

Jallow said, "almost all sectors of the county will contribute to the job market as some 64,000 new nonfarm positions open up next year.

"The local aircraft industry should stabilize after its mid-1977 setback of the shutdown of the B-1 program," Jallow said.

"Residential construction activity will not match the high level of this year and will drop 11 percent, with 34,000 new housing units expected. The supply/demand situation is basically favorable, but talk of rent controls will exert somewhat of a dampening influence on the construction of apartments.

"High work force participation will yield a median family income of $19,680," Jallow said. Total retail sales in 1978 will advance 10 percent to $29.4 billion, but competition for business will intensify.

"Los Angeles County will continue to experience an outflow of business and government leaders are aware of the problems and appear to be taking steps to remedy them."

Meadows II grand opening in Ontario

One- and two-story homes from $53,495 to $68,995

Celebrating the Grand Opening of Meadows II in Ontario, the homebuilding firm of American National Housing Corporation is offering three and four bedroom homes priced from $53,495 to $68,995. When completed, the newest development of the popular homes, near the Ontario National Golf Course, will contain approximately 252 one and two story residences.

"Originally built in Chino, the Meadows designs were so well received that we searched for another property where we could present another series and buyer interest has been so strong that we opened sales earlier than anticipated," said Jim Lenon, vice president of Sales and Marketing for the homebuilding firm.

"Along with re-introducing our 'Answer home', we have added a newly-designed floorplan with four bedrooms and a three-car garage. This two-story plan will satisfy families desiring the extra space not available in the Chino series."

One- and two-story homes at Meadows are offered in 4 different floorplans. Interiors range from 1,231 to 1,870 square feet of living space. A formal living room, dining area, family room and fully-featured kitchen form the core of the home with spacious master bedroom suite and family bedrooms and baths completing the plans.

Within the kitchen is a General Electric range, double oven, dishwasher and disposal. Ceramic tile countertops, hardwood cabinetry and luminous ceilings are standard in the large country kitchens.

Design features include formal entries, wood-burning fireplace located in the living room or family room, and direct entry to the attached garage. Wall-to-wall carpeting is installed throughout.

Master bedroom suites have a private bath and dressing area. Cultured onyx pullman tops and ceramic tile around showers and tubs are listed among the quality materials found throughout the home. Family bedrooms are generously proportioned and homes contain 2 baths.

Exterior styling for Meadows II homes display wood and stucco siding surrounding the recessed front entry, wide windows, and sliding glass doors. Wood trim, posts and wood shake roofs accent the exterior elevations available in a total of 12 different stylings. To compliment the interior package front yard landscaping and sprinklers and complete rear yard fencing is included.

Completed (and furnished) models, displaying the floor plans and features of the new homes, are open daily from 10 a.m. to 6 p.m. at Archibald. Buyers have reserved 28 homes in the first unit of 36 homes available for sale. Occupancy is scheduled for mid December with sales for unit two to begin October 30.

Located within easy range of schools of all levels in the Ontario Unified School District, Meadows II homes are close to neighborhood and regional shopping facilities. Parks, playgrounds and recreational opportunities surround the new development of family homes.

Access to the convenient California freeway system is nearby and leads to major employment and recreational centers in Los Angeles, Orange County, Riverside County and San Bernardino County. Local employment centers can be reached along wide throughfares and boulevards.

Females in Anglo-Saxon clans were called the "spindle side" of the family as they did all the spinning of flax into cloth. Women were not fit to marry until they had spun their dowry of linens. In 1665, the colony of Massachusetts passed a decree requiring every family to weave three pounds of cloth a week, and set up quotas based on the number of women in a household. Unmarried women were appointed as "spinsters" to meet the quotas.

Elect officers at convention

Realtors gunning for property tax relief

SAN DIEGO — The 100,000-member California Association of Realtors wound up its 73rd annual convention recently, electing a slate of 1978 officers and taking positions on a number of legislative actions ranging from property tax relief to opposition to proposed land use controls by the federal and state governments.

The convention, attended by more than 5,000 Realtors from throughout the state, opened following three-days of director and committee meetings at the Town and Country.

A political tone was set early during the week when directors voted unanimously to sponsor an initiative tax plan to achieve at least $700 million in homeowner and renter property tax relief along with controls to limit local government tax levies.

Expressing "disappointment" at the Legislature's failure to enact a property tax relief bill during the last session, C.A.R. President Jerome Blank of Albany said his association will be ready to circulate an initiative petition early next year if the Legislature is unable to bring promised relief to Californians.

"We are going to watch what the Legislature and governor do in the next few months," Blank said. "We hope they can do the job, but if they can't we will have a plan of our own ready to take to the voters."

In other actions, the Realtors also apposed enforcement of a 1902 law which would place a 160-acre limit on the size of western farms using water from federally funded irrigation projects.

Blank said his organization would make every effort to oppose the envorcement of the "outdated and restrictive" law.

"Both the technology and economics of agriculture have changed dramatically in the past 55 years," Blank explained. "We can't expect the farmers of California, either large or small, to produce to meet the state's expanded food needs by adding one further restrictive intervention on the free enterprise system."

The political tone of the convention continued as the Realtors were welcomed to San Diego by Mayor Pete Wilson at the opening session on Thursday. He struck a particularly responsive cord when he charged the governor and Legislature with failure to deliver property tax relief.

He took a hard line against what he termed "no-growth environmentalists," while describing Sao's "residential growth management" programs as a better alternative.

Wilson also took a shot at the governor and his director of planning and research, Bill Press, whose controversial Urban Policy Strategy came under heated debate during a land use conference later in the day.

"I do not appreciate the Office of Planning and Research dictating urban development strategy when that is properly a local matter," the mayor said.

Undisputed star of the day was former Texas Governor John B. Connally, who charged that the environmental policies practiced by some office holders were actually "hurting, not helping" the economy. He called "jobs" one of our most important natural resources.

The former governor, who also has served as both Secretary of the Navy and Treasury both under Democratic and Republican Administrations, claimed that consumer costs, included that of housing, were being raised due to the controls being put on products by governmental agencies such as the Federal Energy Commission and the Environmental Protection Agency.

Congressional bureaucrats were hit hard by Connally as he called for a limit on both Presidential and Congressional terms and for a break-up of the entrenched Washington bureaucracy.

Following a fast-paced schedule of concurrent conferences covering the entire gamet of realtor concerns, delegates to the 73rd annual convention adopted a 15-point 1978 Statement of Policy for the statewide orgainzation.

"We (will) continue to support and protect in every lawful manner the right of private ownership of property and the encouragement of private enterprise to the end that American ideals and free institutions shall be fostered and preserved," the preamble states in part.

Heading the list of statements was that of consumer protection in which the realtors reaffirmed their support for educational programs designed to inform the public and real estate licensees.

Other points covered in the five-page document included education, environment, financing, government regulations, license law, natural resources, professional standards, public policy, public service, rehabilitation, taxation and others.

Unanimously elected to serve as officers for 1978 were Don Wiedmann of San Diego as president, Clark Wallace of Moraga as first vice president and Sebastiano Sterpa of Burbank as treasurer.

Baldy building industry unit installs officers

The Baldy View Chapter of the Building Industry Association announced recently at its annual installation dinner dance the new Officers and Board of Directors for 1977-78.

Attending the dinner dance were 160 members of the Baldy View Chapter, representing builders, contractors, and associate members from all over the West End and Pomona Valley.

This year's installation afforded the largest turnout for such an event in the chapter's history. Until recently, Baldy View BIA was not recognized for the public leadership it was capable of providing. However, the recent sewer moratorium enacted by San Bernardino provided the opportunity for the chapter to demonstrate its organizational potential. Under the direction of outgoing president Jim Smirl, Vanguard Builders, Baldy View went into action in educating the public and presenting detailed information and data to the Board of Supervisors to argue its case. Facts, figures and specifics presented by the county planning staff were thoughtfully questioned and made to conform to the true realities of the overall complexities of the moratorium question. The end result was the establishment of an advisory committee to allocate available sewage allotments and allow sensible growth to continue.

"What we did, we did in the best interests of the public and for rights of individuals to own homes," said Jim Smirl. "We were confronted with a life-and-death situation that could not only stop our industry dead in its tracks, but cut the legs right out from under the whole economy of the West End," he said.

The momentum of Jim Smirl's leadership will be carried on by in-coming president, Jim Crowell, who stated in his acceptance speech, "We, as an industry, are faced with challenges that are every bit as serious as an imminent depression. We have an obligation to confront the problems of sewer moratoriums, school availability, arbitrary bureaucratic decision making, and many other problems in a positive and forthright manner. We cannot afford to lose, nor can the public, which depends on the income generated by our business."

Robert Arquilla, president of the 90,000-member National Association of Home Builders (NAHB), praised a plan to reorganize and streamline the Department of Housing and Urban Development (HUD) as a "major step in the right direction."

The reorganization, announced by Secretary of HUD Patricia Harris, is designed to improve the efficiency and effectiveness of the department. Also, it is supposed to provide a direct line of communication and authority between the HUD hierarchy (assistant secretaries) working in Washington and local field offices where HUD's $10 billion in housing programs and community development block grants are implemented and dispersed.

Arquilla noted that the proposed changes would result in a "substantial speedup" in processing time for builders who use federal housing programs or FHA financing to build single family homes or apartments.

"Once impliemented, the new management setup within HUD has the potential to eliminate many of the headaches and unnecessary delays now confronting builders who participate in federal programs," Arquilla said.

On a separate but related topic, Arquilla said that the Housing and Community Development Act of 1977 makes some significant changes in the FHA mortgage insurance program. The housing bill was signed recently by President Carter.

Arquilla pointed out that the bill raises the mortgage ceiling to $60,000

Johnson, first vice president and director of administration, Coldwell Banker Commercial Brokerage Co., is currently serving as vice president of the board, having been a member since 1969. With lots averaging one-half acre

Chino's Saddlewood country community offers growing room

Providing growing room inside and out, the new country estate community of Saddlewood in Chino offers three and four bedroom family homes situated on lots averaging one-half acre and is priced from $83,995.

Large enough to corral and maintain horses, the unusually large lots give families the opportunity to have a swimming pool, volleyball court, vegetable garden and landscaping with space for children to grow, study and play in a country environment.

One and two story Saddlewood homes ranging from 1,850 to 2,318 square feet provide families with interior growing room for children plus private retreats for adults in addition to formal entertaining areas.

Formal living and dining room areas are separated from family rooms and kitchens for easy traffic flow and zoning of activities. Simultaneous get-togethers for adults and teens can be scheduled without conflict, encouraging the home centered activities desired by single-family homeowners.

"Spacious homes on spacious lots have continued to be the number one priority of Americans because the privacy, convenience and comfort cannot be found with any other type of housing," said Jim Lenon, vice president of Sales and Marketing for American National Housing, builder and developer of Saddlewood country estates.

"Community involvement, civic responsibility, and respect for others are American values which many authorities agree is based upon our tradition of single-family home ownership," he continued.

Enhancing the new residential community is a neighborhood park within the boundaries. Picnic and barbecue facilities and a playground are maintained by the Saddlewood Homeowners Association for the use of occupants of the estates.

A complete equestrian center is accessible from the bridle trail system linking each lot. A training ring, wash-down area, water troughs, and horse trailer loading turn-around are provided where adults can work out and children can care for their own horses.

Surrounded by the farmlands and ranch country of west Chino, the new residential community preserves the character of the area, long noted for its rural atmosphere. Homeowners can easily reach the metropolitan centers of Los Angeles, Orange County and the San Gabriel Valley via the Riverside or Pomona Freeways.

Model homes displaying the three different floorplans and the long list of features included with each home are open daily from 10 a.m. to 6 p.m. The sales information center is located in the model complex.

To reach the new homes of Saddlewood, scheduled for occupancy in November, take the Corona Freeway (71) to the Chino Avenue exit. Drive east on Chino Avenue one block to the half-acre country estates in Chino. For further information, persons may call (714) 628-4761.

A first for South Carolina

Truluck needs luck for making wine in Lake City

By THOMAS C. COTHRAN
Associated Press Writer

LAKE CITY, S.C. (AP) — The flat, tobacco-growing countryside around Lake City bears no resemblance to the rolling hills of Burgundy. It doesn't look like Napa Valley in California either.

But there's a man there who aspires to make wine, despite the humidity and the soaring temperatures in summer.

"Nobody has ever produced a good tablewine in our area to know what they compare to," says Dr. James P. Truluck Jr., a dentist and part time vintner.

"The people we have been reaching in our sales are proud to drink a wine that is produced in South Carolina."

Truluck says he never drank wine before he served a two-year tour at Chateauroux Air Force Base in central France. Born and bred in Lake City, he had never spent much time anywhere else.

But he was a country boy hankerin' for culture, and he visited French vineyards in his off hours, developing a taste for wine.

"When we returned to Lake City, we were afraid to serve wine to our guests," says the 44-year-old dentist. "Nobody here drank wine."

But they do now. And the bottle many are reaching for bears the cream-colored label of Truluck Vineyards.

Truluck dreamed about the winery for several years after returning from France. He bought his 165-acre tract near Lake City, population 6,500, in the late 1960s, planted the first vines in 1972 and harvested the first grapes in 1974.

The first commercial bottling was in 1976, when he produced 1,400 gallons of wine. This year 4,000 gallons were produced, to be marketed So. Carolina.

Small local vintners can't hope to match the California winemakers, whose sales account for 80 percent of the wine sold in the South, Truluck says. "We're just trying to bring a common tablewine which is produced within 200 to 300 miles of every Southerner," he said.

inches of mineral fiber blanket or its equivalent) and an R-14 insulation value for walls (insulation plus exterior sheathing) for homes equipped with heat pumps, oil or electric resistance heating systems and electric air conditioning. However, because natural gas is less expensive compared to other fuels in the Washington area, the NAHB guidelines call for only R-19 insulation in the attics of gas-heated, electrically-cooled homes. The wall insulation value remains the same at R-14. Double-glazed windows or storm windows are recommended for all Washington homes.

"The NAHB guidelines meet or exceed other energy construction standards now in existence, including the Federal Housing Administration's Minimum Property Standards," said Alan Trellis, director of NAHB's technical services department.

Ivan Wohlworth, a builder from Hicksville, N.Y., who is cochairman of NAHB's special committee on energy, stressed the local application of the new guidelines. "No longer must home buyers waste money on energy conserving features where they may not be needed. Likewise, there are many areas where we can save substantial amounts of energy by adding specific construction features to the homes we build," he said.

"Obviously," Wohlworth said, "the more insulation we use in homes, the more energy we save. But there is a point of diminishing return. To be realistic and practical, the amount of insulation we use must be tied to how much money we can afford to invest and how much money we can recover through energy cost savings in a reasonable period of time."

The NAHB guidelines call for more energy conserving measures in areas where the climate is very severe and fuel costs are high.

The guidelines were developed by the association's wholly owned subsidiary, the NAHB Research Foundation, Inc., in cooperation with NAHB's technical staff and a special builder committee.

NAHB has begun a series of special seminars throughout the country to explain the program to builders and others interested in this new approach to energy conservation. Remaining seminars on the schedule include: Oct. 31-Nov. 1, Stouffer's Denver Inn, Denver, Co.; Nov. 17-18, Sheraton Center, Oklahoma City, Ok.; Nov. 21-22, Regency O'Hare Hotel, Chicago, Il.; Dec. 1-2, Hyatt Regency Hotel, Phoenix, Az.; and Dec. 14-15, Royal Sonesta Hotel, New Orleans, La.

10,000 women sterilized

Singapore making strides in limiting size of families

By S.V. SUPPIAH

SINGAPORE (AP) — Nearly 10,000 women were sterilized in Singapore last year. During the past seven years, more than 47,900 women have been sterilized, while 2,000 men have undergone vasectomy operations.

Last year 12,900 women had abortions in government hospitals, where government doctors have performed 45,500 abortions since 1970.

The Singapore Family Planning and Population Board said most women cited "financial difficulties" as the reason for seeking sterilization, which costs $2 in government hospitals. An abortion costs about $4.

The board estimated that more than 273,000 births were prevented as a result of abortions, sterilization, use of the pill and other contraceptives between the years 1966-75.

The number of working mothers last year swelled to 44 percent of the labor force, going up from 21 percent in 1957.

Limiting the size of the family has become a compelling necessity for the majority. The alternative is a heavy financial burden and great inconvenience.

More than 31 percent of the labor force of 835,000 earn less than $81 monthly, while another 42 percent earn less than $163.

The government discourages large families by giving income tax concessions only for the first three children, imposing a stiff maternity hospital charge of $200 for the fourth child, who gets no preference in attending schools near his home, and giving low priority in housing to such families.

Now more than 107,000 women have started to plan their families to conform to the slogan, "Two is enough."

Singapore has been very successful in sharply reducing its birth rate from 4.7 percent in 1958 to 1.4 percent last year.

The majority, or 76 percent, of the population of 2.2 million is Chinese; 15 percent Malays; 7 percent from the Indian subcontinent.

The Chinese, who do not necessarily subscribe to traditional moral considerations, have set the pace by keeping their families small. Such considerations, on the other hand, may be discussed at length by some Indians, Malays and Eurasian and Chinese Catholics.

But they have to face reality. "The more you have the less they get" is a slogan that cannot be easily ignored.

The board hopes to "dissuade" young people from getting married early and, if they do, to encourage them to "space the birth" of their children.

Orthodox men and women are said to feel deeply disturbed by these measures, which may even create other social problems. But it is predicted that Singapore, an island of 225 square miles, will have a population of 3.5 million by the year 2030, when zero growth rate has been achieved by "replacement."

Singapore's materialistic outlook and drastic solution to the population problem cannot be duplicated or imitated even by immediate neighbors Malaysia and Indonesia, where family planning is not popular.

However, compact Singapore, though tiny in size, hopes to remain slim and sleek in terms of population size.

Who's afraid, why?

Who's afraid? Just about everyone. How much do you know about the psychology of fear? Here's an opportunity to test yourself.

1. If you fear flying, it's probably because you had a bad fight in the past.
True ( ) False ( )

2. Men express as much fear of flying as women.
True ( ) False ( )

3. Hypochondria is often a response to deep depression.
True ( ) False ( )

4. Healthy children do not suffer from fears.
True ( ) False ( )

5. Fear is contagious.
True ( ) False ( )

6. Some people get married primarily because of fear.
True ( ) False ( )

7. People with nervous disorders are more predisposed to phobias than those who are not nervous.
True ( ) False ( )

8. There are no positive aspects of fear.
True ( ) False ( )

ANSWERS:

1. FALSE. Surprisingly, a bad fight seems to have nothing to do with fear of flying.

2. FALSE. Only 7 percent of the men questioned in a study of flying expressed fear as compared to 20 percent of the women. However, this only may be further proof that men are more reluctant to admit fear.

3. TRUE. Sickness is a way of life for hypochondriacs but, according to Dr. Louis Rittlemeyer, associate professor of psychiatry at Georgetown University, many hypochondriacs suffer from underlying depression. Hypochondria protects a person from becoming more depressed.

4. FALSE. According to a study by the Foundation for Child Development, healthy children are beset with a variety of fears, including fear of violent TV programs, of strangers, even of their fathers.

5. TRUE. When a parent shows fear, a child adds this anxiety to his own. In this way, fear can sweep through a family. It can also be transmitted from one adult to another.

6. TRUE. According to Princeton University philosopher Walter Kaufmann, millions of Americans get married because they are afraid to make decisions on their own.

7. FALSE. This apparently isn't true. Dr. Henry Pechstein, a psychiatrist, says that only about 20 percent of people suffering from nervous disorders complain of phobias.

8. FALSE. Normal fear is an alarm mechanism which warns us of danger. Without it, we probably wouldn't live very long. On the other hand, if the alarm rings all the time, we can become crippled by fear that has no basis in reality.

Fine Arts slates Armour program

Author-humorist-satirist Richard Armour will speak to members and guests of the Fine Arts Foundation of Scripps College Tuesday at 2 p.m. in the Humanities Auditorium on the Scripps campus.

Armour will discuss his latest and 55th book, "It All Started with Nudes," which he describes as the shortest and most playful of any book on the history of art. Although the major purpose of the book is to entertain, he says, it will also enlighten those who know nothing or little of the history of art, and the informed may learn some odd bits of information not generally gleaned from histories of art.

The book will be available for purchase at the tea in the Lang Art Gallery following the lecture, and the author will autograph copies.

A Phi Beta Kappa graduate of Pomona College and a Harvard Ph. D., teacher and former dean, Armour claims his work conducting tours for six years through European galleries and museums was an important experience for writing his latest book.

He did the research for the book in the art history collection of the Denison Library on the Scripps College campus. The library is currently exhibiting all the manuscripts, drafts, corrections, galleys and correspondence associated with the book as well as the sketches and drawings of the book's illustrator, Campbell Grant. Grant is a teacher of art and history who has illustrated 14 of Armour's books.

Members and their guests attending the lecture and tea will be able to view selections of American art from the permanent collections of Scripps and Pomona colleges, including paintings, drawings and prints by Inness, Cassatt, Hassam and Prendergast hanging in Lang Gallery. It will be the last day of the exhibit.

UNICEF marks 31 years of aid

It is estimated that more than 100 million children under five are still severely malnourished, and 90 percent of the young children who die each year could be saved with simple preventive measures.

A primary goal of UNICEF over the years has been to assist developing countries in their fight to overcome their hunger problems. To this end, UNICEF approaches the task in a variety of ways, such as instructing mothers in proper diet techniques and stocking ponds with protein-rich fish in rural villages. This village level self-help model is designed to prepare people for self-sufficiency after initial aid and education.

Because public awareness of the efforts of UNICEF is essential to the ultimate success of UNICEF projects, multicultural education has been initiated in the public schools here. The program is designed to strengthen the ties of children in the industrialized nations with those in undeveloped countries.

Educational materials including films, maps, pictures and books about food, songs, dances and games enjoyed by children around the world, are available to aid in furthering international understanding among children.

Radiator paint

Using special radiator paint can increase heating efficiency 25 percent over metallic or glossy paints on radiators, says the Nov. 15 issue of Family Circle.

Chapter meeting planned

Mrs. E. W. Rickenberg will present a program, "Bells and Dolls," for members of Chapter C. S. PEO Sisterhood when the group meets at 7:30 p.m., Tuesday.

Hostess for the meeting will be Mrs. A. C. Searfoss, 12816 Lewis St., Chino. Assisting hostesses will be Mrs. Laura Butters and Mrs. G. F. Litel.

Book sales rise as literacy falls

"(Many magazines which review books) reflect an automatic superiority among people who read books. It is almost like an intellectual Mafia; the converted talking to the converted. A new novel will be discussed purely in reference to the author's previous work . . . " Baker said, explaining the popular appeal of Bookviews.

By NORMAN NADEL

NEW YORK (NEA) — Americans are buying more books than ever before in the nation's history, and nobody can say precisely why.

If anything, the signs point in the oppoiste direction. Books today cost more than they ever did. The economy has been depressed, with unemployment still higher than it should be. According to an endless stream of reports over the past 20 years, children are not learning to read as well as they should. Young people are entering college — or trying to enter — with only ninth grade, or eighth, or seventh grade reading ability. Many college graduates cannot use the English language properly, or write a coherent, correct letter. Surveys indicate that hours once spent reading are now spent watching television.

The number of new books published each year increased steadily for a period, then levelled off in the past two or three, but at an extremely high level. Presently, about 30,000 new titles appear annually in the U.S., plus 10,000 reprints or new editions of books formerly published, for a total or 40,000. The number of copies of each new book or reprint can range from about 5,000 (sometimes less) up into the millions.

One important index, according to John F. Baker, editor of a new magazine, Bookviews, is the increase in the number of bookstores, not only in New York, which always has dominated book-selling and buying, but all around the country.

"Particularly startling in recent years is the expansion of the big book-selling chains," notes Baker. "BRENTANO'S, Walden's and B. Dalton, for example, have been opening in the big shopping centers. Areas such as the South and Southwest, that might have been without a bookstore for 100 miles around a particular community, now have one, conveniently located, with a good stock, attractive lighting and all the attraction, and they're doing business.

"We don't know who's buying the books. The book industry is probably the least market-research-oriented of any major industry. But we do know, for example, that in the last two years both fiction and non-fiction best-sellers sold far more copies than in previous years. It took a total sale of 120,000 or more copies to make the hard-cover best-seller lists in 1976, whereas in previous years you could make it with about 80,000. As for the mass market paperbacks, two or three years ago about 40 or 45 titles would sell a million or more copies annually.

Last year there were 53 or 54 million-plus paperbacks. And this is happening all over the country."

One upbeat result of this is the appearance of the new monthly Bookviews, at a time when magazines generally are having a difficult time, due primarily to new and expensive postal regulations. Published by the R. R. Bowker Company, a Xerox affiliate , previously best known for Publishers Weekly and Library Journal, the new and fairly breezy mag is aimed at the general public whereas the two established ones are trade-oriented.

"Harper's, The Atlantic, The New Yorker, the New York Times Book Review, The New York Review of Books and Saturday Review, among others, all review books," explains Baker. "But many of those reflect an automatic assumption of superiority among people who read books. It is almost like an intellectual Mafia: the converted talking to the converted. A new novel will be discussed purely in reference to the author's previous work, and whether it shows growth and development, or decline. Cheever's "Falconer" was a recent example of that.

"What's left is a good, meaty, consumerish sort of review. Crisp, to the point, seldom more than 250 or 300 words on a book; it gives the lay reader a pretty good idea about what the book is like. One bookseller, after reading our first issue, told me: 'You've created a Publishers Weekly for the people.' That made me feel good."

In addition to reviews, the new magazine offers longer articles, such as Alistair Cooke talking about books and TV, and newspaper columnist Ann Landers choosing her favorite psychological self-help books, in the September debut issue. The October issue tells about the Irving Wallaces ("the family that writer together makes millions together"), and offers Julia Childs, describing her favorite cookbooks.

First issue of Bookviews, available in the bookstores, went faster than Baker or anybody else expected. Apparently all those people who are buying books these days, for their own mysterious reasons, also like to read about books as well.

Digital watchmakers dropping from market

AP Newsfeatures

Time is running out on some solid state watches. Extensive engineering, expense, production and testing have gone into the evolution of the digital watch which, unlike conventional watches, has no watch movements — balance wheel, tuning fork and the like.

But that complex mechanism has created problems. A number of traditional watchmakers — for example, Gruen and Benrus — have become dropouts from the digital watch market. Some semiconductor companies have abandoned digital business. Fairchild has reported an $8 million pretax loss on digital watches in the second quarter, according to Business Week.

A digital watch is not a simple timepiece that anyone can repair. An entire module may need to be replaced at a factory, which has the complex electronic equipment needed for module testing — something the consumer should know.

There are 35,000 watch makers and jewelers who can service, repair and adjust conventional watches, electronic tuning fork watches and quartz watches with conventional dials. In contrast, "there are no experts in retail stores who have been trained to repair solid state watches," the Bulova Time Center says.

In addition, there are no standards for the hundreds of modules of digital watches — one reason inexperienced people cannot repair them — or for minibatteries or for battery replacement procedures. Some types of watches, such as the light-emitting diodes (LEDs), may have complicated setting procedures that burn up their lives quickly. In fact, this year there has been a big shift from watches with the LEDs to the models with liquid crystal displays known as LCDs, reports the business news magazine.

Typical quartz crystals used in quality, solid-state digital watches keep time by vibrating 32,768 times a second. Some watches may need regulation for accuracy, and only a watch rate measuring timer, an electronic instrument used by jewelers, can be used for that purpose.

The public's confusion is compounded by retailers who do not know enough about these watches to provide service, industry sources say. Two years ago when a million solid state watches were retailed, some stores reported a 60 percent return of new watches due to malfunction. In 1976 jewelers reported returns of 30 to 40 percent, whereas returns of handwound watches were at the rate of only 1 percent.

Some module assemblers did not make proper tests necessary to these complicated mechanisms, according to industry sources, and many solid state watches were of poor quality — a great many selling for a few dollars. A lot of intricate circuitry is involved in time and calendar displays on watches in dividing down the high frequency to hours, minutes, months. Such watches must be meticulously assembled.

LCD-type digital watches display time by light reflection and are minibattery-powered for continuous operation, usually 12 months; LED models light when a button is pushed, burning energy rapidly and often bringing complaints of short battery life by consumers.

Sales people should be equipped to demonstrate performance and features, and should be able to set the watch accurately to the second, minute, hour and day of the week. The store should carry the minibatteries that are needed and be equipped to change them, industry sources suggest, although a jewelry shop can provide these services.

Monetary leadership vs. economic generalship

Carter, Burns square off for a 'heavyweight' fight

By JOHN CUNNIFF
AP Business Analyst

NEW YORK (AP) — They're not yet shouting like Muhammad Ali and Joe Frazier, but Arthur Burns and President Jimmy Carter are leading up to the best heavyweight fight since those two boxers met.

Carter threw the first dart last week when in effect he warned the Federal Reserve, of which Burns is chairman, to refrain from needlessly raising interest rates and hurting the economy.

Burns replied Tuesday in Spokane, Wash., when he told an audience that the economy's poor performance is a consequence not so much of his monetary leadership as that of the President's poor economic generalship.

Neither of the two darts carried their messages explicitly. The words were couched in the language of domestic diplomacy, but they were on target and they stung as badly as a punch in the face.

This is a class confrontation whose meaning cannot be minimized. It is more than a battle between monetarists and fiscalists as to who effects the biggest economic changes. It is a battle of philosophies.

Burns has always represented what is usually called a conservative viewpoint. He abhors federal deficits. He believes the nation's greatest enemy is inflation. He believes that free enterprise is the way to go.

President Carter has stated his agreement with those beliefs, but in Burns' view, and in the views of many others, he has contradicted himself in practice, and Burns seems to feel that therein lies the problem with the economy.

Burns' response to Carter's challenge was centered on the importance, the need — in fact, it could be said, of the absolute necessity of — corporate profits. Without profits, he said in effect, Carter could make no headway.

He defended the independence of the Fed, the nation's central bank, and he demonstrated that independence by saying he would go right ahead if necessary with a tighter monetary policy — money supply and its cost — that his board attempts to control.

But he went far beyond a defense of monetary policy when he criticized the uncertainty over energy policy, environmental codes, taxes, government regulation and dedication to fighting inflation. Doubt was eroding confidence, he suggested.

Burns drew in some powerful allies from the business world who have been complaining about the same thing, arguing that it is foolhardy for them to spend when they don't know what the future brings.

This community of interest, which includes banking and heavy industry, is in a quiet fury over what it feels is a lack of leadership from Washington, as well as wasteful intrusion from its bureaucrats.

Given some assurance, it has been saying, and provided with assurance also that Washington will keep out of its affairs at least until it can gather momentum, it can raise production, produce jobs and pay its taxes.

But Burns also has many, many critics. A huge school of thought which has many squabbles within itself is in agreement that the blame for the current economic malaise belongs to Burns and bankers and big business.

Burns especially has been criticized, mainly because of what is seen as an erratic administration of the money supply, permitting it to grow too fast and then being forced to cut back, pushing up interest rates and slowing economic activity.

The bases of these disputes are deep and involved, and we still might not get a clear resolution as the fight develops. But as the language becomes more explicit, finally we might obtain a clear exposition of the issues.

That is, if the two battlers don't call off the fight as being too dangerous to their individual and mutual interests.

Couple is trucking as team

LAKELAND, Fla. (AP) — Two years ago, Jackie Tisch couldn't drive a stick-shift car. Now she's with her husband, driving a 42-foot tractor-trailer cross-country.

"I was tired of my job and I hated being separated from my husband days at a time," says Mrs. Tisch, 29, who had been a dental assistant for six years.

"Larry borrowed a truck from a dealer and taught me to drive. We would go to a football stadium up north where I drove around and around in a snow-packed field until I mastered the gears," she says.

She took her chauffeurs's test, passed and joined her husband at the wheel.

They sold their home and furniture and bought a $52,000 refrigerated rig that Mrs. Tisch says "was worth twice as much as our home."

They now live in the truck.

"It's not as bad as it sounds," she says. "We had plenty of room for three large pieces of luggage, a train case and two sets of golf clubs."

They have a double-wide sleeper behind the cab, a stereo, television set, radio and CB set.

They aim for 1,000 miles a day and travel mostly interstate highways at nights when they can to make the best time.

The only problem, she says, is food.

"All menus look the same after a couple of days on the road. Have you ever heard a place with a bunch of trucks in front of it is a good place to eat? Don't believe it. Truckers are there because there's room to park, food service is fast and they gas up there."

What about spats?

"Oh, we have lots of fights," says Mrs. Tisch. "When I get mad, I just go in the other room and pout."

WATERBED INVENTOR — Charlie Hall, inventor of the waterbed, explains away misconceptions about waterbeds. "Actually, although I hate to say anything negative about waterbeds, as far as sex goes, well, that's not the best part."

Man-powered airplanes not practical

Paul MacCready, an aerodynamics engineer, was told recently he had received the Royal Aeronautical Society's prize for designing the Gossamer Condor.

After two unsuccessful attempts, a bicycle racer on Aug. 23 piloted the primitive, pedal-powered plane along the Society's prescribed three-mile figure-eight course, set up at Shafter Airport in rural Kern County.

"Man-powered airplanes aren't practical," he said, "but they may enliven people's spirits. They can use them for recreation like sailboats.

"People are realizing that we're at last achieving a goal that man has had for thousands of years, and that has been neglected since power began being put into aircraft," MacCready said. "A lot of other goals have been achieved in between. But now at last this one also has been accomplished."

MacCready said the plane still was not perfected, but he said when it is, average bicyclists will be able to operate it.

British businessman and aviation enthusiast Henry Kremer offered the 5,000-pound prize 18 years ago to anyone who could design a man-powered aircraft. The prize money has been steadily increased since then.

MacCready, president of a Pasadena energy and environmental research firm called AeroVironment, attributes his success to his departure from tradition.

"Virtually everyone else did it conventionally," he explained. "They were trapped into making elegant, streamlined vehicles that took thousands of hours to build and thousands of dollars to repair."

In contrast, MacCready said his crudity allowed him to do 12 substantial revisions on his craft within a year.

The plane, with a 96-foot wingspan, is built of super-strength "Mylar" plastic ribbed with aluminum tubing, bordered by light plastic and held together with piano wire.

The pilot propels the vehicle by pedaling a bicycle chain which turns a propellor behind the cockpit. The plane is maneuvered with a handle that elevates a smaller, frontal wing.

"If people had used the same approach, they could have done this in 1915 or 1925," said MacCready.

The father of waterbed

Jello-bed was interesting, but not a path to riches

By STEPHEN FOX
AP Business Writer

LOS ANGELES (AP) — Inventing the waterbed didn't make Charlie Hall rich or famous, but it did leave him with some interesting memories involving Jello.

Now 34, Hall was a design student living in San Francisco's Haight-Ashbury district when he came up with the forerunner of the waterbed 10 years ago. His invention, actually a vinyl bag filled with 300 pounds of Jello and styrene pellets, "was interesting but not successful, because you needed a forklift to move it."

There were other problems. The bag developed a leak and Jello began oozing into the downstairs apartment. Hall decided it had to go.

"There was all this goo mixed with styrene beads," he recalls, "I was afraid it would clog the toilet and I couldn't just throw it out. So I ended up taking it out at night in little bags and putting them in garbage cans at the beach."

Hall persevered, substituting water for Jello and adding a frame and heater. An art gallery invited him to show his invention and he came up with an eight-foot square waterbed covered in red velvet and dubbed "The Pleasure Pit."

"It was a big hit," he said, "I thought the merits of the waterbed would be seen immediately."

It didn't work out that way. Waterbeds, says Hall, were viewed as part of the "Hashbury" hippie culture, another example of California craziness.

"People saw these undulations and there were all these hippie and sex connotations," he said. "Actually, although I hate to say anything negative about waterbeds, as far as sex goes, well, that's not the best part. Waterbeds are for sleeping."

Hall and members of what is now a $135-million-a-year industry are fighting "waterbed misconceptions" through a public relations campaign which the American Waterbed Council says "is designed to achieve the AWC's goal of obtaining consumer waterbed acceptance by skillful use of the media." The campaign, launched here this week, will also "counter negative publicity such as the current water shortage in California," the AWC says.

Hall, whose own waterbed company went bankrupt, never made much money from his patent. He has since returned to inventing and has marketed several other products. But he also leaves his Bay Area home for frequent waterbed promotions, which he describes as "a bit of a different thing."

Waterbeds account for about four per cent of national bed sales today, the AWC says, with 15 per cent of California's 20 million residents supposedly floating on them each night. Heavier vinyl and improved construction methods have eliminated leakage problems and today an "average" waterbed and accessories costs between $500 and $800. Water is not included.

Walkers coming to mall

Walker's of Long Beach is coming to the Pomona Mall on Thursday.

The Walker philosophy is based on giving customers the most for their money by eliminating operational frills but not product quality.

Walker's of Long Beach has an enviable 43-year reputation as a merchandiser of high quality fashions. The new Pomona Mall store (located in the former Nash building) features a complete selection of ladies dresses and sportswear, coats, suits, lingerie and accessories as well as a fully-stocked men's department.

Reliable replacement sought for dwindling resource

Fears of natural gas shortage prompts search for alternatives

By MARTIN MERZER
AP Business Writer

COLUMBUS, Ohio (AP) — Dean Sweet, like hundreds of American business executives, saw only two choices during last year's severe natural gas shortage. He could make arrangements for another fuel — or he could close up shop.

"We had a 30 percent curtailment last year, and it was mighty cold," said Sweet, who owns a company in Ohio which makes grain storage equipment. "Necessity is the mother of invention, so we scrambled around and bought 15 oil-fired space heaters."

But that was just a temporary measure to get through last winter's bitter cold, and this winter, too, if the anticipated gas shortage materializes. Sweet still is searching for a reliable, inexpensive and permanent replacement for natural gas, a declining resource.

Federal officials estimate that natural gas provides 40 per cent of all industrial heat and power in the United States, and hundreds, perhaps thousands of companies are in the process of switching to alternate fuels. There has been no survey to determine the number.

With winter approaching, some gas companies already have announced curtailments for large industrial users. Numerous factories in the Midwest, where the crisis was most severe last winter, and elsewhere are being forced by necessity — and, in a few cases, government edict — to switch from natural gas to other fuels.

The alternatives — all of which have drawbacks — are diverse, ranging from oil and coal to more esoteric fuels such as synthetic gas and garbage, including corn husks and other agricultural wastes. Some firms even are drilling for their own supplies of natural gas.

The plant, a 30-acre complex about 50 miles from Columbus, turns out 230 buses and trucks daily, using 3,000 employes on two shifts.

International Harvester has been told by the local utility that it will get no gas at all for heating the plant this winter. So, like several other large companies, it is searching for its own gas.

Seventeen wells have been drilled in southeastern Ohio at a cost of $2.5 million, and the firm hopes to produce enough gas to keep its Springfield plant and three others running all winter.

"The severity differs from point to point in the country," said Mike Petersen, International Harvester's Chicago based manager of energy operations. "But in Ohio, it's the worst. As a consequence, Ohio is on the leading edge of dealing with it."

Many in the state, which gets 45 percent of its wealth and 34 percent of its employment from manufacturing, blame Columbia Gas of Ohio for the situation. They say most other areas were better able to withstand last winter's crunch than those served by Columbia.

Utility officials blame the federal and state governments for delays in granting approval for gas storage facilities and emergency purchases of gas. The company says additional storage facilities have been located, and only large plants should suffer curtailments this winter.

In the past few years, most major corporations have assigned top executives to find new sources of industrial energy.

"Energy is such a very significant part of our activities, and the economics are such, that you can't afford to stand still," said Wally Allaire, corporate director for energy resources at Allied Chemical Corp. in Morristown, N.J. "I report to the president of the company, and that's true in all of the biggies."

Allied, like other chemical companies, can't do much about shortages of gas and oil "feedstocks" from which chemicals are made. But Allied has done something about the heating in its several dozen plants. Each has installed a system that can burn oil in place of natural gas.

"It cost us several million by the time we got through," Allaire said. "But it paid off last year. We would have had to shut down."

Many other firms are switching to oil. Demand for the two most common forms of industrial fuel oil was up 11 percent and 21 percent this past August as companies began stockpiling for the winter.

But another oil shortage is always possible and oil is more expensive than natural gas. So some firms are installing, and many more are considering, coal-burning equipment.

Coal accounts for 90 percent of the nation's fossil fuel supplies. But last year, it was the source of only 18 percent of industrial energy, and that was half of coal usage in 1955 — before clean-air considerations forced many firms to switch from coal to gas and oil.

Industrial conversion to coal is key to President

Reports reveal economic life

NEW YORK (AP) — Just when a lot of people were getting accustomed to the notion that the nation's economy was sinking into a quagmire, a few reports were issued that tend to riddle the notion:

—Machine tool orders, or orders for equipment that will be used in making other goods, spurted in August after declining in June.

—The level of orders at the nation's factories rose in August for the first time since May.

—The Index of Leading Economic Indicators also rose in the same months after having declined for two months earlier this year — and three straight until the July figures were revised from a minus to a plus. What all these indicators share in common is the future; they are all indicators of further economic activity. They represent commitments to that activity.

There is additional evidence of some underlying strength in some of the other individual indicators. Capital spending plans are moving up. So are building permits. Again, these are signs of activity to come.

It doesn't take much to change the kaleidoscopic pattern of the economy, just a one-month shakeup of the indicators. The change can develop with remarkable speed.

The stock market, for instance, is one of those leading economic indicators. When other components of the leading index show strength the stock market is inclined to rise as a consequence. And in rising, it contributes further to a rise in the index, of which it is a component.

A one-month rise after three months of weakness might not be enough to dispel the fog and drizzle that has been dampening Wall Street's outlook, but it should quiet for the time being some of the fog horns of disaster.

For months, their gloomy voices have been telling a tale of woe to come, of an international economy mired in recession, of inflation raging throughout the world, of problems beyond our ability to deal with.

To deny there are serious problems is to close the eyes to reality.

To name a few: teen-age unemployment, the plight of the debt-ridden poorer nations, the difficulty of maintaining free trade when jobs are lost to unfair competition, overregulation, underutilization of capacity.

The stock market, which is supposed to represent the investment community's attitude toward the future, is a special case of its own, depressed for reasons that many experts are at a loss to explain.

There are serious social and economic problems that seldom catch the headlines. The difficulties involved in starting a small business, for example. The lack of training programs to facilitate the employment of youngsters.

But to gather all the problems into a patchwork quilt and then try to spread it over the entire economy is just as unrealistic.

Those recent expressions of confidence in the economic future, for example, cannot be covered by the blanket. They protrude.

New orders at the nation's factories, a healthy level of building permits, orders for new machine tools, and financial commitments to new plants and equipment are the reality — or else the money so committed doesn't mean thing.

Expanded cable TV predicted

SAN DIEGO (AP) — An advertising executive says almost one-third of all Americans will have cable television in their homes by 1981 with the trend cutting into revenues of TV networks.

The prediction is made by Edward N. Ney, board chairman of Young & Rubicam, Inc., of New York. He spoke Monday to the American Advertising Agencies Association of which he also is chairman.

"We think the cable TV industry advertising availability will hurt the large TV networks and might hurt some magazines, too," Ney said in an interview later.

But the expanding Cable TV industry is an attractive alternative to the big networks which are increasing time charges, said Ney.

There are 12 million cable TV subscribers in the United States, "a 17 percent penetration in the market," he said.

Natural gas shortage fears prompt search—

Carter's energy program, and although the government can order large plants to convert to coal, it has moved slowly. Only 60 plants have received such orders.

The conversion is expensive. "It's not the kind of decision you make for economic reasons,' said a Goodyear Tire & Rubber Co. official.

Goodyear is spending $12 million for coal-burning equipment at a tire plant in Lawton, Okla. An oil or gas boiler would cost $2.5 million.

"In 1974, we had to switch back to coal," said plant manager George Rayer. "It was simply a matter of not having any other fuels to use."

The company received federal permission to return to coal after promising to construct an $8 million anti-pollution system. Now it uses 400-700 tons of coal each day.

"We were lucky," Rayer said. "We already had the coalburning equipment, and it only needed some adjustments. And we're near steady supplies of coal."

But many other firms, big and small, are not so lucky. International Harvester, which never used coal at its Springfield assembly plant, estimates that it will cost $15-20 million to convert.

To help offset the cost of building coal-burning facilities, Allied, International Harvester and other large firms are considering proposals to build huge plants in cooperation with other nearby factories. All the plants in an area would share costs and energy.

Synthetic gas, produced from coal, once was widely used. But the development of cheaper natural gas killed the coal gas industry.

Now, several firms are gearing up to produce the gas again, but there isn't much of a market because coal gas costs more than natural gas.

Garbage is also becoming an industrial energy alternative to gas, oil and coal, and it burns cleaner than the others.

So Bill Smith, the superintendent of facilities, began looking for an alternate fuel supply. Coal-burning equipment was found to be too expensive, and oil supplies too unreliable.

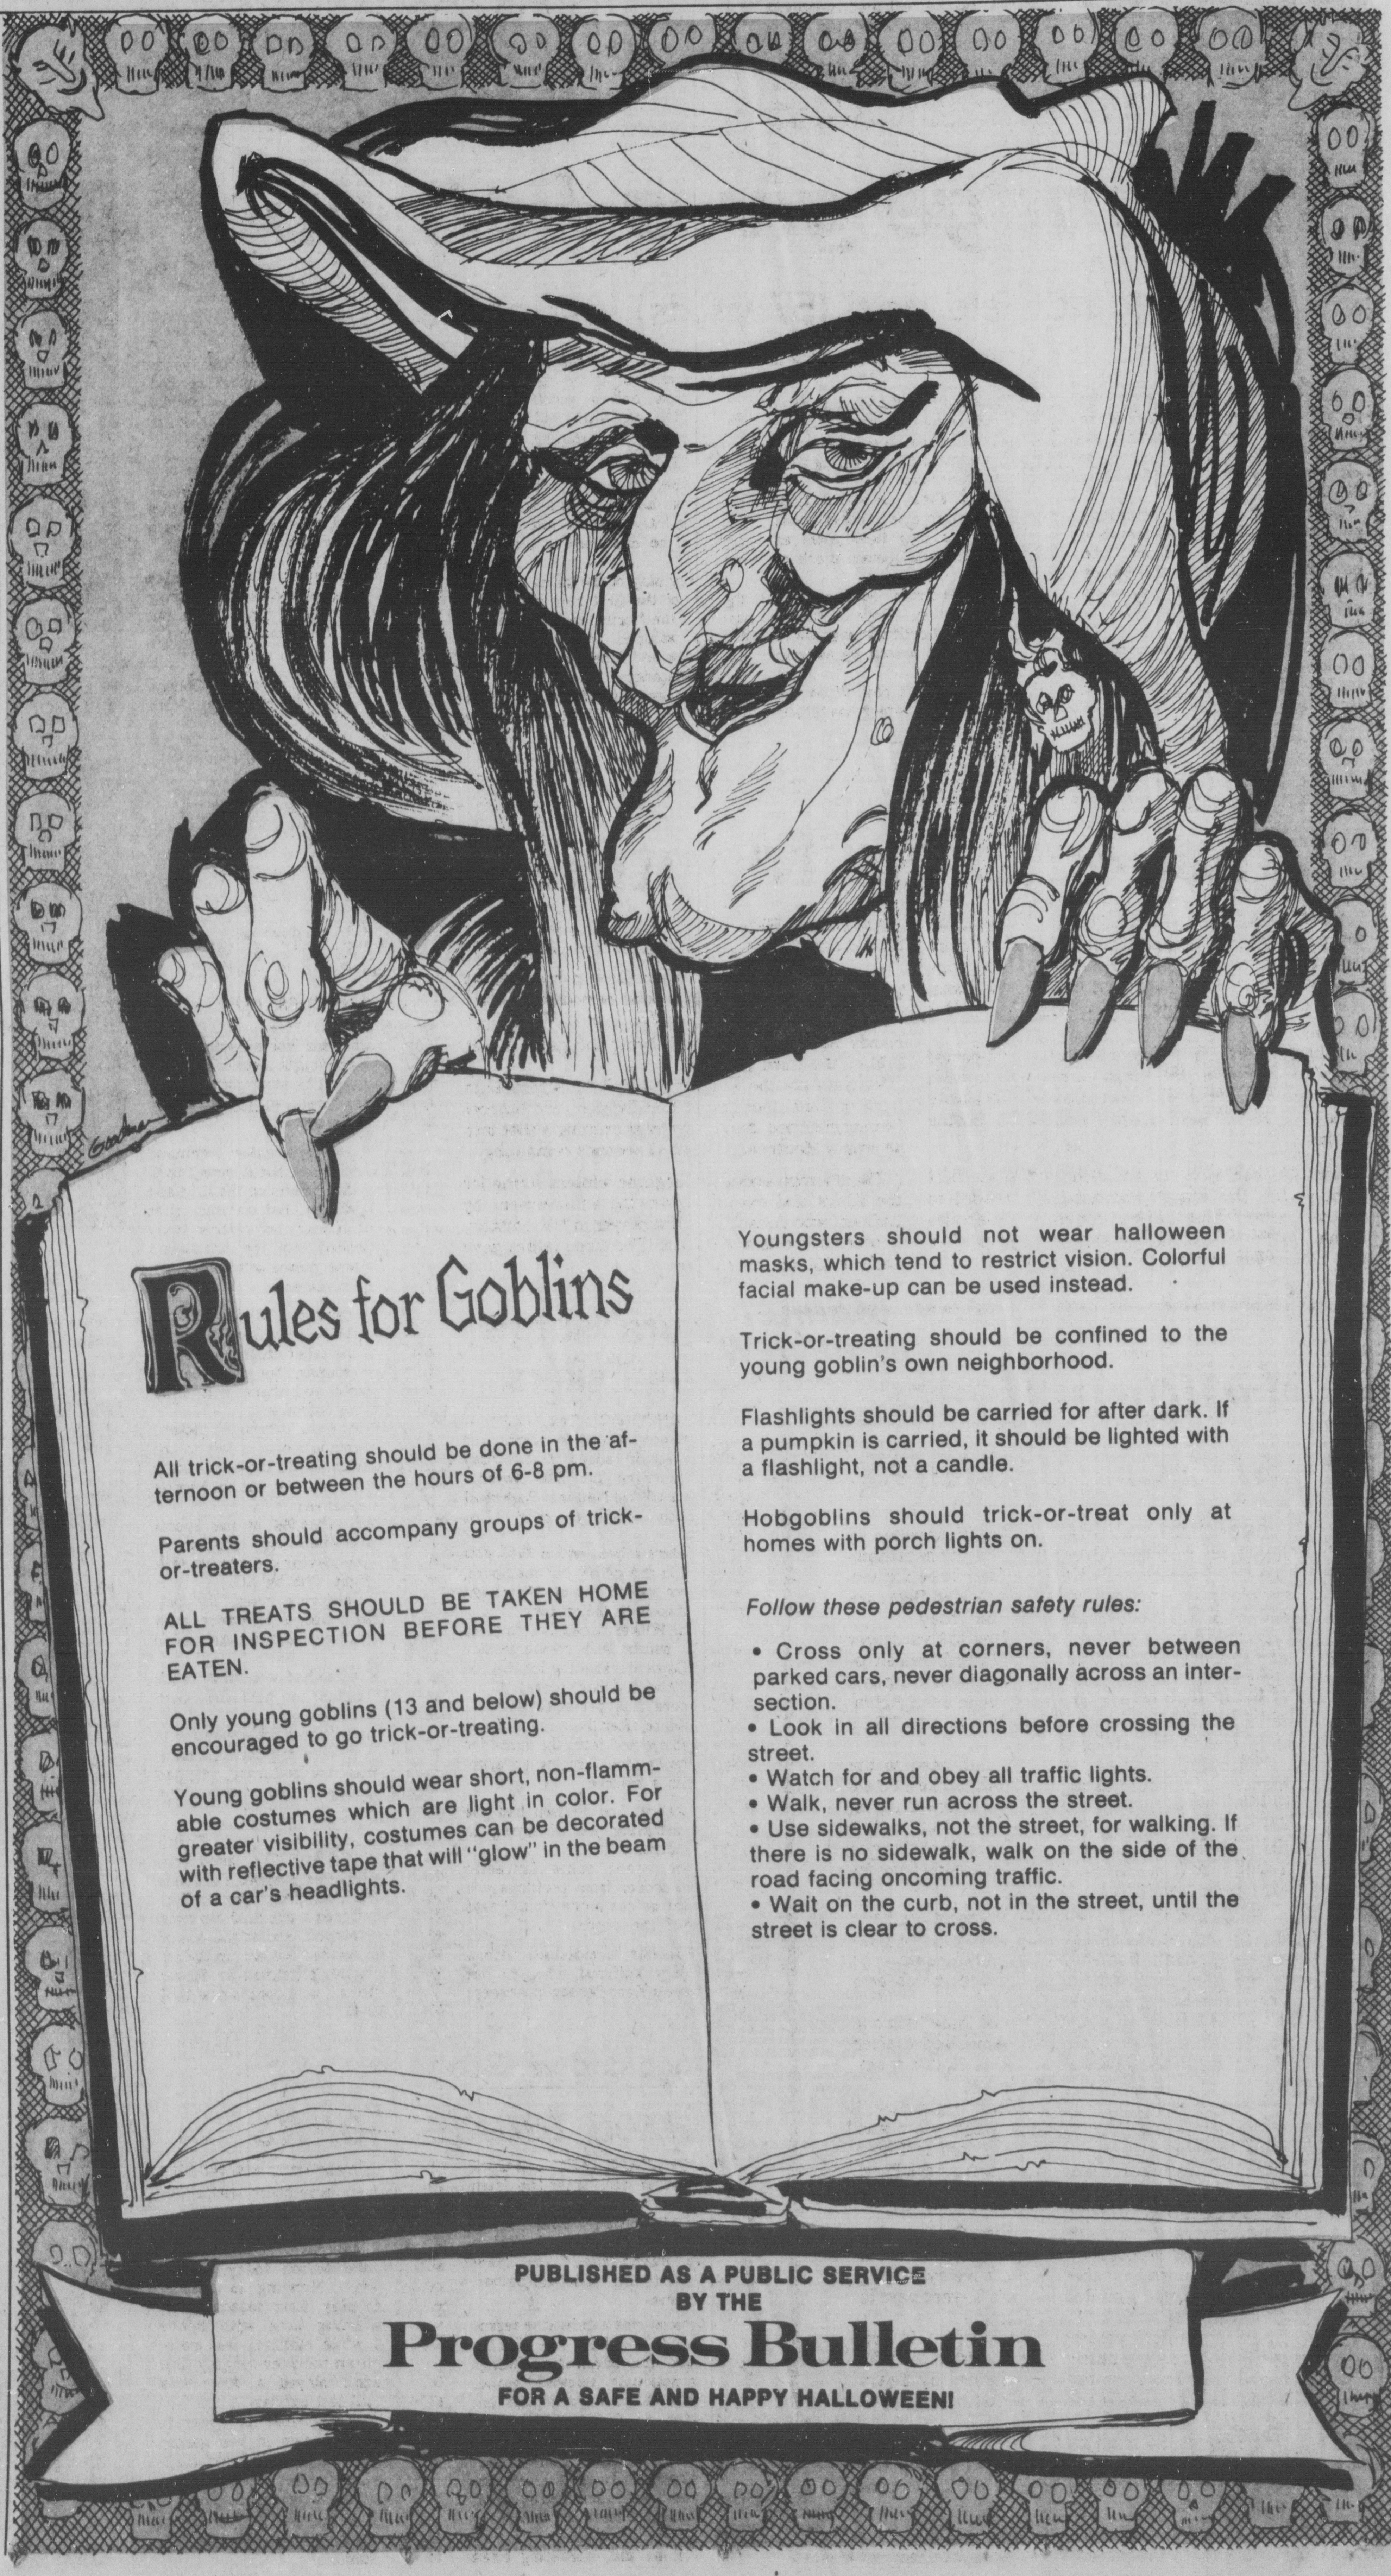
Then Smith learned about a new type of boiler that can take practically any waste material, burn it without pollution and convert the energy to heat.

The system is called a "pyrolitic incinerator." Unlike ordinary incinerators that burn garbage with plenty of oxygen, the pyrolitic system uses an oxygen-lean atmosphere that produces a gas. The gases then are burned at temperatures so high they burn their own smoke.

Nationwide, about 100 firms are using the devices. But only certain plants can use them without re-piping their heating systems completely, because they must be meshed with systems of special size and design.

At Rockwell, a $500,000 system was installed last summer and is working perfectly, Smith said. It will pay for itself in fuel and refuse-hauling savings within four years, Rockwell's system is one of the few that also can produce air-conditioning.

"We have free fuel," Smith said. "It burns all the refuse we produce, and neighboring plants deliver their garbage to us."



Rules for Goblins

All trick-or-treating should be done in the afternoon or between the hours of 6-8 pm.

Parents should accompany groups of trick-or-treaters.

ALL TREATS SHOULD BE TAKEN HOME FOR INSPECTION BEFORE THEY ARE EATEN.

Only young goblins (13 and below) should be encouraged to go trick-or-treating.

Young goblins should wear short, non-flammable costumes which are light in color. For greater visibility, costumes can be decorated with reflective tape that will "glow" in the beam of a car's headlights.

Youngsters should not wear halloween masks, which tend to restrict vision. Colorful facial make-up can be used instead.

Trick-or-treating should be confined to the young goblin's own neighborhood.

Flashlights should be carried for after dark. If a pumpkin is carried, it should be lighted with a flashlight, not a candle.

Follow these pedestrian safety rules:

- Cross only at corners, never between parked cars, never diagonally across an intersection.
- Look in all directions before crossing the street.
- Watch for and obey all traffic lights.
- Walk, never run across the street.
- Use sidewalks, not the street, for walking. If there is no sidewalk, walk on the side of the road facing oncoming traffic.
- Wait on the curb, not in the street, until the street is clear to cross.

UCLA is back in 'Run for the Roses'

By DON BRADLEY
PB Staff Writer

LOS ANGELES — The "Back-to-the-Wall Gang" suddenly has a lot of company.

UCLA, after squeezing out a 20-12 win over Washington Saturday, finds itself one of four team Pac 8 teams with only one loss.

The biggest roar of the game went up from the 38,692 in attendance when, with 6:55 left in the contest, it was announced that California had upset USC, 17-14, at Berkeley.

"The race is a race once again," said UCLA coach Terry Donahue. "I tell you that was a tremendous job by California. I didn't think they'd come back (from last week's loss to UCLA).

"We're back in it, but we're no more in it or out of it than we were last week, quite frankly. If we don't win every game we're out of it."

Stanford, having played one more conference game than the rest of the contenders, is in front right now with a 4-1 record. UCLA, USC and Washington all have 3-1 marks.

But if any team has a break in the schedule, it is the Bruins. UCLA faces Oregon and Oregon St. away and USC at the Coliseum.

USC hosts Stanford at the Coliseum Saturday, is away at Washington and meets UCLA. Stanford, after USC, has a non conference match with San Jose State and then has its annual "big game" with Cal.

Washington is at Cal Saturday, hosts USC and then closes with cross-state rival Washington St.

"All I'm going to do is prepare our team for Oregon," Donohue said. "We've got a problem psychologically because we've played three games in a row against real good opponents and they've taken a lot out of us emotionally."

The Washington game was much closer than the score would indicate. It was 3-0, UCLA at the first quarter, 6-6 at the half and 13-12, UCLA after three quarters with all 12 Washington points coming on field goals by Steve Robbins who tied a Pac 8 game record.

But the Huskies had the momentum and had scored the last two times they had their hands on the ball, the last one set up by former San Dimas star Wayne Moses' interception at midfield.

It was a short, 24-yard punt by freshman Aaron Wilson that set up the clincher for the Bruins.

It was Owens for five yards, Brown for eight, Owens for one, Brown for four and Owens for four to give the Bruins a fourth-and-one at the 13.

Brown blasted through right tackle for 13 yards and burst into the end zone standing up.

"We needed to build up confidence on our team and every once in a while, you have to go for it first down instead of a field goal) and that's what we did," explained Donohue. "We were just going for the first down."

Moses, Washington's right cornerback surprised everybody in the Coliseum when he caught Owens, a 9.5 sprinter FROM BEHIND when the UCLA speedburner had broken into the clear for what looked like a sure touchdown in the second quarter.

But the former San Dimas star caught up with and tackled Owens after a 47-yard gain to the Washington 25. But UCLA eventually settled for a field goal or the game might not have been as close.

"I couldn't let him get a touchdown," said Moses. "I had to catch him some way. It was just one of those situations where you go as fast as you need to go. He was on his way."

Moses, who also played basketball and was a trackman for the Saints, is concentrating on football at Washington.

"It's too cold up there to do anything else," he grinned then sobered as his thoughts returned to the Pac 8 race. "We're still in the race, but we've got to win every game now."

If there was one key, it might have been the seven penalties (for 87 yards) the Huskies drew (as compared to three for 25 yards for UCLA). Three of the penalties resulted from running into kicker Frank Corral.

"They went after Corral probably figuring they could intimidate him," said Donahue. "Frank did a good job keeping his poise and did a much better job, particularly on kickoffs."

Corral boomed the ball into or through the end zone on all his kickoffs and averaged 39.8 yards on four punts.

Northridge gives Poly boot

Record field goal (57 yards) just one of four

By BILL LANGLEY
PB Sports Editor

The record-breaking foot of John Dohle was too much for Cal Poly to overcome Saturday night as the Broncos' losing streak stretched to eight in a 19-0 blanking by Cal State Northridge.

Dohle broke two Northridge records in leading the Matadors (5-2) past the punchless Broncos, who have dropped six games this season and the final two last year after recording their last win at Northridge.

The senior set a school mark for the longest field goal with an amazing 57-yard boot in the third quarter to surpass the previous record of 55 set by Jose Ballina against Poly in 1974.

Dohle kicked four three-pointers — the others being for 35, 47 and 38 yards — to surpass his own record of three in a game set last year against Cal State Fullerton.

A Kellogg Field crowd of 2,500 didn't have much else to cheer about except for the long field goals as neither team could sustain much of an offensive effort.

Behind freshman quarterback Gordy Bohannon, Poly actually. enjoyed its most productive game of the frustrating c season by earning 257 yards.

However, it didn't pay off on the scoreboard as Poly, which has tallied only 42 points in six games, suffered its third shutout of the campaign.

Bohannon had a good night in statistics in completing 9 of 16 passes for 107 yards and leading Poly in rushing with 67 yards on 15 carries.

But the freshman from South Pasadena had the misfortune of throwing interceptions just when it appeared he had Poly on a scoring drive.

The key play of the game came at the end of the first half when Poly drove to the Northridge nine only to have it stopped when Bohannon's pass in the end zone was intercepted by the Matadors' Dave Vierra.

Northridge ran off 80 offensive plays to Poly's 56 with the Matadors accounting for 376 offensive yards. Quarterback Paul Feuerborn connected on 10 of 18 passes for 180 yards while Mike Maglione led the ground attack with 102 yards.

Maglione scored the game's only touchdown on an one-yard run with 13:10 left in the game two games after Feuerborn completed a 59-yard screen pass to the Bronco three.

Wide receiver Teddy Myles enjoyed another good night for Poly with six receptions for 66 yards but he was able to catch only one in the second half.

Poly travels to Cerritos College next Saturday to play Cal State Fullerton.

First loss for Canadiens

Kings surprise Montreal

MONTREAL (AP) — Gene Carr and Vic Venasky scored in a 68-second span of the third period Saturday night as the Los Angeles Kings recorded a stunning 5-3 victory over Montreal, handing the Canadiens their first loss of the National Hockey League season.

Although Guy Lafleur scored three first-period goals for Montreal, the Kings came back to hand the Canadiens their first defeat at home in 38 games since Oct. 30, 1976, when they lost to the Boston Bruins.

Montreal had won six and tied two in its first eight games this season and appeared headed to another victory when Lafleur converted a Jacques Lemaire pass for his sixth goal of the season after just 17 seconds of play.

After Ernie Hicke tied it for Los Angeles, Lafleur scored twice more—again on assists by Lemaire.

But former Canadien Glenn Goldup made it 3-2 with the only goal of the second period, then Carr broke behind the Montreal defense with a pass from Randy Manery and scored, tying the game 3-3 at 7:20 of the third period.

Venasky got the winning goal from a scramble in front of Canadiens goalie Ken Dryden, and Marcel Dionne clinched the victory by skimming a shot into an empty Montreal net with 12 seconds remaining.

The triumph ended a fourgame winless string for the Kings and overshadowed the achievement by Lafleur, who became the 51st player in NHL history to score more than 250 goals. The three tallies gave Lafleur 251 for his career.

Zarate is king via KO

LOS ANGELES (AP) — Undefeated Carlos Zarate of Mexico City retained his World Boxing Council bantamweight championship Saturday night by stopping previously unbeaten Danilo Batista of Brazil in the sixth round.

Zarate, 116½, had taken command in the third round, but it wasn't until the sixth that he scored the first and only knockdown. Batista was up at the count of four, but referee Rudy Jordan looked into the Brazilian's eyes and determined he was too badly hurt to continue.

The end came at 1:28 of the stanza.

Batista, 116¼, from Sao Paulo, had outfought the taller champion for the first two rounds, but then Zarate took control and there was little doubt of the outcome.

The 5-foot-8 titlist brought the end with a combination of a left to the midsection, a left to the head, and a right to the head that put his 5-foot-4 foe on the canvas.

Under California rules, the outcome was ruled a knockout even though the 25-year-old Batista was on his feet.

The Brazilian had won all 26 of his previous fights and held the South American 118-pound title.

The title bout was scheduled for 15 rounds, and was the fourth championship defense by Zarate, who had scored knockouts also in each of the others.

Golden Bears shock Trojans

BERKELEY, Calif. (AP) — An interception by California's Anthony Green with 51 seconds remaining killed Southern California's final hope for victory, and the emotionally charged Golden Bears upset the 10thranked Trojans 17-14 Saturday.

Southern Cal's offense, averaging 458 yards per game, converted on only four of 17 thirddown situations as the Trojans lost their first Pacific-8 game of the football season, and the first in John Robinson's two years as head coach. It was also USC's third loss in its last four games.

The Bears, winning the game dedicated to the memory of former Cal star Joe Roth, broke a 7-7 tie in the third period when Jim Breech kicked an 18-yard field goal. They increased their lead to 17-7 early in the final period when quarterback Charlie Young scored on a oneyard sneak to complete an 80-yard touchdown drive.

"There's a special feeling and respect we have for Joe. He wasn't the soapbox type of guy or a flag-waver. We had a moment of silence before we went on the field and each individual Joe in his own way," said Coach Mike White.

"It was a silent tribute, not one of those 'win one for the Gipper' type of things," White added after the victory in the game dedicated to Roth's memory.

"We're a very much uptight team right now," said Trojan Coach John Robinson, whose team was trying to bounce back from a 49-19 loss to Notre Dame. But he added, "We're still in the Rose Bowl race. We're 3-1, and if we win the rest of our games we'll go to the Rose Bowl."

The Trojans got a big break when Cal receiver Floyd Eddings dropped a pass at the Southern Cal 20-yard line, then kept their hopes alive by driving 84 yards and scoring on Rob Hertel's 31-yard pass to Calvin Sweeney with 2:01 remaining.

Southern Cal took possession again with 1:04 left, but Hertel threw one pass incomplete from the USC 32, and the next attempt was deflected by Bears linebacker David Shaw and picked off by defensive back Green near midfield.

The Trojans, 5-3 in all games, are 3-1 in the Pac-8 and in a hectic race for the Rose Bowl bid. Cal made its overall record 6-2, but is 2-2 in the conference.

Spurs' surge tops Lakers

SAN ANTONIO, Tex. (AP) — Larry Kenon scored 36 points and George Gervin added 32 Saturday night, sparking the San Antonio Spurs to a 129-118 National Basketball Association victory over Los Angeles.

The Lakers moved within 95-93 with 8:21 left in the game, but the Spurs, who never trailed, ran off 17 straight points, clinching the victory.

"Gervin made some fantastic shots. He scores from positions you don't think he can score from," said Hudson of the chore.

Youngblood vs. Scott

Rams tackle Saints

NEW ORLEANS (AP) — If Jack Youngblood is still smarting from unkind remarks, Bobby Scott's in for a long afternoon today when Youngblood and the rest of the Los Angeles Rams meet the New Orleans Saints in a National Football League game.

Youngblood was a defensive terror last Monday when the Rams demolished the Minnesota Vikings 35-3 in a nationally televised game. But earlier this season he was not playing up to form, and a Los Angeles columnist pointed that out.

"Football's a mental game," said a Rams spokesman. "Jack saw the article and said something like, 'Well, I guess I have something to prove.'"

Prove it he did, harassing Fran Tarkenton mercilessly and catching the veteran scrambler twice for sacks.

Scott — for seven years a backup to Archie Manning — gets his second start of the season today. And it comes when Manning is healthy enough to play. Last season, Scott shared starting time with Bobby Douglass while Manning was recuperating from shoulder surgery. But Scott hadn't played a down this season until last Sunday.

With Manning able to generate only one touchdown in two games and slowed by an ankle injured in a 7-14 loss to Los Angeles two weeks ago, Scott got the nod against St. Louis.

He was 16-35-2 for 285 yards and three touchdowns in a 49-31 loss to the Cardinals.

Mounties tough for Falcons, 13-0

By JIM McCONNELL
PB Staff Writer

Mt. San Antonio College kept its South Coast Conference title hopes very much alive Saturday night with an impressive 13-0 shutout of visiting Cerritos.

The victory leaves MSAC with a 3-1 SCC record, and a 5-3 overall mark. Fullerton stayed atop the SCC and unbeaten on the season with a 27-16 win over Orange Coast.

MSAC and Fullerton (8-0) will meet in two weeks in what will undoubtedly be the title decider in the conference. The Mounties will have a bye this week.

MSAC did virtually everything right Saturday in disposing of Cerritos (1-3, 2-5). The Mounties, displaying a potent ground attack, outgained the Falcons 412-196 in offensive yardage and 21-9 in first downs.

Mal Eaton's crew really put it together on defense to register the shutout. That defensive unit held the Falcons' top offensive weapons, quarterback Kevin Hamilton and halfback Jim Copeland, in check all night long.

Hamilton was limited to eight completions in 18 attempts, for a net of only 70 yards. Defensive back Jerome Covington swiped two of Hamilton's tosses.

Copeland, the conference's leading rusher going into the contest, was held to only 75 yards on 16 carries, most of those in the fourth quarter when the outcome was already decided.

Eaton shuttled in eight different backs in his offensive alignment, and all responded.

Quarterbacks Butch Stocking and Grady Hubbard, passing only sparingly, still managed to hit on a combined eight-of-14 for 106 yards.

Garey High product Stan Webster had a big night despite playing only three quarters. Webster rushed for 86 yards to lead all backs, and scored the game's only touchdown on a picture-perfect 33-yard blast early in the first quarter.

Webster climaxed MSAC's first possession of the night by skirting left end and outrunning the Cerritos' secondary for the score. MSAC marched 83 yards in nine plays for the TD, an earlier Stocking-to-Webster pass completion keeping things cooking.

MSAC was unable to score another touchdown in the game, but controlled the ball, the clock and the tempo of the game thereafter.

Stocking booted two field goals, one in the second and one in the third quarter, to pad the MSAC lead.

Cerritos had a couple scoring chances but the MSAC defense rose to the occasion.

Late in the first half, the Falcons marched to the Mountie 21, but Covington stepped in front of the intended receiver to pick off a Hamilton pass in the end zone to stop that drive.

Quotes

Coach Bear Bryant, following third-ranked Alabama's 55-6 rout of Louisville: "If we just win our games I think we'll win the national championship."

Citrus, Chaffey triumph

Chaffey College rushed for three touchdowns and 323 yards enroute to drubbing San Bernardino Valley, 21-7, to highlight junior college football action Saturday night.

Gary Carr picked up 169 yards on 34 carries, four of them coming on a 4-yard touchdown scamper in the first quarter. The dash ended a 45-yard Panther drive covering 10 plays and provided Chaffey with a quick 7-0 advantage.

After San Bernardino tied the score Don Hargett, former quarterback at San Dimas High, directed a 61-yard Chaffey march in nine plays, sneaking the final yard himself.

Marcus Jennings, who also raced over the century mark (120 yards on 20 carries), picked up the final Chaffey score in the final period.

Chaffey thus improved its Mission Conference record to 3-1 and its overall mark to 6-1.

However, Citrus scored its fourth Mission Conference win in as many outings Saturday night as it decisioned visiting Southwestern, 17-14.

First win of season

Stags defeat Sagehens

By MIKE BROSSART
PB Staff Writer

Claremont-Mudd's Stags punched across the winning touchdown on their first possession and went on to down crosstown rival Pomona-Pitzer, 13-0, Saturday night on Pomona's Alumni Field.

A low snap caused a 15-yard punt by the Sagehens after the game's first series and gave the Stags the ball on Pomona-Pitzer's 30-yard line. Tailback Jim Reed scored on a three-yard run — his fifth carry on the seven-play drive — and Dave Goldstein's kick gave the visitors a 7-0 lead with less than five minutes gone.

Neither team was able to muster much offense from that time on until C-M quarterback Don Chester hit freshman Brian Bullock with a 30-yard touchdown pass with less than a minute left in the third quarter to complete the scoring.

The win was the Stags' first in five games this season and Pomona-Pitzer's record fell to 0-5. The last time the Sagehens won an SCIAC football game was 1974, when quarterback Larry Cenotto led them to a 33-22 upset against Claremont-Mudd.

Both teams played solid defense Saturday night but the 'Hens killed themselves with turnovers — three lost fumbles and three interceptions — and some poor punt plays. Claremont-Mudd's Greg Palma intercepted two passes and Steve Schiro, a junior from Upland High, picked off the third.

The Stags were guilty of just one turnover, a first-quarter fumble.

C-M lost Reed to a charley horse late in the first period, after he had already amassed 63 yards on 14 carries. His replacement, freshman Blake Isaacson, rushed 26 times for 99 yards as the Stags piled up 225 rushing yards compared to the 'Hens' 69.

Chester, after failing to complete his two first-half passes, hit on his last six of seven second-half aerials for 107 yards. P-P quarterback Lyle Lansdell, bothered by a persistent pass rush, completed 12 of 28 with two interceptions and also had 107 yards passing.

Collegiate football roundup

Top grid powers impressive

By The Associated Press

Texas, Ohio State, Oklahoma and Notre Dame all scored big points for their college football images with impressive victories Saturday.

Top-ranked Texas hammered No. 14 Texas Tech 26-0, No. 3 Ohio State smashed Wisconsin 42-0, fourth-ranked Oklahoma crushed Kansas State 42-7 and fifth-rated Notre Dame blasted Navy 43-10 in a day of few upsets.

Among the day's rare surprises was California's 17-14 victory over No. 10 Southern Cal.

Texas dazed Texas Tech on a 57-yard touchdown pass to Olympian Johnny "Lam" Jones, followed it with a 60-yard field goal by Russell Erxleben and applied the knockout punch on two scoring runs by Johnny "Ham" Jones.

The hard-earned Southwest Conference victory, before a sun-baked crowd of 78,809 fans in the Longhorns' Memorial Stadium, gave Texas a 7-0 record, and the distinction as the only unbeaten Top Twenty team.

Quarterback Rod Gerald and flanker Jim Harrell combined on a 79-yard scoring bomb on the second play of the game and third-ranked Ohio State went on to crush Wisconsin and keep its Big Ten Conference lead.

Ohio State's veteran, swift defense complemented the attack with four interceptions, two leading to touchdowns. The Buckeyes now have 21 interceptions for the season, 17 in the last five games.

Thomas Lott scored three touchdowns and Oklahoma's whippet-quick defense intercepted four passes, leading the Sooners over Kansas State. Oklahoma used its reserves after Lott's third-quarter score made it 28-0.

Quarterback Joe Montana passed for a career-high 260 yards, scored one touchdown and hit Dave Mitchell for another TD as Notre Dame beat Navy for the 14th straight year.

Quarterback Rick Leach set a Michigan career record for touchdown passes and tied a single game mark with three, leading the sixth-ranked Wolverines to a 23-6 Big Ten victory over Iowa.

Michael Forrest scored on runs of 23 and two yards and Steve Little boomed field goals of 52, 44 and 29 yards as eight-ranked Arkansas subdued Rice 30-7 in a Southwest Conference game.

Chuck Fusina shredded the nation's No. 1 pass defense for 192 yards and two touchdowns, and Matt Suhey smashed for three short scores as ninth-ranked Penn State walloped Miami, Fla. 49-7.

David Walker ran for 182 yards and hurled touchdown passes of 30 and 34 yards to Darrell Smith as 11th-ranked Texas A&M rallied to beat SMU 38-21.

Olivares nets longshot win

ARCADIA, Calif. (AP) — Longshot Rescator grabbed an early lead and held on to win the $33,950 Alibhai Handicap at Santa Anita Saturday in a race dominated by longshots.

Rescator, with Frank Ovivares in the irons, ran 1 1/16 mile race in 1:43 4/5, paying $21.40, $10 and $5.20.

Rescator, carrying 113 pounds, saved ground after breaking fast and raced strongly in the home stretch to hold off a challenge by another longshot, Explosivo, ridden by Fernando Mena.

Poets blank Leos

WHITTIER — Chris Terrazas' 20-yard scoring pass to Ray Chavez was the only points Whittier needed Saturday night as they went on to deal La Verne its second SCIAC loss, 13-0.

The aerial strike came with 1:40 showing on the first quarter clock and capped a 56-yard Poet march.

Terrazas struck again in the third period on a 28-yard hookup with Rick Alkire, but the score was not necessary as Whittier's defense held La Verne at bay.

The Poets allowed just 79 rushing yards to the Leos, whose rushing tandem of Ben Morrow and Brad Frick were held to just 45 and 42 yards, respectively.

The closest the Leopards came to putting points on the scoreboard was midway through the fourth stanza when they recovered a fumbled fair catch of a punt on the Whittier 26.

However, three plays could net only six more yards and La Verne turned the ball over when a fourth down pass failed.

By, winning, Whittier enhanced its SCIAC mark to 2-0 (6-1 overall) while La Verne fell to 0-2 and 2-4.

Prep roundup

Saints, Q's fall

San Dimas High and Don Antonio Lugo both suffered setbacks in Saturday night's prep football action.

The Saints fell to Royal Oak, 19-7, and the Conquistadores were nipped by Nelles of Whittier, 14-13.

Royal Oak (4-1 in Hacienda League play and 4-3 overall) scored three first-half touchdowns before the host Saints (1-4, 1-6) were able to get on the scoreboard in the fourth quarter.

Jack Bron scored two of the Royals' TDs on runs of 2 and 3 yards and Dennis Cunnynham tallied on a 15-yard scamper.

Nelles scored that winning touchdown on a 10-yard pass from George Hernandez to Tim Bouldin. Hernandez had earlier hit Richard Moore with a 10-yard scoring toss in the third quarter after the host Conquistadores had built a 13-0 halftime lead.

Don Lugo used field goals of 35 and 30 yards by Luis Zendejas and an 8-yard TD pass from Bob Malins to Joe Campos plus Zendejas' PAT kick to generate that lead.

The Conquistadores are now 3-2-1 on the year and Nelles s 5-1.

TRAFFIC JAM — A whole herd of high school cross-country runners prepare to tackle the rugged Mt. San Antonio College course Saturday in the start of one of many heat races in the mammoth MSAC Invitational. More than 250 schools particiapted in the event.

Johncock a winner on crash

PHOENIX, Ariz. (AP) — Gordon Johncock got a victory he wasn't sure he could save, when a crash on the final lap prevented Al Unser from making a desperate challenge in Saturday's Bobby Ball 150 for Indianapolis cars.

"I wasn't sure I was gonna be able to hold Al off that last lap," said Johncock, who lives in the Phoenix area. "I had to work pretty hard to stay in front."

Unser was directly behind Johncock the last 10 laps, and seemed to have enough power to pull up on Johncock. He was getting a bead on the leader when fourth-place runner Spike Gehlhausen got wide coming out of the fourth turn and tore into the guardrail along the length of the straightaway.

Johncock and Unser arrived on the scene a few seconds later and dodged through the debris. They ran nose to tail around another lap to the checkered flag.

Helix stuns top entrants

Helix High of San Diego upset both Eisenhower and Costa Mesa to win the Sweepstakes Team scoring at the Mt. San Antonio College cross country invitational Saturday.

Costa Mesa's John Gerhardt won the featured race in 14:56.5 but his team, with a cumulative time of 1:19:24.8, finished third to Helix (1:18:08.0) and Eisenhower (1:19:24.8).

Eisenhower's Chuck Assuma was second (14:57.3) and Helix's Rick Rose third (14:57.7).

Walnut placed 14th in varsity scoring to lead local teams.

The Mustangs' David Mendoza turned a 15:50.1 to lead his team's effort but Claremont's Locke Breaux ran second (to Mendoza's third) in the same race in 15:39.9.

Alta Loma's Randy Brown had the best time among local individuals, a 15:38.6 that placed him ninth in his race.

Pomona's Ed Allen won his race in 15:53.2, Damien's Tony Reyes was fifth in his race in 16:03 and Upland's Gary Borbon (16:10) and Keith Van Lieu (16:19) took sixth and ninth places, respectively, in their race.

Two up at Pensacola

Thompson smiles

PENSACOLA, Fla. (AP) — Leonard Thompson broke out of a three-way tie with a solid, six-under-par 65, established a two-stroke lead Saturday and confidently looked ahead to a victory in the $125,000 Pensacola Open Golf Tournament.

"The time is here," Thompson said after he'd posted a 54hole total of 200, 13 under par for three trips over the 5,549 yard Pensacola Country Club course.

"This is the time to see if I'm man enough, have the game enough, to bring it home. I've only won once in all the time I've been out here and it's time to do it again.

Thompson, whose only previous victory came in the 1974 Jackie Gleason Classic, had a two-shot advantage over 22-year-old rookie Curtis Strange, a former national collegiate champ from Wake Forest, and Jim Simons, tied at 202.

"You just can't predict anything like that," said Strange after his spectacular putting exhibition had produced a 64, the best round of the tournament. He one-putted 10 holes in a row, 11 for the day. Simons shot a 67 in the mild, clam, hazy weather.

It was another two shots back to a group of four at 204, little lefty Sam Adams, Dalny Edwards, Fuzzy Zoeller and Steve Melnyk. Adams had a 66, Edwards finished off a 65 with 29 on the back side, Zoeller and Melnyk had 67s in the ideal conditions.

Stags nab pool win

Claremont-Mudd pushed its SCIAC water polo record to a spotless 4-0 Saturday afternoon with an easy 16-6 triumph over visiting Whittier College.

Louie Caron led the Stags' scoring parade with four goals, while Paul Sanburg sparkled on defense with nine steals. The Stags' J.V. team also won, 10-0, over Whittier.

C-M will try to maintain its perfect conference mark on Wednesday, when it will travel to Occidental for a 4 p.m. match.

No Jacksons among BB's free agents

NEW YORK (AP) — The second annual free-agent draft, a chance for other major league baseball clubs to spend like the New York Yankees for the purpose of winning like the world champions, will be held Friday with no $3 million player in the class of Reggie Jackson apparently available.

Statistically and charasmatically, there is no Jackson around this time. But there really is no certainty that the free enterprise system and the competition of some aggressive owners won't raise the price tag of some free-agent stars to Jacksonian proportions.

Jackson, of course, is Reginald Martinez Jackson, the plum of last year's free-agent crop who was picked by Yankee owner George Steinbrenner for $3 million over five years. Jackson, the Series Most Valuable Player, and pitcher Don Gullett, a $2 million free-agent acquisition, led the Yankees to their first world championship in 15 years.

That success means Steinbrenner's $5 million outlay was money well spent. "You have to spend money to make money," says Steinbrenner.

On the other side of the spectrum were the California Angels, who dipped into owner Gene Autry's saddle bags three times and paid out $5.25 million for Joe Rudi, Don Baylor and Bobby Grich and still finished fifth in the American League West.

Both the Yankees and the Angels are expected to be swinging away again this time, while several other teams will be given the take sign. Reasons range from financial austerity to a belief in building from the bottom through the farm system to a desire to play with a pat hand—whether that hand shows four aces or a couple of jokers.

As of last Thursday, there were 85 players who had declared their intentions of testing the free-agent waters. That figure included 20 full-time major leaguers from 1977 who were unsigned and, thus far, 18 six-year veterans whose contracts have expired and who have notified the players association of their intention to become free. The rest were minor leaguers, who weren't expected to receive much attention.

A handful of six-year veterans, including star pitcher Mike Torrez of the New York Yankees and outfielder Oscar Gamble of the Chicago White Sox, are still negotiating with their 1977 teams and have until Wednesday to declare their free agency.

About a dozen of the 38 major leaguers available could be described as blue-chippers.

Free agents

NEW YORK (AP) — The list of major league free agents, as of Oct. 27, who will be available for Friday's free-agent draft at the Plaza Hotel in New York:

Baltimore—Ross Grimsley (p), Dick Drago (p), Elliott Maddox (of).
Boston—Rick Miller (of).
California—Carlos May (of), Dan Briggs (inf), Mario Guererro (inf).
Chicago Cubs—George Mitterwald (c).
Chicago White Sox—Richie Zisk (of), Jack Brohamer (inf).
Cleveland—Bill Melton (inf), Frank Duffy (inf), Bruce Bochte (inf).
Houston—Ken Boswell (inf).
Minnesota—Larry Hisle (of), Lyman Bostock (of), Mike Pazik (p), Tom Burgmeier (p), Ron Schueler (p), Jerry Terrell (inf), Luis Gomez (inf).
New York Mets—Doc Medich (p).
Oakland—Marty Perez (inf), Mike Jorgensen (inf), Willie Crawford (of).
Philadelphia—Ollie Brown (of).
Pittsburgh—Rich Gossage (p), Terry Forster (p), Bobby Tolan (of).
St. Louis—Rawly Eastwick (p).
San Diego—Luis Melendez (of).
Seattle—John Hale (of), Ray Fosse (c), Diego Segui (p).
Texas—Mike Marshall (p).

In the outfield, this year's free-agent crop of Larry Hisle of Minnesota (28 homers, 119 runs batted in), Lyman Bostock of Minnesota (.336 average and 104 runs) and Richie Zisk of the Chicago White Sox (30 homers 101 RBI) compares favorably with last year's team — excluding Jackson — of Joe Rudi ($2.2 million for five years), Gary Matthews ($1.875 million for five years) and Don Baylor ($1.6 million for six years.)

If he doesn't sign with the Yankees, the top starting pitcher available will be Torrez, who won 17 games in the regular season and a pair of World Series games.

Each free agent's 1977 club can also be included on the player's shopping listing, giving him a maximum choice of 14 teams.

The top relief pitcher available, Rich Gossage of Pittsburgh, should be one of the free agents selected by 13 teams, plus the Pirates, and should inspire some spirited bidding. Last year's top reliever, Bill Campbell, was signed by Boston for $1 million over five years, a good investment for the Red Sox, who were kept in the AL East Division race by Campbell's almost daily rescue acts.

Campbell left Minnesota last year because owner Calvin Griffith wouldn't give him the small raise he wanted. This year, the Twins face a larger exodus with, potentially, 11 free agents. Some of the "leaving 11" are minor leaguers and others are borderline major leaguers, but outfielders Hisle and Lyman Bostock are important cogs in the Twins' attack.

The Chicago White Sox, who gambled on bargain-basement free agents Eric Soderholm and Steve Stone last year, could lose four players, including star outfielders Zisk and Gamble.

A hidden silver lining in Chicago's cloud is that the club can sign as many free agents as it loses. If the White Sox lose four players to other teams, they could sign four free agents.

Clubs losing two or fewer free agents are bound by the availability restrictions. If the total of declared free agents by Friday is from 15 to 38, teams can sign a maximum of two players. If the pool contains between 39 and 62 players, teams may sign no more than three free agents.

Best estimates are that the actual number of free agents on Friday will swell to 90, which would combine players from three different free-agent categories.

The first category, unsigned player for 1977, has 33 players, including 11 minor leaguers. This group includes Hisle, Bostock, Gossage, relief pitcher Rawly Eastwick of St. Louis and outfielder Dave Kingman of the Yankees.

Then there are the 48 six-year veterans whose contracts expired following the 1977 season. So far, 18 of them have declared for free agency, including Baltimore pitcher Ross Grimsley, George Mitterwald of the Chicago Cubs and pitcher Terry Forster of Pittsburgh.

The third group, the "Attachment 11" players, had 1976 major league contracts but were outrighted to the minor leagues in 1977. There are 34 of these players, few of whom are expected to arouse any attention.

The draft picks will be made in the inverse order of the 1977 standings, with the two leagues alternating and the AL going first this year. A player is removed from the eligibility list when he has been chosen by 13, teams. Last year, Montreal picked first and went for Jackson.

Raiders, Broncs 'high' for rematch

By Associated Press

They call it the Mile High City — and both the resident Denver Broncos and invading Oakland Raiders will be at least that high today.

"We know the Raiders will really be flying high when they get here," Denver Coach Red Miller said as the Broncos prepared for their American Conference West showdown, a rematch between the defending Super Bowl champions and the unbeaten upstarts who embarrassed them two Sundays ago.

"This is a whole new ballgame," said Miller, reflecting on the 30-7 humiliation perpetrated by the Broncos, when they ended Oakland's 17-game winning streak. "Certainly we're proud of our first win over the Raiders, but that's all behind us. We're starting all over ... just as we do for every opponent.

"Oakland likes to run but they surprised us a little bit in the last game by coming out passing," added Miller. If the Broncos were really surprised, they showed it in the strangest of ways. They intercepted seven of Ken Stabler's passes and literally drove him out of the game.

Both teams have some players hobbling (among them quarterback Graig Morton and cornerback Louis Wright on Denver and tackle John Vella and cornerback Willie Brown on Oakland) but, as Miller put it: "Come game time, I think all these guys are going to want to get in there."

Like the Raiders two weeks ago, Minnesota was humbled last Monday night, battered 35-3 by Los Angeles. Now the Vikings face the Falcons, one of the NFL's surprise teams this season. Each team is 4-2, the Vikes first in the National Conference Central Division, the Falcons tied with the Rams for first in the NFC West.

"Their defense has come around," says Minnesota Coach Bud Grant. "It was soft through the years, but now they've have changed their defensive thinking around a bit — more blitzing, forcing more mistakes. The defense has won some games for them.

In the last couple of years they have drafted well. They've got some outstanding people. They've sold out their stadium for the game and are looking forward to us coming down there. And I think we may be runnning into the same kind of buzzsaw we ran into out in Los Angeles."

Denver is the only unbeaten team in the AFC. The Cowboys are their NFC counterpart. "Dallas has just a great football team and it will be an uphill struggle for us. We will have to play with great determination to win," said Coach Tommy Hudspeth. His Lions, second to the Vikings in the NFC Central, have managed only one victory on the road in their last 10 games — that one last season against Seattle.

The Lions are coming off perhaps their worst showing of the season, a 28-7 loss to the previously winless 49ers. "The team is disgusted — just like I am — after that loss to San Francisco," said Hudspeth.

The Cowboys may be establishing themselves as the first team to clinch a division title. They're already three games ahead of Washington and St. Louis in the NFC East.

But Coach Tom Landry knows a letdown can hit any time. It nearly did a week ago. After supercharged games against the Redskins and Cardinals, Dallas flattened out and barely managed to beat underdog Philadelphia 16-10 on Charlie Waters' touchdown run with a fourth-quarter blocked punt.

"We were obviously emotionally drained after two emotional games against St. Louis and Washington," Landry said. "Hopefully we can regain some emotion against the Lions."

Cleveland suffered its letdown last year. In the final game of what turned out to be a 9-5 season, the Browns, finally eliminated from playoff contention, gave an uninspired performance against Kansas City and lost 39-14. "I don't think I'll have to go back over that too much," Browns Coach Forrest Gregg said, "but I will remind them of that game.

"I know one thing we can expect from Kansas City — emotion. It will be the same as going into Buffalo last Sunday. The Chiefs are coming off that first win (21-16 over San Diego) and that does things to a team. Buffalo had just won its first game and suddenly there were people in the stands and they had their confidence back."

The Dolphins were expected to just sort of stumble along this year — but they're 5-1 and tied with Baltimore for first place in the AFC East. Quarterback Bob Griese sees San Diego as the start of an uphill climb. "The toughest part of our schedule is the second part and it's coming up starting this week," he said.

PGA players up in arms about schedule proposal

PENSACOLA, Fla. (AP) — A highly controversial proposal, which could change drastically the American pro golf tour, will be considered by the PGA Tour's policy-making body next Tuesday in Lake Buena Vista, Fla.

In general, the rank and file players are solidly opposed to the proposal that would end the American tour with the World Series of Golf around the first of October each year. Foreign tours, particularly in Great Britain and Europe, are watching with interest and concern. Acceptance of the proposal could trigger a change in their schedule, too.

Acceptance, however, is far from certain.

"I haven't yet talked to a player who wasn't upset with (Commissioner Deane) Beman's proposal," said Ray Floyd, one of four players on the 10-man board. "I don't think a guy can just come out and say he's going to cut off four to six tournaments.

"The players aren't going to stand for somebody just stepping in and wiping out these tournaments."

Actually, the proposal isn't quite that severe. As the tour now stands, only one tournament would be eliminated from the official schedule. Other, unofficial events could be added.

In general, Beman's proposal would end the U.S. Tour with the World Series of Golf, which will be moved to a new date, around Oct. 1.

Any events after that would be unofficial.

Greater restrictions, possibly prohibitions, would be placed on players wishing to compete in foreign events during the Jan. 1-Oct. 1 American season. The British Open is an exception.

Beman's proposal was prompted by several factors: lack of public and television interest in golf after the start of the football season, the fact that pro football will begin two weeks earlier next year and a desire to make the World Series the season-ending climax to the tour.

The proposal, Beman said in a published message to players, "would open the door to a couple of interesting alternatives for the players — increased participation in foreign events and the addition of a number of unofficial post-season tournaments in the United States.

"Under such a format, restrictions on play in conflicting events would be tightened before the World Series, but afterward there would be no limitations whatsoever. There are numerous tournaments around the world between Oct. 1 and the end of the year, which would provide our players who choose to compete internationally a chance to benefit world golf by their participation."

And, Beman indicated, it could set up a world tour.

"The Board could also take another look at the PGA Tour's present position on international competition," his message said. "Our current policy is that the PGA Tour will neither cosponsor nor approve foreign events, since doing so would be unfair to our sponsors. A curtailment of the official season would give the Board the opportunity to reappraise its policy in light of the positive influence that we could have on world competition by sanctioning some specific events in the fall."

The players'complaints center around the shorter season.

Tee to Cup

Dave Cink just wins and wins

By PHIL ROCHE
PB Staff Writer

Okay, we all know how to get ready for a tournament, right? We get out to the driving range as often as possible, spend hours on the putting greens, play a bunch of rounds, and watch our swings for any bad habits creeping into that perfect form. Just about all the top amateurs and winning pros follow that practice pattern, right? Wrong.

Now sit down on the green for a few moments while I tell you how Mountain Meadows pro Dave Cink "got ready" for the Southern California PGA Match Play tournament last week.

Yeah, that's the one Dave did so well in. Yeah, he won 1,000 skins , whipped four of the leading pros around here in match play and wound up in the semi-finals. He just about beat the eventual winner Denny Meyer, who's been on the PGA Tour off and on for the past three years.

You know all that, you say. How did he get ready for this match play test of golf? Well, I'll tell you. Cink went out and hit six buckets of balls — that's right, six . . . during the past three months, give or take a week. That's right, Dave found a few moments in his busy schedule now and then to pop out a few practice balls very few. No time for the putting green either. Cink's been busy trying to run Mountain Meadows and co-manage Marshall Canyon with Howard Smith.

Oh, I almost forgot. Dave played nine holes at Mountain Meadows with assistant pro Red Simmons and carded three birdies.

"I figured I was ready then," said Cink.

Anyway, Dave turned up last week at the rolling Huntington Seacliffs layout and began playing matches along with 71 ambitious pros, all bent on the $2,700 first place money.

Cink drew a bye on Thursday morning then "survived" his match with old-timer Frank Purcell of Rocksford Golf Course in North San Fernando, winning 2 and 1.

On Friday morning, Cink began to get the feel of the game again, playing well as he defeated Kevin Fleming of Lomas Santa Fe 1 up.

Dave then took on John Ebersburger of Big Canyon Golf Course, Newport Beach, and in 20 holes emerged the winner 1 up.

By Saturday morning the Mountain Meadows pro was enjoying himself. He had more than his $100 entry fee back, he was playing well, and way back in his mind he was thinking "Maybe I can win this whole thing."

Cink met his boyhood pal, Don Beal, a touring pro from Paso Robles, in a donnybrook of a match. Cink was 3 down at the end of three holes, but began firing on the fourth hole and won going away 3-1.

"I really felt great in that match with Beal," said Cink. "He and I had played golf together for years, and I felt that if I played well, I could beat him." He did.

Cink dropped a 2 up decision to Meyer on Saturday afternoon, but he gave it a good shot. "I was 2 up at the end of three holes in that match," said Cink, "and I guess I wasn't used to being out in front." In everyone of his matches except the Meyer round, Cink was "down" to his opponent early, and sometimes late in the match.

Cink doesn't for one moment think most players should get ready for a tournament the way he did. "I just sort of played myself into shape, and my irons were working just fine."

Okay, now that's the story. Go ahead and practice for the monthly tournament if you want. Me, I'm going to get ready for it by turning up on the first tee with my sticks ready to tee off next Saturday.

Dave Cink'll be proud of me.

For the third straight year, Joe Taylor of the advertising department won low gross honors in the Progress Bulletin's annual golf tournament.

Jerry Nist, runnerup in 1976, was also second last Sunday at Hesperia Golf Course. Ed Prather finished in third place with Tony Ault in fourth.

Low net winner with a fine 68 was Roy Van Eaton, who was followed by Joe Bennett and league president Doug Burnett.

The winning team for the league was made up of Ed Prather, Paul Holder, Art Kliewer, and Joe Bennett. The league runs for 30 weeks, with 9-hole rounds played every Wednesday at San Dimas Canyon.

Doug Ferguson fired a net 66 to win the Los Serranos medal tournament on the North Course last Sunday. Ferguson shot a 75 to go with his 9 handicap, coming out with top honors. He was followed by Ron Kramer (3) 68, Chuck Gillanders (4) 68, John Dangleis (10) 68, and Ray Ortiz (9) 69.

Sam Murad shot 78-11 — 67 to win first place in the 11-14 handicap flight. He was followed by Floyd Cooper (11) 68, Tom Herrin (13) 68, Will Vough (11) 69, and Harry Leaming (11) 69.

Earl Guse (88-23-65) walked off with the honors in the 15 and up flight. Other top finishers were Alex Lowe (26) 66, Robert Davis (22) 68, Don Dill (15) 68, and Thomas Hall (19) 69.

First place winners in each flight were awarded $50 gift certificates.

The Colgate Triple Crown LPGA Matchplay Championship will be played Jan. 26-29 at Mission Hills C.C., Rancho Mirage, Calif.

The field, previously set a 9, has been enlarged to the top 16 women players, and the purse has been increased from $50,000 to $85,000. First prize is a whopping $21,000.

The fifth annual PGA Cup Matches are scheduled to get started on Wednesday, Nov. 17 at Mission Hills also. The International golf series will feature 9 of the best players from the United States facing 9 sharpshooters representing England and Ireland.

Four San Dimas residents had the dubious honor of recording a team score of 76, the highest gross mark of the day. Bob Poff, Bob Rascoe, Bob Scholer and Loren Wendt were so honored.

Don Spafford won the straightest drive contest and also was closest to the hole on No. 2. Other close-to-the-hole winners were Keith Vint (No. 5), Ed Weber (No. 7), and

Dean Chance still 'pitching'

DALLAS (AP) — Cy Young Award-winner Dean Chance is still pitching. But as a barker on the midway at the State Fair of Texas, his pitch is: "Just 50 cents to toss the rings and win a poster."

Chance, who tossed a no-hitter, started two All-Star games and hurled two 20-victory seasons, is on the State Fair midway from 8 a.m. until midnight each day, attempting to lure customers to his ring toss game.

"Once you've been part of a big cheering crowd, you never get over it," said Chance, 36. "It's like no other feeling in the world. That's one reason I'm here. I love the crowds. I just can't get away from it.

"I've got a tarm back in Ohio," he added. "Someone in my hometown had a big poster company. He wanted me to help him sell some of his posters at fairs around the country. I got into this whole thing that way."

Chance now cheerfully distributes posters to fairgoers who can toss a ring around the right colored pole. The kids all want posters of Sean Cassidy, Farrah Fawcett-Majors or Elvis Presley.

But there are some people who remember Dean Chance — as a pitcher and as the roommate of infamous fellow pitcher Bo Belinsky.

"I guess I still get about a dozen baseball cards in the mail each week at home from kids who want me to autograph my card and send it back to them," said Chance, who won 20 games and the Cy Young Award in 1964 for the Los Angeles Angels. "They remember. Sometimes people recognize me on the midway."

In 1964, he led the American League with a 20-9 mark and a 1.65 earned run average. He went 20-14 in 1967 for the Minnesota Twins and posted a career mark of 128-115, with a 2.92 ERA.

"I retired from baseball in 1972," he recalled. "I hurt my back and I wasn't playing at my best any more. When I couldn't do my best, I didn't want it any more."

"I don't want him to die, but I wish they'd take him off the air." — Lillian Carter, mother of the president, on having to listen to Howard Cosell on the World Series telecasts.

Norton, Young ready for bout

LAS VEGAS, Nev. (AP) — Ken Norton and Jimmy Young put their boxing talents on the line in this gambling capital Saturday night in a bid to earn another shot heavyweigh champion Muhammad Ali.

Both men have fought Ali for the championship, and many boxing observers feel both defeated Ali. Ali kept the title with two controversial 15-round decisions.

Tale of the Tape
By The Associated Press

	Norton	Young
Age	31	28
Weight	220	210
Height	6-3	6-2

Biceps	16	15

Waist	33	33
Thigh	25	25
Calf	15½	15
Neck	18	17½

Fist	13	12
Ankle	10	10

Norton currently is ranked No. 1 and Young No. 2 by both the World Boxing Association and World Boxing Council, and the winner of the scheduled 15-round bout, billed as a heavyweight title elimination, certainly would deserve a rematch with Ali.

In the controversy surrounding his decision over Norton Sept. 28, 1976 in Yankee Stadium, Ali suggested that Norton-Young fight and that he meet the winner.

But Norton feels that Ali is backing down, contending he is trying to price a fight with Norton or Young out of the market by asking for $12 million.

The champion also has other fighters or his mind, and could defend against Leon Spinks or Alfio Righetti in February. Spinks and Righetti fight later this month.

"How long can he continue to rip off the public?" asked Norton. "Jimmy Young and I should be fighting for the vacated title since it's obvious Ali will try to avoid his commitment. The rules (of the WBC and WBA) state that the champion must defend against the No. 1 contender within a year or the title will be vacated. Ali's year was up in September."

The WBC has threatened to take action at its December convention to strip Ali of title recognition if he doesn't sign to fight the winner of the Norton-Young fight.

The fight, which will be televised by ABC, is intriguing in more ways that just for what it means to the winner.

"It's going to be power against deception" said Norton, who when he was preparing for his second fight with Ali in 1973, had a sparring partner named Jimmy Young.

"I got a lot of confidence working with Ken," said Young whose game in the ring is deception.

Young burst into prominence after a spotty career by losing a disputed decision to Ali in Landover, Md., April 30, 1976, dominating hard-punching Ron Lyle over 12 rounds and then knocking down George Foreman and outpointing the former champion in 12 rounds at San Juan last March 17. The victory over Foreman made the 28year-old Philadelphian's record 21-5-2, with seven knockouts.

Norton goes into the bout with an excellent 38-4 mark, but in "big" fights his record had been on the negative side.

Norton broke Ali's jaw in gaining an upset split 12-round decision March 31, 1973, but he lost a 12-round decision and then the disputed the title fight to Ali. He also was knocked out in two rounds in a title bid against Foreman March 26, 1974.

The 31-year-old movie actor-fighter from Los Angeles enhanced his reputation by stopping highly regarded Duane Bobick in 58 seeconds last May 11.

In two 10-round heavyweight fights, which also are set for television, which is scheduled to run from 9 p.m. to 11:30 p.m., EST, Larry Holmes of Easton, Pa., ranked No. 5 by the WBC and No. 6 by the WBA, will meet Ibar Arrington of Seattle and Jerry Quarry of Los Angeles will begin a comeback against Lorenzo Zanon of Italy.

Quarry, once a top contender, hasn't fought since he was stopped by Norton in five rounds March 24, 1974.

Evert favored in P.S. net tourney

PALM SPRINGS, Calif. (AP) — Chris Evert, who has already built an insurmountable point total in the tournament series, tries to add the richest prize of the competition this week in a $250,000 tournament.

The Championship event, the final stop of the 24-tournament international series, carries the largest purse ever in women's tennis.

The series is sponsored by Colgate.

Play among the top eight women in the series' point standings begins Tuesday at Mission Hills Country Club, with the finals of the round-robin singles scheduled for national television Saturday.

Evert, who is the favorite, has collected an unreachable total of 630 singles performance points in series play this year heading into the next-to-last event this weekend in Puerto Rico. Her points championship assures her of the $100,000 bonus points prize.

Martina Navratilova and Betty Stove were tied for second at 500 points each going into the competition in Puerto Rico.

Westminster to host racquetball tourney

WESTMINSTER — Marty Hogan, undefeated in tournament competition this season, headlines the 32-man field participating in the $15,000 Colgate Pro-Am Racquetball Open to be played November 10-13 at King's Racquetball Court in Westminster.

The event is the third in the 1977-78 pro 10-tournament series sanctioned by the National Racquetball Club and co-sponsored by Leach (racquets) and Seamco (balls).

The men will compete for $10,000 with $4,000 going to the winner while the women players will divide $5,000, the winner earning $2,000. Finals are scheduled for Sunday, Nov. 13, at 1:30 p.m.

Hogan, the 19-year-old St. Louis resident now attending San Diego State, was the sport's leading money winner last season with more than $30,000 earned from nine tournament victories. Various endorsements reportedly will push his 1977 income from the relatively infant sport to well over $100,000.

Hogan has won both NRC pro events this season, at Milwaukee and New York. Twice he turned back Charlie Brumfield in the finals 21-17, 21-17 in Milwaukee and 21-10, 21-15 in New York.

Brumfield, 29, is a former San Diego attorney and three times national racquetball champion. He will be seeded third in this event behind Davey Bledsoe, current national champion who upset Hogan for the title last June. Bledsoe was a semi-finalist in New York.

Shannon Wright, current champion, is the top-seed among the women. Her chief competition should come from Janell Mariott, Jean Sauser, Kathy Williams and Peggy Steding.

Bolt denies temper

RENO, Nev. (AP) — Tommy Bolt, a legend in golfing circles as much for his vocal outbursts as his skills with a club, says it isn't true that he has such a bad temper.

"I'm no more temperamental than any other golfer," said Bolt, winner of the U.S. Open in 1958. "I got a face that when I am concentrating, it looks like I am mad at the whole world."

The 59-year-old golfer, who was in Reno to play in the U.S. Seniors Open, has won 15 major tournaments on the PGA tour.

Dubbed "Terrible" Tommy Bolt by the press, he blamed his public image on reporters who always ask him why he gets mad.

"All the golf stories that were ever written about me were about me and my temper," Bolt said. "That's all they (reporters) ever wanted to talk about."

Some stories say that Bolt has emptied his whole bag of clubs in tournaments by throwing them away in anger, one by one.

"I've only thrown six clubs in my entire life," he insisted. "But I've been accused of throwing them all. I've broken three clubs in my life. They haven't even manufactured all the clubs yet that I was supposed to break. I've never thrown any caddies in the water like they said, either."

So why has the sporting press created such a monster out of Bolt?

"It all started years ago," he explained. "It was kind of a color thing. My temper made good color stories. Nowadays though they really don't have any colorful golfers on the tour ... well, except for Lee Trevino, but he's the only one."

One tag sportswriters couldn't place on Bolt was that of a one-shot champion who wins one major tourney then fades into obscurity.

"I won 10 or 12 major tournaments before I won the U.S. Open in 1958. They can't call me a one-shot guy like Orville Moody and Jack Fleck," he said.

How does he rate his golf game today?

"I'm playing about as well as ever, except I don't putt as well as I did. I seem to have no confidence in my putting. I might have to change my style," he replied.

For a man of 59, Bolt appears in great shape.

"I play a lot of golf, practice a lot and just try to take care of myself. That's what it totals up to," he said.

Just then, Bolt's hotel room phone rang. It was one of his golfing buddies wanting him to go out on the town.

"I just want to lay around and rest," Bolt said. "I'm tired after playing 18 holes of golf today. Besides, I'm not much for the night life anyway."

Piano recital slated

Kathleen Parker, 16-year-old daughter of Mr. and Mrs. David Parker of Upland, will present a piano recital at 4 p.m. next Sunday at Ralpha Pierce Music, 822 N. Garey Ave., Pomona.

A piano student of David Tischler of Upland, Miss Parker will play works by Satie, Mozart, Chopin and Tjeknavorian. Admission is free.

Concert planned at P.C.

The Pomona College music department will present a program of Baroque chamber music in Bridges Hall at 8:15 p.m. Friday. Admission is free.

Susanne Shapiro, instructor of harpsichord at the college, heads the list of performers. She is joined by Anna Carol Dudley, soprano; Lynne Sachdeva, flute, and Carol Herman, viola da gamba.

The program will include a Cantata for soprano, flute and continuo by Andre Campra; a suite for flute and continuo by Jacques Hotteterre; a flute sonata by J.S. Bach; and two descriptive pieces for solo harpsichord, the "Battle Capriccio" by Frescobaldi and one of the "Biblical" sonatas by Johann Kuhnau, performed by Mrs. Shapiro.

Mrs. Shapiro also teaches harpsichord at Cal State Northridge, and records for Orion and Musical Heritage. She appears regularly as soloist and in chamber ensemble throughout Southern California.

Miss Dudley has been acclaimed in this country and in India as a singer with purity of sound and depth of musical feeling.

FANCY STRUTTIN' — Musician Michael Jackson takes some time out for dancing with Rona, a member of the cast of the movie version of "The Wiz," during a party at New York's Studio 54 disco Monday night. The party was held to honor Jackson and the other members of the Jackson Five, popular singing group.

Chamber group to play

The chamber ensemble, Music for a While, will present a program of medieval verse and song in Balch Auditorium, Scripps College, at 8:15 p.m. Saturday. Admission is free.

The group will perform a play based on Guillaume de Machaut's "La Fontaine Amoureuse."

Formed in 1970 by four long-time members of the New York Pro Musica, Music for a While has become widely recognized as "among the most distinguished purveyors of the repertory" (New York Times). The performances of medieval and Renaissance music are not only entertaining but historically precise, utilizing the costumes and instruments of the time.

In addition to their concert appearances and many recordings, the four members of Music for a While, LaNoue Davenport, Judith Davidoff, Christopher Kenny and Shiela Schonbrun, are artists-in-residence at Sarah Lawrence College.

"La Fontaine Amoureuse" is a collection of poems set to music by Guillaume de Machaut. Written by Robert Gainer, the dramatic offering presents Peter Johnson playing the parts of Machaut and the narrator.

Linda Hopkins at the Hartford

Tony Award-winner Linda Hopkins will present a new show of music and song at the Huntington Hartford Theater in Hollywood Nov. 10 through 13. The show is entitled "An Evening with Linda Hopkins."

Last year, sold out audiences raved about Miss Hopkins in her Tony-winning performance of "Me & Bessie" at the Los Angeles Music Center and the Huntington Hartford Theater. In her upcoming engagement, Miss Hopkins will perform in her own inimitable style, more than 20 songs ranging from disco and jazz to popular ballads and blues, plus her favorites from Bessie Smith, all augmented by an on stage orchestra.

"An Evening With Linda Hopkins" is produced by James A. Doolittle in association with the Southern California Theater Association. The production will have musical arrangements by Tommy Newsome, costumes by Bob Mackie and lighting by Sam Stickler.

Performance schedule will be Thursday through Saturday at 8:30 p.m. and Sunday at 7:30 p.m.

Citrus College to offer Thornton wilder comedy

Citrus College will present Thornton Wilder's Pulitzer Prize play, "The Skin of Our Teeth," in the auditorium at 8 p.m. Thursday, Friday and Saturday.

The play, a satire, is the story of the extraordinary adventures of the Antrobus family down through the ages, from the time the great wall of ice creeps over the world to the end of the war — any war. The Antrobuses have survived flood, fire, pestilence, the seven-year locusts, the black pox, a dozen wars and as many depressions.

Dorothy's trouble with Hollywood

HOLLYWOOD — (NEA) — I suggested to Dorothy Uhnak that Hollywood might change the ending of her current best-seller, "The Investigation."

She seemed stunned for a minute by the suggestion, then she smiled.

"It would upset me," she said. "It would upset me very much. When you first said that, I was startled. It just never occured to me that they might do that. But I agree that it is possible."

Very possible. Her book has been bought by Paramount and they figure it is going to be one of their biggies next year or the year after that. But the book's ending is unconventional — I can't go into more detail than that without spoiling it for you, and I'd never do that.

"With Hollywood," Dorothy Uhnak said, "anything is possible. "Judging by what has been done to some of my previous things I should know better."

Uhnak has been burned a few times. Her first book, "The Bait," won an Edgar award, as a top mystery, and ABC bought it for a TV movie. They put some good people — Vera Miles and William Devane — in it, but she says they changed the whole concept and she shudders when she thinks about it.

Then she wrote a book called "The Ledger," which won an award in France. Again it was bought for TV. She says they changed the central character from white to black which, in this case, completely altered the story. That eventually became the TV series, Get Christie Love, with Teresa Graves.

DOROTHY UHNAK

Next came her big best-seller, "Law and Order," which also became a TV movie. Uhnak says it was handled better than the other two, but she still thinks NBC did some things to it which hurt.

She hopes for better things for "The Investigation," but, like I said, I have a hunch Paramount will change the ending.

When she wrote it, Uhnak had a soap opera actress named Ilene Kristen in mind for her leading character, a lady named Kitty Keeler. Kristen plays Dee on ABC's Ryan's Hope and she doesn't know this, but she has a big fan in Dorothy Uhnak. "Every day when I sat down to write", said Uhnak, "I'd get a fix on Kitty by watching Ilene Kristen."

For her cop hero, she thinks Darren McGavin would be right.

It seems obvious now that Dorothy Uhnak was a policewoman. She served on the force in New York and says that all TV cop shows are fantasies — except for Barney Miller. Like many cops I've talked to, she loves that series. She says, "I've known all those guys myself when I was on the force."

But, as for the others, she has nothing but contempt: 'They are all a bunch of nonsense," she says. "Police Story is really bad — no police force anywhere works the way those men work. And Police Woman is worse still. It is a total fantasy.

"But I suppose that is what television has to do to get an audience, to get a rating. If they told the truth about police work, it just wouldn't be very exciting. Seventy-five percent of police cases are solved through the use of informants, who are not very nice or attractive people."

UC Riverside to do Newley musical show

The theater department of UC Riverside will present the musical comedy, "Stop the World, I Want To Get Off," in the Studio Theater opening opening Nov. 9.

"Stop the World . . . ," written by Anthony Newley and Leslie Bricusse, continues Nov. 9 through 12 and 16 through 19 at 8:15 each evening, with a 2:30 matinee added on Nov. 12.

Tickets are on sale at the newly-opened Fine Arts ticket office in University Theater for $2.50 general and $1.50 for students and senior citizens. Season tickets are also on sale at $10 general for six shows, $6 for students and senior citizens.

Box office hours are 11 a.m. to 6 p.m. Monday through Friday. Information about all performances is available by calling 787-4331 or 787-3345.

According to director Eric Barr, "Stop the World . . ." is a story of modern man (told by clowns in a circus atmosphere) "striving for a life of wealth and prestige but finding it empty without a lasting relationship with someone."

Playing the lead role of Littlechap will be junior Art Mendoza, who has a long list of stage and film credits to his name.

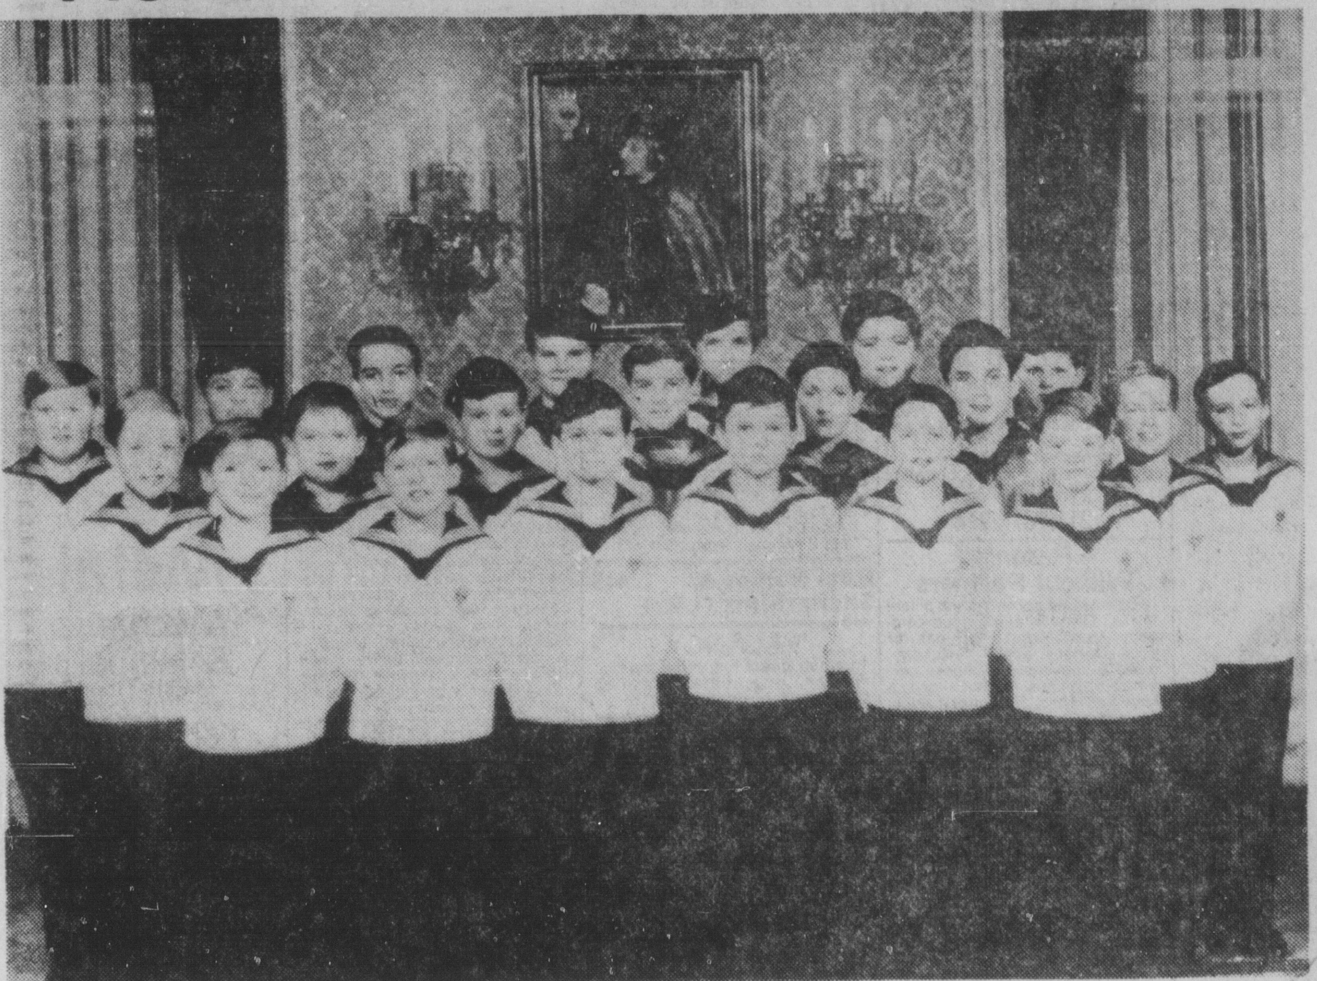
Vienna Choir will visit Claremont



SINGING SAILORS—The Vienna Choir Boys, on their 33rd tour of North America, will give a concert in Bridges Auditorium of the Claremont Colleges at 3 p.m. next Sunday.

The internationally known Vienna Choir Boys will present a concert in Bridges Auditorium of the Claremont Colleges at 3 o'clock next Sunday afternoon.

The choir is made up of 24 boys between the ages of 10 and 13 and since 1924 it has been journeying from the Austrian capital to sing all over the world. Each year, fewer than 100 boys, only 10 percent of the applicants, are admitted to the institution. Before admission to one of the choirs, students receive two years of training. Each boy is given an academic education in addition to his musical one, and, when his voice changes, is aided by the institution in furthering his education for the career of his choice.

PIERRE ALECHINSKY

Belgian artist wins $50,000

PITTSBURGH (AP) — Painter Pierre Alechinsky, whose physician-parents wanted him to be a doctor, has won a $50,000 art prize for dream-like canvas anatomies inspired by fascination with his family.

The Belgian-born artist began a visit to Pittsburgh Monday which culminates Thursday when he receives the Andrew W. Mellon Award. He is celebrating the prize with a 134-piece exhibit at the Carnegie Museum of Art.

"When I make a painting, I make a question," he says. "A painting is not to give an answer."

Alechinsky, 50, who wears a beard and shaves his head, was chosen by an international panel of judges to receive the award named for the late Pittsburgh financier for the most representative living modern artist, according to museum art director Leon Arkus. The new award is to be given every two years, and may be shared by more than one artist.

"We are not saying Alechinsky is the greatest contemporary artist in the world," Arkus said. "That would be impossible to do and unfair."

Alechinsky, whose father fled Russia to escape religious persecution, was born in Brussels in 1927. Although encouraged to enter the medical field, he was facinated by the artists with whom his family lived.

"Upstairs, my aunt produces her well-mannered paintings. On the floor below, grandmother plays Schubert sonatas accompanied by a gentleman from France on the violin," he once wrote of his childhood.

Alechinsky, who now lives in Paris, spoke to reporters through a translator amid four rooms filled with his colorful expressionist paintings of humans and animals.

Alechinsky's bold works are virtually the only ones still done in the COBRA tradition, a form adopted in the late 1940s by a group of artists disenchanted with the abstractionist school.

COBRA is an acronym for the cities of Copenhagen, Brussels and Amsterdam, whose artists broke with tradition to instill emotion and spontaneity in European painting.

"Certainly I don't know what will happen before the work," he says. "But I feel something during the work."

THROUGH THE SPECTRUM — The Dancers and Musicians of Bali will perform at El Camino College, Torrance, at 2 o'clock this afternoon . . . models, drawings and photographs make up "A View of California Architecture, 1960-1976," on display through Dec. 4 at the La Jolla Museum of Contemporary Art . . . the Sidney Muldrow Ensemble will present a free concert at 2 o'clock this afternoon at the county Natural History Museum, Exposition Park, Los Angeles . . . the Otis Art Institute, Los Angeles, is showing works of On Kawara through Dec. 4.

Les Ballets Trockadero to play at Citrus College

"Les Ballets Trockadero de Monte Carlo," the hilarious, all-male satirical dance company, will perform in the Citrus College auditorium at 8 p.m. Nov. 11.

The show is the opening event in the college's popular Evenings at Eight series.

The world-famous troupe has played to capacity audiences in theaters throughout the nation, including the Pavillion of the Los Angeles Music Center.

The Los Angeles Times says of their performance, "They dance magnificently. The Trocks deliver the goods and conquer. These incredible dance artists will have you rolling with laughter."

The company knows classical ballet thoroughly. Vogue critic Leo Lerman says, "Here are some of the most remarkable ballerinas in the world: men, in tutus, whose lethal concern is not impersonation but ballet itself: its cliches, its onstage deportment, its great celebrants — their choreographic devices, their signature styles. From the moment you get a Trockadero program and read, you know that you are meant to laugh. But when the curtain rises and you see the troupe in full, correct, on-point classical Swan Lake flight, you are not so sure, until suddenly you ache with hilarity."

Reserved seat tickets may be purchased now at Citrus College box office, open noon to 5 p.m. weekdays. BankAmericard and Master Charge accounts are honored. General admission is $5.50 and $5, with a discount offered senior citizens, children under 12 and students.

Artists showing at Poly

The Cal Poly Pomona art department is presenting two contemporary American artists in an exhibition in the University Union art gallery through Nov. 11.

The works of Manuel Samaniego, a Chicano artist, and Bill Armstrong, a serial photographer, will be featured in the display. Armstrong is the assistant audio visual coordinator at the University.

The gallery is open weekdays from 11 a.m. until 3 p.m., and on Tuesday and Thursday from 7 until 9 p.m. It is closed weekends.

A reception will be held in the gallery Tuesday from 7 until 9 p.m.

The exhibition is free and open to the public.

Watercolors at Gallery 8

An exhibition of watercolors by eight noted California artists will open with a reception at Gallery 8, 411 Harvard Ave., Claremont, from 4 to 6 p.m. today. The public is invited.

Taking part will be Rex Brandt, Gerald Brommer, Phil Dike, Jim Fuller, Emil Kosa, Elizabeth Baskerville McNaughton, Millard Sheets and Robert E. Wood.

Four of these artists, Brandt, Dike, Kosa and Sheets, all members of the National Academy, represent the founding generation of the group of watercolorists called the "White Paper Painters." Their energies and enthusiasms have spanned a period of 50 years, in which the strong California school has produced numerous followers.

Following in the traditions established in the earlier years, Wood, Brommer, McNaughton and Fuller have contributed greatly to the California art scene, excelling in their own unique styles. The exhibition will provide a broad range for watercolor enthusiasts to view.

Gallery hours are Tuesday through Sunday, noon to 5 p.m.

PVAA to hear artist

Artist Joan Beauregard will give a demonstration entitled, "An Introduction of Oriental Brush," at a meeting of the Pomona Valley Art Association at the Claremont Public Library, Second Street and Harvard Avenue, at 7:30 p.m. Tuesday. The public is invited.

Mrs. Beauregard has been studying Oriental Brush with Claremont artist Ning Yeh. Her enthusiasm for this form of art led her to offer the demonstration to acquaint the public with the beauty of this type of painting.

Western art at Gannon

An exhibition of Western paintings by local artist Milton Thompson will open with a champagne reception at Gannon's Gallery, 118 W. Bonita Ave., San Dimas, from 5 to 8 p.m. Friday. The show will continue to Nov. 19.

Thompson got his first art training at Otis Art Institute 50 years ago. He has since studied with various teachers, notably Watson Cross of West Covina.

Thompson was a cowhand on California ranches in the '20s and '30s and later studied animal husbandry and agricultural engineering at UC Davis. He raised livestock and went into engineering during World War II. He retired to fulltime painting last year.

Thompson was an early officer of the El Monte Artists Guild and founding member and former president of both the Mid-Valley Arts League and the Aerojet Art Club.

The present exhibit, representing a year's work, is his attempt to link his two fields of interest, art and ranching.

Indian exhibit planned

The seventh annual Indian Arts and Crafts Show will be held from 10 a.m. to 5:30 p.m. Nov. 26-Dec. 4 at the Capistrano Trading Post, across from the Capistrano Mission in San Juan Capistrano.

This year "The Art of the Hopi" will feature demonstrations of Hopi silversmithing, Third Mesa wicker basket weaving and kachina carving. Costumed dancers will perform the Hopi Butterfly three times daily.

On sale will be paintings, baskets, pottery, kachinas and jewelry from the Hopi area of Arizona. "The Story of Hopi Crafts," a pamphlet outlining the fine points of collecting and understanding Hopi art work, is available free.

NEW YORK (AP) — Mrs. Walter B. Ford II has been elected to the national board of trustees of the Archives of American Art, a branch of the Smithsonian Institution.

Mrs. Ford succeeds her mother, Mrs. Edsel B. Ford.

Paper art show set at Scripps

An exhibition of art works made from paper will be shown Nov. 9 to Dec. 21 at the Lang Art Gallery, Scripps College. Paper art is a growing movement of the 1970s which features handmade or commercial paper as the primary expressive medium rather than as background surface.

Berkeley artist Nancy Genn, who is represented in the exhibition, will discuss "Contemporary Papermaking Techniques" at 8 p.m. Nov. 11, in Humanities Auditorium, Scripps College. A reception will follow in Lang Art Gallery. Both events are free and the public is welcome.

The "paper movement" has increasingly attracted the attention of artists, critics and museums. In the Lang exhibit of 70 works by 22 contemporary artists, a wide variety of results are revealed, ranging from the small and intimate to the monumental, from the two-dimensional to the three-dimensional, and from the formal to the conceptual.

A catalogue containing 15 illustrations features an essay and entries written by David S. Rubin, assistant director of the Galleries of the Claremont Colleges.

Gallery hours are 1 to 5 p.m. daily (including Saturday and Sunday); 7 to 9 p.m. Wednesday; closed legal and school holidays. Admission is free.

DEAR POLLY — Wishing to eliminate the grit often left in the bathtub after cleaning it with a scouring powder, my husband tried cleaning the tub with shampoo. It cleaned and rinsed easily and left a pleasant aroma in the bathroom. Be sure to rinse thoroughly! — ROBIN.

DEAR POLLY---When you have to move a sofa or other heavy piece of furniture by yourself, put a throw rug under the legs and push it where you want it to go. You'll find this makes the job easier and does not scratch hardwood floors.---J.L.S.

DEAR POLLY---A sheet of that new fabric softener is great for brushing and cleaning my navy blue slacks, that pick up lint and dust so badly. Now that these slacks have been so brushed from the knees down, both inside and out, they no longer pick up so much--no doubt because static electrical build-up is neutralized.---LELA.

DEAR POLLY---I read the Pointer about freezing a wet sponge to use on bumps, etc. and this prompted me to send in the method I use. I put a teething ring (the kind that contains liquid) in the freezer and use this cold, dry ring on my first-grader's bumps. It is especially good to use on a hand or finger.---SISTER M.A.

PERRY BOWEN OF FORT SILL, OK, ASKS:
"HOW DOES A BROKEN BONE HEAL?"
IF YOU ACCIDENTALLY BREAK A BONE, THE BROKEN BONE BEGINS AT ONCE TO PRODUCE NEW BONEMAKING MATERIAL TO BRIDGE THE BROKEN ENDS. AT FIRST THE NEW BONE MATERIAL IS SOFT AND EASILY INJURED, AND THE BROKEN ENDS MUST BE HELD FIRMLY IN PLACE WITH A CAST OR SPLINT AS THE BONE HEALS. GRADUALLY THE NEW BONE HARDENS UNTIL IT FORMS A SOLID CONNECTION BETWEEN THE BROKEN ENDS.

"SERVING THE POMONA & SAN GABRIEL VALLEYS FOR 15 YEARS"

Life among the swinging jet set in a Colorado ski resort forms the background for NBC's Novel for television "Aspen" airing three consecutive nights, this Saturday, Sunday and Monday (Nov. 5, 6 and 7) from 9-11PM each night. Starring are Sam Elliott as an ambitious Colorado lawyer, and Perry King as the man whose murder conviction sentence he is trying to have reversed.

There are two major themes for the six-hour drama: a headline grabbing murder trial in which a ski bum is accused of the slaying of a 15 year old Aspen girl, and the jockeying of real estate interests against ecology-minded citizens over the building of a multi-million dollar real estate development.

The secondary theme of the tumultuous drama, finds real estate interests attempting to buy up ranches in the area to lay out ski-runs and condominiums, only to meet opposition from such longtime residents as Tom Keating's father, Owen (John McIntire).

The stellar cast boasts the presence of handsome Anthony Franciosa as an ex-mobster moved into real estate, Joseph Cotten as a respected lawyer whose short-sightedness puts him in the spot to be blackmailed successfully by Sam Elliott; Bo Hopkins as a disloyal Army buddy of the convicted slayer, Roger Davis as the handsome rich guy who marries Sam Elliott's girl, George Di Cenzo (who played Vincent Bugliosi in the TV movie "Helter Skelter") as County District Attorney who fights Sam Elliott for eight years, and newcomer Douglas Matthew Heyes, who stars as a Vietnam veteran for hire.

ASPEN

BATTLE

Stars from the three television networks compete in a wide variety of sports events on Battle of the Network Stars '77, an ABC Sports special airing Friday from 9-11PM on ABC. Howard Cosell and Telly Savalas serve as hosts for the competition with ABC Sports experts Bruce Jenner and Davey Marr reporting on individual contests. Baseball great Frank Robinson serves as Commissioner.

Gabe Kaplan once again captains the ABC team, with Jimmie Walker and Dan Haggerty serving as captains of CBS and NBC respectively. The contests are conducted over a grueling two-day period at Pepperdine University in Malibu, Calif., with the teams vying for nearly $400,000 in prize money. The events include rowing, swimming, bowling, golf, baseball throw, running relay, obstacle course, football and tug-of-war. The teams are comprised of eight members each with two alternates.

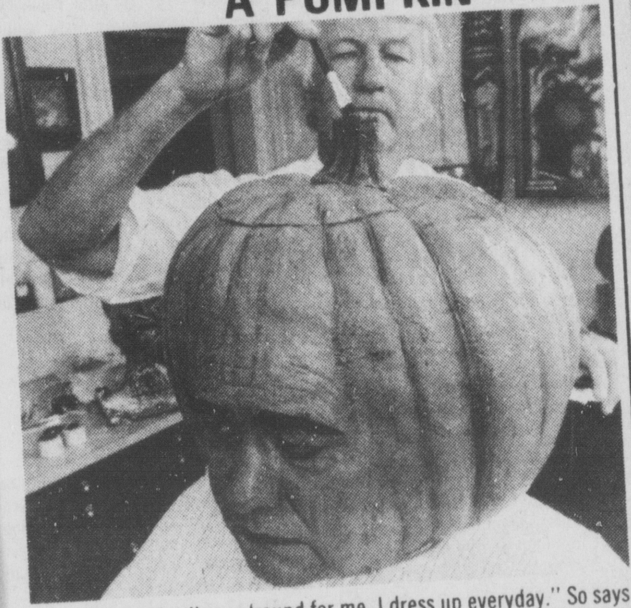
CLOSE-UP

JONATHAN BECOMES A PUMPKIN



"Halloween is all year 'round for me. I dress up everyday." So says Jonathan Winters, who at once can be hip, geriatric spinster Maudie Frickert or mischievous little Chester Honeyhugger. He's also backwoods hick Lamar Gumbody, a zany Scandinavian, an Indian chief, and football coach. And for the first time, this Halloween he becomes a pumpkin. "I don't think there's a field around--even in Fresno--that grows pumpkins like that," he said.

Winters stars in Halloween Hall O'Fame," a special presentation for The Wonderful World of Disney, Sunday evening at 7PM on NBC. Performing the metamorphosis was make-up artist Robert Schiffer, who aged Burt Lancaster 55 years for "Birdman of Alcatraz," and whose credits stretch from "A Night at the Opera" through "My Fair Lady" to "Camelot."

Winters sat for an hour under latex and plaster to make the facial impression used to create the pumpkin-head mask. "It's a spooky experience. They put straws in your nose and that's the only way you can breathe. You feel your whole face shrinking. It becomes quite heavy and your head drops. You can't move or see and you don't know if you're ever going to get out of it," Winters recalled.

Describing the overall experience as "challenging and great fun," Winters said; "My body felt strange. I was secure with my head because I already knew I was a pumpkin mentally. There's a lot of seeds up there--some gone."

By his own admission, Winters is a sensitive individual with definite opinions about acting, art, current events, life and happiness. The 51-year-old actor can now afford to be choosy about the kind of roles he takes and much of his time is devoted to other interests: painting, study of American Indians and writing his autobiography. Although comedy remains his first love, Winters said he would like the opportunity to do a straight dramatic film role. "Hollywood tends to pigeonhole you," complained Winters. "They keep using those little boxes of comedy. You have to edge your way in. If an actor is smart, he will start with a smaller role in a good drama, like a character part, rather than expecting the audience to accept him immediately in his new capacity."

Winters prides himself on being independent. This is one reason he became a painter. "What you put on that canvas is your own," Winters said. "Written words are always going to offend somebody. The same with the spoken word. Not so with art. It's a place to hide and, at the same time, express yourself. That's the beauty of it. Painting is also a release from tension. The world is 'tuned down' when you're painting."

Although he appreciates all art styles, surrealism remains his favorite and the one he does best. His favorite artists are Magritte, Klee, Dali, Rousseau and Chagall. Sunshine, smiling faces, birds and other manifestations of warmth are essential components to Winters' paintings.

BELLE OF AMHERST

The Belle of Amherst, Julie Harris' one-woman celebration of the life, spirit and poetry of Emily Dickinson, airs as a special encore telecast 8-9:30PM, Tuesday on KCET, Channel 28.

The television premiere last season won for Ms. Harris the TV Critics Circle Award—a further confirmation of her highly-praised Broadway performance in The Belle of Amherst which won her a fifth Tony Award. Ms. Harris is the only actress in history to win five Antoinette Perry Awards.

The play, written by William Luce, is based on Miss Dickinson's poetry, notes and correspondence; it was produced by Mike Merrick and Don Gregory and presented by KCET/Los Angeles. Under the direction of Charles S. Dubin, it was performed in KCET's studios before a live audience without interruption, except for the play's original single intermission. Charles Nelson Reilly, who directed the stage version, acted as artistic advisor.

Ms. Harris portrays the poet throughout the span of her life, from her early teens—when she wrote that she would surely be The Belle of Amherst—into her early fifties, when she had written most of her more than 1700 poems.

Ironically, only seven of those poems appeared in print during her lifetime—and they were all published anonymously. Some five years after her death, with the publication of her first volume of verse, the world became aware that a genius had lived and worked in the little town of Amherst, Massachusetts.

ASK THEM YOURSELF

Send the question, on a postcard, to "Ask," Family Weekly, 641 Lexington Ave., New York, N.Y. 10022. We'll pay $5 for published questions. Sorry, we can't answer others.

FOR BARBARA WALTERS, ABC newscaster

I never see your tasteful and beautiful clothes more than once. Why?—Frances C. Viverette, Rocky Mount, N.C.

● I do wear my things more than once. Year after year, in fact, and I often repeat my outfits on the air. I guess it seems as though I don't wear the same clothes twice because I have mostly separates — sweaters, blouses, skirts and pants — and mix and match a lot. Switching gives old stuff a new look.

FOR LEE MAJORS, star of Six Million Dollar Man

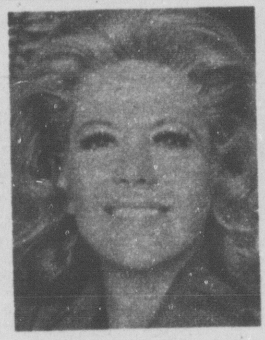
I hear you do your own stunts. Have you ever seriously hurt yourself on the show?—Donna Rebers, Watertown, Conn.

● I've never been seriously injured during my adventures, but almost every day I do pick up some new bruises. I've also pulled muscles and sprained my ankles quite a few times. One recent stunt I won't soon forget was climbing out of a hovering helicopter, down a rope ladder, and then back up and into the copter — all without a harness.



FOR DINAH SHORE, singer

Why don't you ever wear a short dress, or anything that shows your legs? —Dawn Fink, Gloucester City, N.J.

● It's not because I have bad legs. I just find I'm uncomfortable in short dresses because they have a trick of inching up when I sit down. And, as I sit a lot, I'd rather be comfortable and give my attention to what I'm doing and saying than wonder about what I'm showing.

FOR J. CARTER BROWN, director, National Gallery of Art, Washington, D.C.

Of all the fabulous King Tut artifacts seen now by several million people, which did you find the most fascinating?—Carol Hunt, Boise, Idaho

● The gold sculpture of Tutankhamen as harpooner. Unlike so much of the static tradition of Egyptian art, this piece captures the delicacy and poise of the young king in action, opening the way for ancient Greek art almost 1,000 years later and the Italian Renaissance another 1,800 years after that.

FOR THE "ASK THEM YOURSELF" EDITOR

Bring me up to date on Marjorie Wallace (Jimmy Connors' ex). —M.K., Nassau, N.Y.

● Marjorie, 23, a former Miss World from Indiana (the only American to win that title), is doing TV commercials. Work is No. 1 with her. She puts in a 10-to 12-hour day and is making more money than she ever dreamed was possible. Lloyd Kolmer, her agent-manager said: "Marjorie has had her fling of dating in the celebrity world and figured it's high time to settle down — to work. She's more concerned with her career than with romances."

FOR PRESIDENT CARTER

When history is written, how do you want to go down in it?—A.G., Port Huron, Mich.

● I hope I can be recorded in history as the man who began the process of eliminating atomic weapons from the world.

FOR LEE MERIWETHER, star of Barnaby Jones

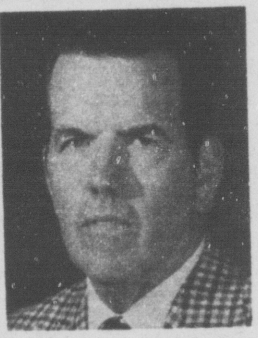
Who comes to mind first when you think of a sexy man?—C.E., Redondo, Calif.

● Buddy Ebsen. Surprised? As far as I'm concerned, sexy and attractive qualities come from the soul of a man; his monetary worth and physical attributes have nothing to do with it. I could give you a long list of other men — but you did ask for the "first" one.



FOR ART McNALLY, supervisor of officials, National Football League

Why did the NFL remove the white stripe from the football?—Stan Castleberry, Lufkin, Texas

● To achieve maximum consistency, the members of the Rules Committee decided that every game should be played with the same brown ball. The lighting conditions for night games have improved immeasurably in recent years, and it was felt there was no need for a stripe to be painted on game balls. To date, there have been no complaints about visibility.

FOR ANDREA McARDLE, star of Broadway's Annie

Do you ever get nervous onstage, and how did you get started? I'm 15, and dying to become an actress. What advice can you give me? —L.V., Greensburg, Pa.

● Kids aren't as scared as adults — perhaps because we haven't got as much to lose if anything goes wrong. I got my start when a New York agent saw me taking dancing lessons at a Philadelphia recreation center and picked me to audition for commercials. I'd suggest you take dancing lessons and try to let a talent scout see you. If not, audition for stage shows. Even if you don't get hired, it's good experience.

FOR JOHNNY RODRIGUEZ, country singer

Are you Puerto Rican or Spanish?—K.G., Gary, Ind.

● Neither. I'm a mixture of Mexican, Indian and Irish. I was born John Raul Davis Rodriguez, the fourth of nine children of a welder in Sabinal, Texas. I guess my Irish ancestry is dominant. How else could I have been so lucky so quickly in what I'm doing? It must be the luck of the Irish.

PRO AND CON

Should Parents Of Children In College Receive Tax Credits For Tuition?

PRO Sen. William V. Roth Jr. (R.-Del.), member of Senate Finance Committee

It is vital that Congress provide tax credits to families struggling to send their children to college. According to statistics, a growing number of qualified students cannot obtain a college education because of skyrocketing costs. Middle-income families are especially hard hit. Millions of families today are neither rich enough to afford college nor considered poor enough to qualify for the different Government aid programs that the taxes they pay make possible. Working Americans do not want Government handouts; they merely want to keep more of their own earnings for fulfilling the American dream of a college education for their children.

CON Dr. Carlene Crumpton-Bawden, principal analyst for education, House of Representatives Committee on the Budget

The tax code is the least feasible place to carry out social policy. Under the terms of most proposals, up to 80 percent of benefits would go to families with incomes above $20,000 by 1983. The needy student is left out all together. True, rising college costs are a burden to parents, but the cost of close to $7 billion in lost Federal revenue, over a five-year period, must be weighed. Under a tuition tax credit, a family's burden is reduced by a very small amount. A $300 tax credit against tuition charges of $4,000 or even $6,000 does not solve the problem. Grants or guaranteed loans are better choices, giving more dollars directly to students.

A SPECIAL MESSAGE OF LOVE AND CARING

"I'm mentally retarded," said Mike Spencer after being introduced at Special Olympics by my daughter Eunice. "But," he added, "please don't call me handicapped."

By Rose Kennedy

Many times over the years I have been asked to give a message of hope and optimism concerning the mentally retarded. Only a parent who has known the anguish of hearing a doctor say, "Your baby is retarded," understands how desperate is the need to hear words of reassurance, to gain the knowledge that there is a place in the world for a tiny human being who must overcome a grave handicap.

My daughter Rosemary was such a child, and I was such a parent. At first, I had only faith to comfort me. There was nowhere to turn, nothing doctors could do or say, no medical or community resources to console or support us.

But that was more than a half-century ago. Over the years much has happened to ease the loneliness and to sustain the confidence of families with special children. And much has been accomplished in making a place for these children.

It is hard to believe that only 30 years ago, when one of the founders of the Association for Retarded Citizens wanted to place a notice in her local newspaper asking other parents of special children to get in touch with her, the editor refused to let her sign her name or include her address. Mental retardation was considered a guilty secret to be wept over alone.

Today all that has changed. The National Association for Retarded Citizens has more than 250,000 members, with representation in every state. Many of those members are the retarded themselves. For, increasingly, we have learned that the great majority of the mentally retarded are fully capable — within some limitations — of living happy and useful lives of work, play, love and responsibility.

Much of what has happened to improve life for the retarded has come about since my son Jack was President. Of all he did in his tragically few years in office, the focus of his Administration on the retarded may well have been his most lasting and magnificent achievement. As he said in 1961, when he established the first Presidential panel on mental retardation in our country, "It is the emotional strain, the problems of adjustment, training, schooling and vocation — the attempts to make possible a full life for the child — that represent the major impact of retardation. Our goals should be to prevent retardation. Failing this, we must provide for the retarded child the same opportunity for full social development that is the birthright of every American child."

The American people, all of you, have responded generously and nobly to this call for equal opportunities for the retarded. The many young people working in summer camps and community programs have especially dedicated themselves to helping the retarded learn the skills of both work and play that were so long denied them.

November is Mental Retardation Month. "Together, we can do more" is the theme.

But guaranteeing this birthright has not come quickly or easily. As Dr. Richard Masland, one of the great pioneers in the field, has said, "We make progress in mental retardation by many small advances across a broad front."

Employment of the retarded, for example, has come slowly. In the Federal Civil Service the rules had to be changed so that the retarded could be given a chance to prove what they could do — rather than be required to make a certain score on an intelligence test. Now thousands of the mentally retarded work for Federal, state and local governments.

In thousands of communities the retarded now work in industry or in workshops where they can perform useful and constructive tasks under special supervision. I stress the importance of work because through it we learn to value ourselves most highly and to fashion a meaning and purpose for our lives. Even if it is only making candles or packaging parts for do-it-yourself kits, the dignity of work and the pride of accomplishment are possible for the great majority of our retarded citizens. Private and public employers and labor unions have become more enlightened than they were when Jack was President, but there still is a long way to go. I have been given assurances by many labor leaders that we will continue to make advances until jobs are available to all the mentally retarded who can qualify for them.

Just as important as the growing opportunities for work are the new laws that guarantee every special child and young adult the chance for an education equal to that of any other child. One new law — Public Law 94-142, passed by Congress last year — assures that every retarded person, even the very seriously handicapped, will receive the benefits of a public education tailored to his or her needs and abilities. That means that parents do not have to ruin themselves financially to send their children to special schools or to keep them in private institutions. As Jack said 16 years ago, "The grim struggle for survival does not allow us the luxury of wasting our human resources." Now we are beginning to translate that important insight into national practice.

When Public Law 94-142 was being debated, we found that, while it provided for academic and vocational training, it did not include provision for physical education. Since 1968, The Kennedy Foundation, which my husband and I established, has sponsored an international program of physical fitness and sports competition called Special Olympics. More than 650,000 mentally retarded people take part in this program in every one of our states and 19 foreign countries. Special Olympics has taught us a great lesson: the more the mentally retarded build their physical skills, the more they develop socially and even intellectually. Thus, because play and exercise have been proven to be so beneficial to the retarded, equal access to physical education is included in the law.

Last year, The Kennedy Foundation started a new program of Internships in Recreation for Special Olympians who can qualify for jobs in the recreation field and whose communities will guarantee them a permanent position once their one-year internship is over. The first three Kennedy interns are now entering permanent employment. One of them, Mike Spencer, is going to teach swimming in the Danville, Va., Park and Recreation Department. He learned to swim in Special Olympics, and he learned to love people because he saw love all around him.

"I'm mentally retarded," Mike said with great dignity and firmness. "But please don't call me handicapped."

This, I think, sums up beautifully the message I have for the parents, relatives, friends and neighbors of the mentally retarded. We need no longer be afraid of this term as the description of a devastating and hopeless handicap.

For millions of lively, interested, loving and active boys and girls and men and women we once committed to the oblivion of institutions, the doors are now open to most of what society offers to all of us.

In the past 50 years I have seen the world come to terms with its mentally retarded children, accept their human qualities and come to know them as warm, tender, feeling human beings.

Parents often ask me for consolation or advice, and I used to feel that the best I could offer was a prayer of strength and courage, such as my own favorite, the "Meditation," written by John Henry Cardinal Newman. But now I feel confident that I can help sustain them with the reality of expectation, with the conviction that a life of many glowing possibilities is now open to their special children.

Yes, those fateful words, "your child is retarded," still darken our joy at the advent of a new life. But we have learned that the words mean almost nothing in themselves. We are all, in a sense, retarded. All of us fall short of the ideal. All of us are slow and awkward compared with others.

A mind that is slow need no longer mean a life that's unfulfilled. A retarded person need no longer depend on the whim of charity or the shelter of high walls.

Now there are dedicated scientists, skilled teachers, just laws and understanding communities. True, much needs to be accomplished before mental retardation is eradicated. But today there is a richness of life for the retarded who already are learning, playing, reading, painting, making poetry, loving, swimming, dancing, worshipping, working. Yet, we must keep working and striving for all those who, like my daughter Rosemary, are retarded in mind but blessed in spirit.

My vision is a world where mental retardation will be overcome, where we no longer mourn with mothers of retarded children but exult and rejoice with parents of healthy, happy youngsters. Then, and only then, can we say, in the words of St. Paul: "I have fought the good fight. I have finished the course. I have kept the faith."

AND WHAT ABOUT MILEAGE?

As different as people are,
They're not so much so as a car.
Cars come, for instance, in more hues:
Imagine people greens and blues.
And people may be short or tall.
Or fat or thin — that's nearly all.
But think of cars, the two-door, four-door,
The rear a lift-up, like one more door.
Consider dashboards and upholstery,
The latter being firm or bolstery.
Consider square or sloping backs,
All types of bumpers, lights and racks. . . .
I'm glad I'm not a car, I know—
My trade-in value would be low.

THE DIFFERENCE

If hours, efforts, or brains are not what separate the rich from the average guy who is swamped with debts and very little income then what is?

I learned the answer to that question from an old fellow in Denver. This fellow worked in a drug store stocking the shelves. Very few people knew that he had $200,000 in the bank, all of which he had earned starting from nothing.

Within a year after meeting him, I was told and shown the same thing by a young man who had recently earned over a million dollars. By this time, I began to realize that what I was being shown was truly a remarkable and workable way to grow rich.

THE BEGINNING

I began to apply the principles and methods I had been shown. The results were amazing. I couldn't believe how easy it was, in fact it seemed too easy.

But then I met an elderly lady (83 years old) who, although not very smart, has made $117,000 using the same formula.

I then figured my beginning wasn't luck.

For three and one half years, I worked hard to refine and improve on the formula that I had been shown, so that it would be easy to get quicker results.

As I did this, my assets multiplied very rapidly (160% per year) to the point that I didn't have to work any longer.

MORE LEISURE

I guess I am bragging now, but I did start spending a lot of time in our back yard pool, traveling around the country, and doing a lot of loafing.

Then one day a friend asked me how he could do what I had done.

So I began to outline the formula that I had improved to show him really how simple it was, and how he could do the same thing.

Mark Haroldsen spent four years perfecting a "wealth formula" and became a millionaire in the process:

"I've found," says Haroldsen, "that most people just need a very specific road map to follow. . . they can do what I've done. Millionaires are not smarter than you, they just know the wealth formula."

One of many unsolicited comments on my material:

"... when it came I read it. Then I read it again, and have read it about once a week since it came. No magic. No secrets. A plain, easy-to-understand, 1-2-3 way for anybody with a little patience and common sense to become totally independent within a reasonable length of time. The one book I've been looking for for at least fifteen years...."

– Jerry Donaho, Valdez, Arkansas

By the next time he approached me, I had written almost a complete volume on the easy way for him to copy my results.

EASY TO READ

I wrote this in simple, straight-forward language so anyone could understand it.

This time my friend's questions were very specific. (He had already begun buying properties with the formulas I had been giving him.) Now he had a property he wanted to buy, but was out of cash. How could he buy it?

I not only showed him how to buy without cash, but by the time the deal was complete, he had $5,000 cash in his pocket to boot.

I also showed him how to buy a $26,000 property for $75 down.

ANYONE CAN

You can do exactly what I did, or my close friends have done; in fact, you may well do it better. (I began doing this in my spare time only.)

It doesn't matter where you live or the size of your town or city, my formula will show you exactly how to:

- Buy income properties for as little as $100 down.
- Begin without any cash.
- Put $10,000 cash in your pocket each time you buy (without selling property.)
- Double your assets every year.
- Legally avoid paying federal or state income taxes.
- Buy bargains at ½ their market value.
- Allow you to travel one week out of every month.

When you send me a check or money order for $10, I will send you all my formulas and methods, and you are free to use them anywhere and as often as you would like.

IT'S GUARANTEED

Now if you were a personal friend of mine, I know you would believe me and not need any kind of guarantee, but since you don't know me personally, I will guarantee that you will be completely satisfied and that my formula will work for you if you apply it. I will back up that guarantee by not cashing your check for 30 days, and if you for any reason change your mind, let me know and I will send your uncashed check back.

You may ask, why am I willing to share my formula for wealth? Well, simply because those of you who order my material will be helping to increase my net worth.

You shouldn't care if I profit as long as you profit. I guarantee that you'll be satisfied that my methods will help you or I'll send your money back!

"FINANCIAL FREEDOM"

To order, simply take any size paper, write the words "Financial Freedom", and send your name and address, along with a check for $10.00 to Mark O. Haroldsen, Inc., Dept. E-986 Tudor Mansion Bldg., 4751 Holladay Blvd., Salt Lake City, Utah 84117.

If you send for my material now, I will also send you documents that will show you precisely how you can borrow from $20,000 to $200,000 at 2% above the prime rate using just your signature as collateral.

By the way, if you feel a little uneasy about sending me a check or money order for $10.00, simply postdate it by 30 days which will completely eliminate your risk.

YOUNG COLLECTOR'S STAMP OF-THE-MONTH-CLUB

a membership club at only $4.95 per month!

Your Child's World...
To capture his or her imagination...
by shimmering colors...through names never before seen or imagined. Collecting and storing...dreaming of adventures
far off... learning ...

The F.C.I. Collectors Society announces the formation of its special division for children – from six to sixteen. Your child is invited to become a Charter Member, receiving not only the monthly stamp selections of the Club, but also the special bonus offerings, free quarterly membership prizes, and stamp albums!

The F.C.I. Collectors Society, the parent organization of the new YOUNG COLLECTOR'S STAMP OF-THE-MONTH-CLUB, is the pioneer in new stamp investments, numbering thousands of farsighted investors on its rolls.

Monthly Dues of only $4.95!

Your child will immediately receive a Charter Membership card, a warm welcome, and a request for birthday information (in order to receive an annual bonus set of fine stamps),

- the first monthly selection detailed in full below (a $7.63 true value, for $4.95), fully described as to country of origin and representation on stamps,
- a quarterly membership prize, stamp related, of course,
- and his or her first free stamp album (to be followed by others as needed).

Your child – and this grand project

Is there a child who doesn't collect? At first stuffed animals, baseball cards, models of cars or dollhouses. But as time goes on, those first precious items give way to a "collectible", something to show to a parent or friend, or bring to school as the basis for a report or project. Happy is the parent who leads a child into the peaceful pursuits, where collecting becomes knowledge, and knowledge — happiness.

Don't doubt the romance of stamps. Suddenly very dry words such as "geography", "history", "art", turn into vibrant reality! Happy is that parent who, when discussing the events of the day in Asia, hears his child say: "Mom, Dad, I have a set of stamps from the Phillipines. Did you know that they used to belong to America?" And so begins a stimulating process each of us desires to see in our children.

This magnificently conceived Olympic Stamp Issue by the Dominican Republic commemorates the 1956 Melbourne, Australia Games (16th Olympic Games).

Present and past legendary heroes, such as Mildred "Babe" Didrickson, Bob Mathias, Jesse Owens and many others are to be seen, each caught at the peak of his or her event. Many countries are represented, almost every event! ACCOMPANYING THE THREE GORGEOUS SETS, YOUR CHILD WILL RECEIVE A COMPLETE DESCRIPTION OF THE COUNTRY OF ORIGIN. The presentation album, stamps and information will please you — and your child!

In the 1978 Scott's Catalog the set is valued at $7.63. It is typical of the Club's purchasing power and worldwide contacts to save your child over 33⅓%. Our eye will always focus on value for members.

In the future

Equally fine sets of stamps will be offered — each fully described (country of origin and reason for creation).

Through our Club's capacity to research the better stamps of the world, and also because of our massive purchases of almost entire issues, prices of stamps will be difficult if not impossible to duplicate. We well remember the unhappy child-turned-into-adult who laments that — "if only I knew something about stamps when I was young, my collection would not just be a collection of worthless paper!" We don't want that to happen to our Club Members!

Parent — grandparent — uncle or aunt, send us the child's name and $4.95. Then let us entertain and inform the child. There is never any obligation to continue. Any selection can be returned for full refund within 10 days.

FLEETWOOD MAC: ROCK'S RED-HOT GROUP

They've just broken the all-time chart record for their album Rumours and are about to tour the country.

By Andrew Frances

One of the longest-standing records in music history was broken last month. The title had belonged to the king of rock himself, the late Elvis Presley: 20 weeks at the No. 1 spot for his album Blue Hawaii. Ten years after Elvis's triumph and 21 weeks after their album became No. 1, the title went to a group named Fleetwood Mac. Their chart-topping album, which has already sold more than four million copies, is called Rumours.

The band dates back over 10 years, but numerous personnel changes had made the group the revolving door of rock, leaving them without an identifiable sound. Last year, though, thanks to the addition of two Americans (guitarist Lindsay Buckingham and sensuous singer Stevie Nicks) to the original British core of Mick Fleetwood (drums) and John and Christine McVie (bass and keyboards respectively), Fleetwood Mac have finally managed to achieve their promise and have sold more than eight million albums over the past 18 months. Their concert tours are now stadium sellouts, and, to crown it all, they garnered the three top honors (Best Album, Best Group and Rock Personalities of the Year) on TV's Rock Awards.

Mick Fleetwood, the group's founder, is also their manager, handling everyday professional responsibilities. It was Mick who approached John McVie to start Fleetwood Mac. John had recently learned to play bass "by taking the two top strings of a Hohner (six-string) guitar and playing bass on that." He had originally wanted to be a trumpeter. Though completely confident about his music now, John does not compose for the group and still feels "a little scared sometimes — you look up and say, 'All these people — for us?'"

His wife, born Christine Perfect ("I was Perfect until I married John," she quips), was originally an art teacher, occasionally doing window design on London's fashionable Oxford Street. Her parents had to force her to learn piano because she hated it. Now, though, she has written three giant hits for the band ("Over My Head," "Say You Love Me" and "Don't Stop"), and her sultry glow is confident and powerful yet provocatively vulnerable.

The group's new-found accessibility also seems to owe a lot to last year's additions. Lindsay Buckingham, a guitarist of extreme technical expertise, combines a gut-level feel for music with an atomic-energy source for expressing himself. His guitar solo rips regularly through the middle of his contribution to the Rumours album, the scorching hit, "(You Can) Go Your Own Way." Then there's blond-shagged vocalist Stevie Nicks, who, as the center spotlight's closest friend, is often a swirl of chiffon portraying the dreamy Welsh witch Rhiannon from the hit song she wrote for the band earlier this year. "My songs are a rolling diary," she says. "I'm a storyteller. I add a little, or take away." For Stevie it began in high school. "I fell madly in love with this guy. Then he went to Mexico and I fell totally apart. I just sat down and wrote a song. It was terribly sad, terribly emotional. It was a bummer, but it was a beginning."

Rumours and the preceding album, Fleetwood Mac, also recorded with the current lineup, have an energy and enthusiasm unmatched in rock. The songs on these albums have distinguished the new group not only from their earlier incarnations but also from every other band.

Talking about their phenomenal year, Stevie explains, "I think audiences really like us as people; I think they have a good feeling towards us in a human way."

Soon Fleetwood Mac again will be crisscrossing the country on tour. We can only guess at the direction the group will take. Says Christine: "We never seem to stop progressing. Once you slot yourself, there's only so far you can go in any one tight direction. I don't want to stop experimenting, especially now that we have a combination of people who are able to do so many things so well."

"We can't really say where we're going," says Lindsay, "because ideawise, we're always a little ahead of ourselves, which is the best creative situation to be in."

How can you argue with that?

15 Minutes Ago My Feet Hurt Like the Devil.

Not Anymore!

For years, painful tired feet and legs — and aching back — were really hard on me. By the end of every day I felt like I couldn't take another step.

I spent a fortune on special shoes — on arch supports — on lotions, salves and salts.

Nothing worked for me. —

Then, quite by accident, I stumbled onto the real secret of pain relief that I had been waiting and praying for.

ROLL-A-MAGIC!

It was a simple device that had been designed by a friend of mine. He called it ROLL-A-MAGIC — and he promised that it would work like magic.

To tell the truth, I didn't believe him. He told me that it had helped his wife and his parents. I still didn't believe him.

But then I tried it for myself — one night before going to bed. In less than 15 minutes I had great results — better than I had ever dreamed possible.

I used ROLL-A-MAGIC every night for a week. The aches and pains that had plagued me for so long long seemed to disappear into thin air.

Now, since I am not a doctor or anything like that, I don't quite understand "why" ROLL-A-MAGIC works. It just does!

And, it's WONDERFUL!

Fast, Easy Relief!

1) Place ROLL-A-MAGIC on floor — roll foot back and forth with light pressure. Blessed relief!

2) Use the ball-bearing knob to massage and soothe feet, legs and back. Blessed relief!

NOW YOU CAN GET ROLL-A-MAGIC!

I've now been able to convince my friend to make ROLL-A-MAGIC available to you — to men and women who want and need pain relief right away.

Yes! Unless you are one of the fortunate few who never suffer tired, aching or painful feet, legs and back — here is good news.

Now YOU can use ROLL-A-MAGIC without risking a single red cent. Let me explain.

I want to send you ROLL-A-MAGIC at once. Try it out for yourself — in the privacy of your own home.

Judge the benefits for yourself.

You MUST agree that ROLL-A-MAGIC gives you more solid relief than you've ever dreamed possible — or simply send it back for a full refund — no questions asked.

That's right. ROLL-A-MAGIC is absolutely GUARANTEED to help you or your money back.

AN IMPOSSIBLE DREAM? NO!

Does all this sound like an impossible dream — like something too good to be true? Well, it's NOT! Not when you use ROLL-A-MAGIC — specially designed to:

●●● Gently massage the tender reflex and acupressure points — instantly stimulating and invigorating your tired feet, legs and back!

●●● Bring you a tremendous feeling of well-being—a new relaxation—a new spring in every step.

Just imagine how wonderful it will be when you can say — after a simple 15-minute "treatment"—"My goodness, I feel wonderful. I don't have a single ache or pain. My feet are simply NOT tired. My back feels rested. It's just like a miracle."

It's NOT a miracle. It's ROLL-A-MAGIC!

And, ROLL-A-MAGIC comes complete with step-by-step, easy-to-follow instructions — that make it so simple to use and benefit from that even a child can master it in moments.

Since it weighs less than 3 ounces and is but five inches long — you can use it in your home — or take it with you when you travel.

And perhaps most important, please remember that it is ABSOLUTELY GUARANTEED to bring you the blessings of relief — or your money back without quibble or question.

So, to order your guaranteed ROLL-A-MAGIC — simply complete and mail the Pain Relief Coupon below with your payment of just $4. Yes! Just $4 complete and postage paid.

It's not as hard as you might think — especially if you know how to use your money wisely.

By Kate Kelly

You may be 25 and spending money on the hospital costs of your firstborn, or 45 and making payments on your teenager's college tuition. No matter your age or anticipated expenses, today is the time to start forming a long-range financial plan. Even with Social Security and a pension, the pleasures of your leisure time in retirement could be diminished if you haven't saved any money on your own.

How can you avoid being stranded with limited funds at retirement? The first and most important step is to start saving immediately. Almost everyone finds it difficult to set money aside, so you'll need to develop a regular system. At your request, many banks will automatically transfer a specified amount from a checking to a savings account each month. Some companies have similar plans and will deduct money from your paycheck. These methods assure regular deposits and spare you the temptation of spending the money.

Writing a check to your savings account when you make your rent or mortgage payment is another alternative. Then you can put away more whenever you can afford it. You might start saving 3 to 6 percent of your take-home pay, and you should have at least three months' salary in savings for emergencies.

If you're working, you're probably covered by a pension plan, right? Wrong. Hans P. Ziegler, vice president of the Trust Division of Manufacturers Trust Company in New York City, notes, "Very few people realize that 50 percent of our total work force is not covered by a pension plan." You should investigate your status by checking with your company personnel office.

If you're not already covered by a pension plan, consider an Individual Retirement Account, which is available through most banks. Workers may set aside up to 15 percent of their annual salary or $1,500, whichever is less, and that money is exempt from current taxes. Then, starting at age 59½, you make withdrawals at any rate you wish and are taxed only on the amounts you withdraw each year. Be sure the money deposited will not be needed for emergencies. Should you need it before you reach 59½, you will be stiffly penalized.

If you're self-employed and wish to set aside retirement money, the Keogh Plan is for you. It functions like an Individual Retirement Account, but the limit is higher. Fifteen percent of your annual income or $7,500, whichever is less, may be set aside, and it is tax-deferred.

What about life insurance? For most people it's an important part of long-range planning, but there are some points to consider before buying.

Perhaps you won't need to purchase insurance. If you're covered by a company group policy, it may be adequate. Do you have dependents? If not, buying insurance may not be the best use of your money.

If you do need insurance, you'll want to know the difference between term life insurance and whole (or ordinary) life. Term insurance offers maximum protection for minimum cost for a limited period of time. Whole life or permanent insurance is more expensive for the amount of protection you receive, but people find it attractive for other reasons. For instance, as annual premiums are paid, the policy takes on a cash value, which you can borrow against or — near retirement — take in cash or as an annuity. (An annuity is an arrangement in which the insurance company makes monthly payments to you for an agreed-upon length of time.)

Some families buy a combination of whole and term insurance. The term insurance provides a large amount of protection against the untimely loss of income, while the whole life helps prepare for the future. You'll need to evaluate your own needs and then find a good insurance agent to help select the best plan for you.

Suppose you have a savings base, your pension plan is fine and you have insurance. Should you invest? Yes. If you have money that won't be needed for emergencies then look into such growth investments as stocks, mutual funds, real estate and business ventures. Naturally, there are other possible growth opportunities, and if you're knowledgeable in those areas and have the money, they can be rewarding investments.

Whatever your course of action, if you earn money, start making your long-range financial plans today.

IF YOU HAVE IRON POOR BLOOD ALL THE VITAMINS IN THE WORLD WON'T HELP

Iron poor blood is the most widespread nutritional ailment in America today. And taking vitamins can't help, because vitamins don't contain iron.

What you need is Geritol, every day. Geritol is so rich in iron, just one tablet contains more iron than even a pound of calf's liver. Plus vitamins important to your health.

Geritol's iron can actually build your blood day by day. That's what makes it different from vitamin pills—and so important to you.

It takes more than love
to make a happy marriage.

Strange how the last thing many couples think about in planning their marriage is the matter of religion. Only after the caterer, the photographer, the printer have been provided for, only then is church mentioned. And church often is more a matter of social custom than real religious conviction. No wonder so many marriages get into trouble. God barely makes the guest list.

If you are about to be married and religion is not important to you, do you know what your chances for a happy life are? The odds are not good. If you are already married and religion has been packed away with the bridal gown, do you wonder that life has become a bore or a battle?

Maybe you are one of those unhappy people who has decided that life is meant to be boring and absurd. If so, we invite you to look into our pamphlet "The Real Secret of Successful Marriage." Write today. No one will call on you.

HOW THE STARS TRY TO KEEP FIT

They fast and dance and jog, but some still agree with Milton Berle: "Exercise only means that you'll die healthier."

By Joey Adams

The Mayor of New York City appointed me Commissioner of Youth and Physical Fitness — neither of which I have — so I decided to find how others stay in shape.

I soon discovered that Jimmy Carter keeps fit by playing tennis or, when he's in Plains, canoeing and swimming. He eats properly, rarely drinks and never smokes. And no matter how busy he is, he finds time to walk up stairs rather than take the elevator, which keeps his Secret Service tubbos in shape, too.

Then I checked out the stars. Charlton Heston told me that he runs to keep fit but "hates" it. "I do it because I make my living with my waistline," he said, "and 15 minutes of running is as good a conditioner as there is. It's boring and no fun. You can't sing or rehearse poems in your head while running, but an actor's body is the instrument he uses, and any demanding role requires physical fitness."

I soon noticed that jogging is the "in" outdoor sport. From my window overlooking New York's Central Park you can see all sorts of shapes, sizes and forms bobbling around the footpath of the reservoir. On a clear day you sometimes can see Robert Redford or Bess Meyerson huffing and puffing, and Paul Newman, Lee and Farrah Fawcett-Majors, Brenda Vaccarro, Abe Vigoda, Al Pacino and Lola Falana are other jogging nuts.

Octogenarian George Abbott dances for hours at Roseland, Manhattan's world-famous dance hall, and usually outlasts his much younger partners. Alice Faye, Racquel Welch, Ginger Rogers and Shirley MacLaine are others who keep their figures trim by workouts on the parquet.

For some reason, most comedians avoid any kind of exercise except a round of golf, and that's providing there's an electric cart handy. When George Burns has to open a window he calls the handyman. Buddy Hackett doesn't even watch sports. Jackie Gleason, who needs help with his toothbrush, yawns, "I get plenty of exercise. Immediately after waking I always say sternly to myself, 'Ready now, up — down — up — down,' and after three minutes I say, 'O.K., now the other eyelid.'"

Milton Berle says, "Statistics show what really happens if you exercise daily — you die healthier." Bob Hope says, "Observe your dog. If he's fat you're not getting enough exercise."

Diet is a big thing with the stars. Hugh O'Brian eats one meal a day — a big breakfast. Lynn Redgrave eats one meal a day — a small dinner. Nick Nolte eats no meat and fasts two days a week. Red Buttons, Carol Channing, Phyllis Diller, Cloris Leachman and Gloria Swanson allow no junk foods.

Debbie Reynolds swears by a breakfast of radishes, cooked beans and a little castor oil. Sounds tasty — but for humans? Paul Lynde claims he shriveled 75 pounds by inhaling nothing but fruit, crackers and fish on alternate days. Jimmy Coco eats pasta every day. He also gains weight every day. He also goes the Duke University rice diet way every season. The older actresses, like Hepburn and Stanwyck, do the steak and tomatoes and vegetable bit at dinner.

Elvis Presley's doctor, George Nichopoulos, claims the late star was a food junkie. Cooks "mothered him to death" by constantly feeding him junk food against doctors' orders. Elvis had a gymnasium behind his mansion but never used it. He was so uptight about his appearance that he had cosmetic surgery to dispose of the bags under his eyes and even considered a major operation to remove his paunch. But he just couldn't control his insatiable craving for junk food.

Princess Grace Kelly's caviar-logged life led her to sigh sadly to me one day, "If you can figure out how to figure out the diet problem, let me know." She says she now cuts down on everything. She stays off alcohol during the month of August and then lives on salads, fruits and lean meats. She and Prince Rainier regularly go to a spa — and that's whenever the double chins start to try for three.

Paul Newman keeps in shape by driving and training for his racing-car competition. Jolie Gabor, Phyllis Diller, Lauren Bacall, Virginia Graham and some other ladies don't worry about keeping fit. They just have their faces knitted and purled when they want to take off a few years. Says Phyllis: "I've had so many face-lifts there's nothing left in my shoes."

Robert Conrad, a pizza, beer, ice cream and popcorn man, pays dearly for his extravagance: "If I want to lose seven or eight pounds, I'll fast three or four days. I drink just enough liquid so that I don't get dehydrated."

Angie Dickinson and Liza Minnelli go the discotheque route. Tom Jones and Englebert Humperdinck hit the steam bath.

Sylvester Stallone works out daily in a gym. Alan King, Burt Bacharach, Burt Reynolds and Farrah F.-M. are tennis freaks. Shirley Jones believes emotions have a powerful impact on physical health. "The head rules the body so completely that one can become physically ill from emotional problems."

Jack Paar works with his hands. He gardens, plants and carpents and says he's never been happier and "will never ever go back to TV." Sixty-five-year-old cowboy star Roy Rogers bowls to keep himself trim.

So, after learning all this, I still don't know how I should go about getting into shape. But I've got a lot of ideas.

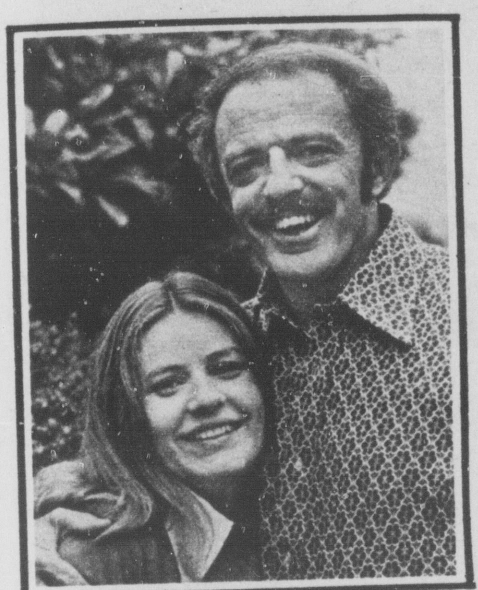
PATTY DUKE TELLS HOW SHE COMBINES CAREER AND FAMILY

She's been acting since age 8 and has won acclaim for stage, screen and television performances.



Patty and husband John Astin.

By Helen Dorsey

The acting Astins — John and his wife Patty Duke — are a talented pair as well as a devoted couple and doting parents of a quintet of sons ranging in ages from 18 to 4. Unlike many Hollywood working couples whose marriages often break up due to conflicting careers or prolonged separations, the Astins have found a happy, workable solution: they work together as a team whenever possible.

Currently, they are working solo. John is starring as Navy Lieut. Comdr. Matthew Sherman in the new ABC-TV World War II series, Operation Petticoat. (Although he's a stage and motion-picture actor, fans will remember him best for his TV work as the Latin-looking, droopy-eyed Gomez Addams in the weirdo series, The Addams Family.)

The affable, witty, soft-spoken, 47-year-old actor is a multifaceted man: he directed and starred in the pilot film of Petticoat, and he received an Academy Award nomination in 1968 for Prelude, his first writing, directing and producing effort, a 28-minute tragicomic featurette about loneliness and the breakdown in communication between people.

Patty, who has been acting for 22 of her 30 years, is a rare example of a child actress who has continued to enjoy success as an adult. The New York City native became the youngest person to star on Broadway, playing Helen Keller in The Miracle Worker at 13, then won an Oscar as best supporting actress for her recreation of the role on the screen. She starred in her own series, The Patty Duke Show, has made numerous movies and won her first Emmy for her performance in the TV movie My Sweet Charlie. She recently won a second Emmy for her performance in Captains and the Kings.

Together the Astins have become a formidable acting husband-and-wife team in an enormous variety of TV roles and have toured the country on and off for three years in Shot in the Dark, Marriage Gambol and My Fat Friend.

"Some people like to be together only one or two hours a day," John says, "but whether we're working or just sitting in the same room, we like to be with each other." They live near the UCLA campus in a comfortable but crowded house that's without tennis court or swimming pool but has a nice backyard.

Patty's life was anything but tranquil before meeting John Astin. Although The Patty Duke Show was a success, Patty doesn't have pleasant memories of it. The hours were extremely long, and the trivia that made up many of the episodes she feels did not allow her to be creative. Eventually, everyone's "all-American teenager" ended up on the psychiatrist's couch. Twice divorced from show-business people, she became the mother of a son, Sean Patrick. She and Astin were married in 1972.

Their unique working style evolved quite naturally. "We had toured together one summer and decided we didn't want to be separated or go through that kind of life alone," Patty says. During a writers' strike in 1973, they took to the road right after their youngest son, Mackenzie, was born. "We needed the money," she reasoned. "And because it's very important to maintain family unity, we decided to drag everyone along." Everyone includes Sean Patrick, Mackenzie and John's three sons by a previous marriage (who took very quickly to Patty). All the boys welcomed the excitement of seeing new places.

Occasionally, Patty goes on location by herself if John's not free. This past summer, for example, she completed a movie for TV in Hawaii entitled Voyage of Terror. (Her sister-in-law, a college professor went along for company and ended up becoming a movie extra. "Now she calls up and asks, 'When is my movie going to be shown on TV?'" Patty chuckles.)

"Our life is very good but very noisy and hectic and messy," Patty observes with a grin, "and the boys have many different interests. For example, Tom, our 12-year-old, is extremely interested in his pet rats."

"By the way, we have an injured rat, Patty," John said.

"How can a rat get an injury? Now I suppose I have to get a back brace for a rat and teach it to strengthen its abdominal muscles. Did it expire yet? Tom will love digging another grave. Our backyard looks like an extension of a cemetery, from all the pets buried there," Patty said with a rueful smile.

That's because this SUPER BURN-OFF program not only helps stoke up the inner furnace, but also damps down your appetite.

IMPORTANT NOTICE
Before starting this diet program consult with your physician to be sure you are in normal health and your only problem is obesity. WHAT MAKES A MAN HAPPY?

Money? Family? Job? Excitement? It all depends on which stage of his adult life he is going through.

By Shirley Sloan Fader

Recent research has shown that there are different ingredients in a man's life — work, marriage, excitement, children, leisure, money — and that to be happy he needs varying combinations of them at different stages of his life.

Sociologist Joseph Harry of the University of Nebraska has explored the stages men go through in depth. Using a cross section of typical American men, Dr. Harry divided them into six stages: single; married, no children; married, preschool children; married, school-age children; married, teenage children; married, children grown. The happiness patterns he discovered can be useful to every man — and to his family.

Let's take a typical young, single man. We'll call him Phil and go with him through life, noticing what makes him happy and unhappy at each stage. As a bachelor, Phil is happy if he has a fairly interesting job that provides him with a decent amount of money that he can use to create an exciting, fun-filled life. Since he's moving from job to job, Phil's friends change with some frequency.

Phil marries Karen and moves into the married, no children stage. Now his demands on life are more complex. He's still interested in his job and in fun and excitement, but for him to feel happy he and Karen have to agree on leisure activities.

Phil's and Karen's first baby changes their priorities. Because of heavy expenses, they have some battles over money, and when for a few months Karen devotes nearly all her time to the baby, Phil is miserable. Eventually they realize that even if they have to squeeze the budget hard elsewhere, money spent on baby sitters is necessary for a balanced life.

Many experts call this married preschool stage the "life-crunch period." Expenses are high, a man's earning power is usually moderate and the baby's demands on his wife's energy can be overwhelming. Karen may find that satisfaction with her marriage drops during this period.

By the time Phil has two children in school, he finds that his main object in life is "keeping everything synchronized and steady." Things that he once welcomed as exciting have less appeal. The demands of job and children are so high that a good amount of predictability in his life now seems attractive. "Happiness at this period," says Dr. Harry, "seems to depend on keeping life running as a unit with neither job nor family as a prominent solo."

Although Phil manages to achieve this job-family balance, life has some problems. Marriage researchers have found that school-age time can be the most difficult period for a couple. Preschoolers, despite the constant attention they require, have no school or social obligations. Parents can schedule daily routines, vacations and weekends as they wish. But school-age children's school schedules, dancing lessons, Little League, etc. very much shape parents' daily lives. As the children become more independent, research indicates that Phil's and Karen's satisfaction with their marriage will probably take a dramatic upward turn.

By the time the children are teenagers, Phil suddenly realizes time is beginning to run out. He doesn't want to spend his entire life in the same predictable routine. He again wants excitement.

Until now, Phil wasn't worried that he didn't have much money. Now, however, to feel happy he needs a dependable income and some solid reserve. Otherwise, he will fear a difficult retirement.

When the children are grown and out on their own, Phil can relax. He enjoyed the excitement he craved during the children's adolescence and now is content with his life. Though magazines constantly run articles about "empty nest" difficulties, investigations by sociologists show that the modern couple frequently find the period after the children have left to be one of the happiest stages of their marriage. "Phil mellowed," says Dr. Harry. "He's no longer after excitement. Yet he enjoys a wide range of things: family, friends, job, going out, puttering at home, hobbies.

"For people who move through life 'on schedule,' who marry around the age when most people marry, who have children at typical ages, who stay fully employed, married and healthy, life seems to grow happier as they grow older."

Dr. Harry found that on-schedule people like Phil and Karen can expect to have their happiness increase as long as both are healthy and they have an adequate income. His conclusion: "All my research suggests that if a man stays pretty much on schedule in life and seeks the mix of ingredients that work well for each stage of life, happiness will be his."

There's a "Gold Mine" Right Where You Live!

Look in the parking lot where your wife does her grocery shopping. Examine the parking areas in your local airport — the nearby shopping centers, school yards. Every public parking lot is filled with cans, papers, cigarette butts, and litter of all kinds.

Can you imagine how much it's worth to clean up that mess? $10,000, $25,000, $50,000 a year? If you guessed $50,000 you might be low. Full-time parking lot maintenance can be worth more than $50,000 a year. Part-time parking lot maintenance can be worth more than $15,000 a year.

You can get in on this untapped bonanza—there's an opportunity for your whole family on a full or part-time basis. If you're fed up, and want to have a business of your own. You can become your own boss—you can find the "Gold Mine" right where you live.

"I, Claudius," a 13-week Masterpiece Theatre presentation beginning November 6, brings to Public Broadcasting TV the story of Claudius I, emperor of Rome from 41 to 54 A.D. He ascended to the world's most powerful throne through the violent death of the mad Emperor Caligula—despite the fact he himself was considered a half-wit. The new series, a worthy successor to such Masterpiece Theatre productions as "Upstairs, Downstairs," "The First Churchills," "Elizabeth R," and "The Six Wives of Henry VIII," captures not only the historical sense of the Claudian years, but also the spirit and pomp.

Brilliant half-wit. Claudius was the grandson of the scheming Livia, who spent her life (and ended several other people's) plotting to gain the throne for her son, Tiberius. She succeeded briefly, but her efforts also helped bring on the four-year reign of savagery and debauchery of Claudius' insane nephew, Caligula. The physical defects Claudius carried from birth—he limped, stuttered, and twitched—disguised his bright mind and spared him more than once from Caligula's methodical elimination of rivals within his family.

Hail, Claudius. The cruel excesses of Caligula inevitably led to his assassination. The palace guards summarily declared Claudius emperor in the mistaken belief their lives would be far easier with the "fool" on the throne. Claudius surprised not only the guards, but all Rome. His reign was sensible and just; his cherished dream was restoration of the Republic. That he failed in this goal was not the fault of Claudius, but of the power-mad people around him.

Humor and candor. "I, Claudius" is based on the novels "I, Claudius," and "Claudius The God," by the distinguished poet and novelist Robert Graves. It was dramatized by Jack Pulman, whose other television triumphs include "Poldark" and "War and Peace." The production—by BBC/London Film Productions Ltd.—features a superbly gifted international cast. Watch your local television listings for the time the November 6 premiere of "I, Claudius" will be seen in your area. It is powerful television drama.

1. Your unconscious mind plays an important role in everyday life.
2. The importance of unconscious impressions to social life is difficult to overestimate.
3. Sensitivity to the feelings and impressions arising from unconscious faculties tends to go hand in hand with creativity.
4. Your unconscious is likely to reveal more about you than anything you say.
5. Your unconscious can be your best friend — or a source of aggravation and embarrassment.
6. Your unconscious even can cause you to lose money in the stock market.

ANSWERS

1. True. Sociologist Otakar Machotka, who sums up his findings in his monograph, The Unconscious in Social Relations, finds that many people develop an amazing use of unconscious perceptions to assess another's sincerity, intentions and so on, and that the most frequent clues that we unconsciously note are the slight movements of the eyes and facial muscles, involuntary gestures, short hesitations and inflections of the voice. Since the evaluation of these clues usually is done unconsciously, we become conscious only of the result of the judgment.

2. True. As Machotka points out, many of our relationships with people are based largely on our unconscious reactions to them: avoidance of certain people, development of friendliness, hesitation in accepting help or cooperation from someone, acceptance of the convictions and attitudes of other people, for example. How much unconscious perceptions help in dealing with others and in coping with various situations depends on the extent to which we heed the promptings that result from these perceptions. They can play a central role in supplying us with a continuous flow of information regarding how others feel about us, how they respond to us, the effect of the interplay of moods and attitudes, etc. All this plays a considerable part in providing smooth contacts with people and in working out a compromise between their interests and our own wishes or values.

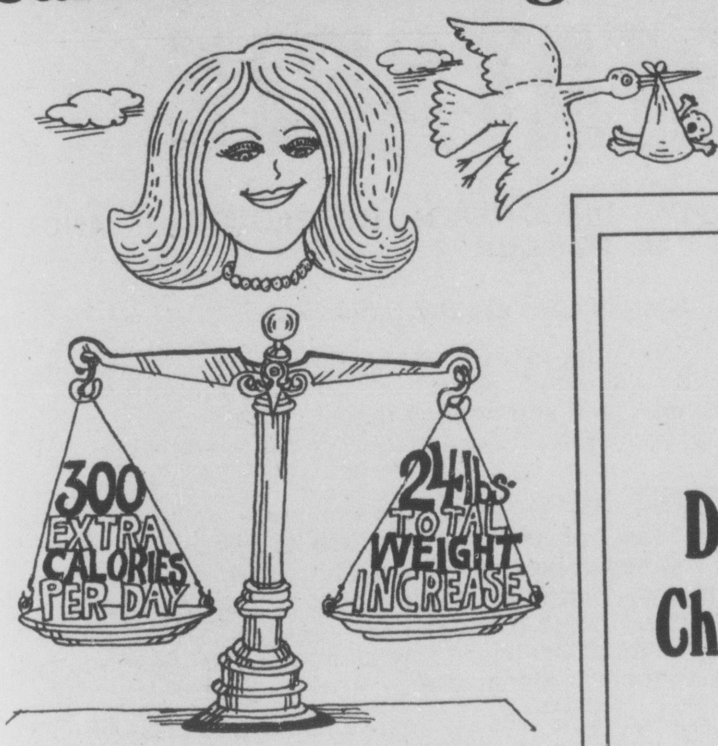
3. True. Studies conducted at the Institute of Personality Assessment and Research cite findings showing that people widely differ in the ease with which they can relax mentally to heed the flow of impulses and imagery arising from unconscious layers of the personality. The research suggests that the more creative a person is the more adept he is in "shifting mental gears," enabling him to tune in on unconscious as well as conscious levels.

4. True. University of Utah professor of psychology Ernst G. Beier points out that simple, everyday behavior when we meet others in social situations "is full of unconscious choices that stem from unconscious motivations. We commit revealing 'errors' and 'slips' for valid reasons that our conscious minds refuse to accept." The slips frequently reveal more about how you actually feel than anything you say.

5. True. People often "give" a problem to their unconscious mind before going to bed — to "sleep on it" — and wake up in the morning with the answer. On the other hand, Dr. Paul Thomas Young, professor of psychology emeritus at the University of Illinois, notes studies showing that "forgetting appointments, losing objects, slips of the tongue, breaking things (including our bones) seemingly by accident, awkward movements and other phenomena of everyday life are motivated by determinants of which the subject is not consciously aware." In their study on Psychological Adjustment, Desmond and Carol Cartwright find that "a large number of nonunderstandable phenomena may be attributed to the working out of unconscious conflict: the good student who fails exams, the probationer who breaks down in the last week of an unblemished two-year period of probation, the person who always is going to get married, but never gets as far as the altar, for instance."

6. True. A University of North Carolina study cites reports of stock-market experts indicating that "fluctuations of the stock market and the unpredictable activities of those who invest in it are frequently based on psychological rather than on economic reasons." A case history is reported of a businessman's consistent unconscious urge to lose money in the stock market. Analysis revealed a strong unconscious drive to appease guilt feelings brought on by hostility felt toward his father.

Calorie-Counting During Pregnancy



A newborn's health depends largely on what the expectant mother eats. So diet is one of the most important considerations in pregnancy. Producing a baby is work, as most women and almost no men understand. Carrying a child and nourishing it require an extra 300 calories a day in the mother's diet. That's 75,000 calories during the complete pregnancy. But don't do it all at once. Calorie usage should start slowly. Few calories are needed during the first three months when the growing fetus is small, but during the next six months, an expectant mother should take in an additional 300 calories a day.

That's why doctors weigh mothers-to-be each visit. Eating more than 300 extra calories a day puts on excessive weight, which is hard to get rid of later. Too much weight also can lead to high blood pressure, diabetes and problems with delivery. A big mother will produce a big baby, and although large babies usually do well, they are somewhat harder to deliver and could suffer from the procedure.

A small baby that comes from an undernourished mother is the most likely to have complications during the first few hours. Babies from undernourished mothers tend to be undernourished, a condition doctors call fetal deprivation. Such infants have a higher death rate and, if they live, often show signs of nervous-system damage.

An overweight mother-to-be should not diet during pregnancy because dieting increases the chances of producing a sick baby. So plan to take in only an extra 300 calories a day during the last six months of pregnancy, and try to keep the weight gain before delivery to 24 pounds.

Iron is important, too. Most American women do not have enough of it stored in their bodies to supply both their own needs and the needs of the growing baby. The baby will steal from the mother as much as it needs, so diet in pregnancy must include enough iron, which is found in eggs, meat and all colored fruits and vegetables. Calcium is also important. A quart of milk a day will supply the amount needed to form baby's bones and teeth. It also will provide the protein that baby's growing body requires. To be on the safe side, doctors prescribe calcium and iron pills.

How about vitamins? Doctors prescribe them for good measure, but the only vitamin that might be missing if the mother eats a normal diet is folic acid. So doctors sometimes give extra folic acid to expectant mothers.

Are there any medicines to avoid during pregnancy? Surprisingly, despite frequent scare articles, there is no evidence that any of the common medicines harm a developing baby. Aspirin, cough syrups, antihistamines, even cortisone drugs and allergy injections, are safe. Thalidomide, the drug of a decade ago that caused babies to be born with deformed limbs, was a medical rarity.

Dietary pitfalls in pregnancy are few. So normal diet and a few vitamin-mineral pills should prevent many problems.

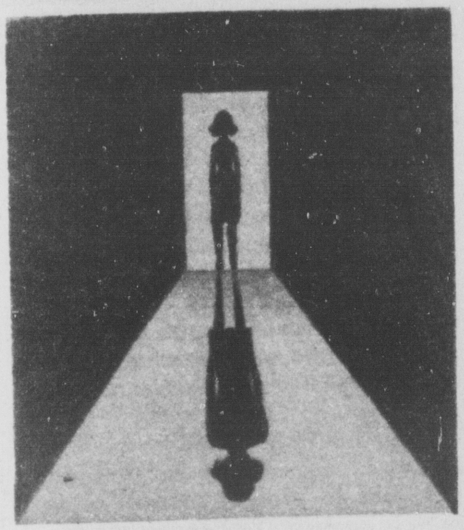
WHEN A HOMEMAKER MUST FIND WORK

Getting a job can be a traumatic experience, but all those years of running a home and raising a family have given her valuable and marketable skills.



By Janet Chase-Marshall

The marketplace is a desert for the ex-manager of a defunct household. She has no unemployment benefits or Social Security checks to ease the loss. And few employers are lined up to offer her work. Currently, there are between three and seven million "displaced homemakers" in the country — women who suddenly find themselves widows or divorcees, often after 20 or more years of marriage.

Those years of dedication to their families seem of little use in an already sorely overburdened job market. Too often, former homemakers are alone, afraid and sure the world has no need for them. In Los Angeles County, according to an official of Public Social Services, about a third of all persons on general relief are displaced homemakers. They have been rightly called the "new poor."

Says one such woman: "After being married for 28 years and raising four children, my husband left me for a younger woman. I have no income; my 'ex' ignores the support he has been ordered to pay me. If I had minor children, I'd be eligible for welfare and legal aid. But I don't really want charity; I want a job, I've looked everywhere. Nothing."

And another: "I'm 55 and a widow. I never had a chance for much formal education. I got married young, and my husband didn't want me to work. Now I don't have any skills outside the house."

Several bills have been introduced in Congress in recent years to help the displaced homemaker. The current bill, called HR-128, has been endorsed by President Carter. It would fund a minimum of 50 centers across the country. Lori Shields, co-coordinator of the Alliance for Displaced Homemakers, is hopeful that legislation will be passed by January 1978.

Last year, the country's first center opened in Oakland, Calif.

Besides job-training and placement, the California Displaced Homemakers Center (DHC), offers many other services, including skills assessment, peer-counseling, assertiveness-training and workshops in self-employment, financial planning and coping with divorce and widowhood. Paid internships are available to some of the women while they are in the six-month job-training programs.

The center is managed almost entirely by women who, not so long ago, found themselves unprepared for sudden singlehood and the job market.

Margaret Miller, DHC office manager, had been married for 32 years when her husband left her. At 49, she had no formal job-training and had not earned a paycheck since World War II. "I had spent my whole life being a superdaughter, a superwife, a supermother. Six months of job-hunting turned up only one offer — that of a lamp-shade pleater at $2.25 an hour.

The philosophy of the DHC is that women who have run homes, raised families and assisted their husbands in their work have marketable skills — like budgeting, counseling, administration, community work and health care. So Margaret Miller was hired. Says Milo Smith, the center's executive director (and herself a displaced homemaker), "Margaret came in here saying she couldn't do anything, and now she is running the show."

But, of course, not everyone can work for the center. In a depressed job market, where will these women find work? According to a DHC publication: "New jobs can be created if an employer is convinced that an added service will make his own organization more effective or that the addition of a new job will ultimately save money. [We] also hope to show some displaced homemakers how to be self-employed or establish a new business."

DHC also is gearing its training programs to the community's needs. These include paramedical and paralegal assistance to the elderly; work with disadvantaged groups in such areas as nutrition, housing and consumer advocacy; and fund-raising, bookkeeping and publicity services for struggling community groups.

"We cannot always provide jobs for every woman who comes to us," says Milo Smith, "but we do provide hope. We see women changing attitudes from their initial despair to growing self-confidence, changing roles from dependency to self-reliance and learning how skills used as homemakers can be made marketable."

The Therapist's Art

A picture can be worth a thousand words — at least when it's one painted by a patient in therapy and is being used by a psychiatrist or specially trained art therapist. The art work can be used as a diagnostic tool to help detect a patient's problems; as an aid to therapy, functioning as a springboard to discussion in the same way that a dream might; and as a means of evaluating the patient's response to treatment. "Art therapy is especially valuable with those who have difficulty discussing their emotions, and also with children," says Dr. Irene Jakab, a prof. of clinical psychiatry at the Univ. of Pittsburgh. Dr. Jakab, who recently organized an exhibition of art from 11 countries and 5 states for an international psychiatric convention, says that the style, content and colors of the picture are all important. "The content shows what is on the patient's mind, while the colors suggest the type of feeling and intensity," says Dr. Jakab. For instance, strong colors such as reds, yellows and oranges, are often used by aggressive people, and brown, purples and grays are usually used by the depressed. The picture above was painted by a Finnish woman nearing the end of her psychotherapy, and the smiling figure in a cheerful setting reflects the patient's reconciliation to her problem.

Auto Insurance

Following auto-protection tips can pay off in more ways than one — many insurance companies give reductions for antitheft devices, for example. Check with yours for further information, but in the meantime, here are some things you can do to prevent your car from being stolen. Selection of a good parking spot is particularly important, says Sgt. Edward Lamb, director of Boston's police Crime Prevention Unit. Lamb says you should pick a well-lit area where there is a considerable amount of both motor-vehicle and pedestrian traffic. It's helpful to install different locks for doors, ignition and trunk; even if a thief gets your door key, he won't have the ignition key. And store any spare keys in your wallet, not in the car, where a professional thief will easily find them. Lamb suggests replacing the standard knobbed door-lock buttons with tapered ones, which are almost impossible to pull up with a coat hanger. But remember, even the best lock is of no avail if you don't use it.

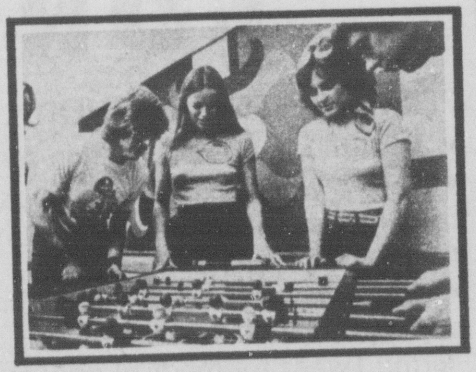
Dig They Must

Women are turning up in the most unexpected places these days — like coal mines. McGraw-Hill's Coal Age magazine reports that there are more than 800 women coal miners, and the number is steadily increasing. "Women want to be coal miners for the same reason men do," says reporter Anne Swardson — "they can make more money." Starting salary for miners is approximately $50 a day, enough to keep women at a job most of them don't really like. Who are the women going underground? A survey by the United Mine Workers says that women miners are likely to be either divorcees in their mid-30's with children to support or young singles who want to make a career of mining. Despite some alleged discrimination on the job and opposition from friends and relatives, the female miners seem to be sticking with the job for the long haul, even if, like Sandra Bailey of Ky., they have to "shovel twice as fast and half as much at a time."



Foosball, Anyone?

No, that's not a misprint...the name of the game is foosball, better known to others as table soccer, although the pros prefer "tournament soccer." That's right, the pros, because for the past 5 years several hundred men and women have been playing on the international foosball circuit. This week many of them will be in St. Louis, where the World Championship of Foosball will be held Nov. 2-7. Games are played on a 2½′ x 4½′ table, which has 11 6″ soccer-player figures per team connected to 4 long metal rods. Players control the rods with their hands to move the ball into the opponent's goal. First player to score 5 goals wins.

Using Your Fireplace

With its warmth and good cheer a fireplace can be one of your family's best friends. But like any friend, you have to know how to treat it properly. Many people get wood from places like sawmills and lumber companies, but did you ever think of looking in dumps and landfills? Sometimes as much as 30% of the debris in dumps consists of reusable wood fibers. Most wood won't burn if it's freshly cut, so purchase reasonably dry or seasoned wood. Better yet, buy wood several months before you'll use it. Softwoods, like pine, spruce and fir, catch fire easily and burn rapidly with a hot flame, so they're a good choice for a quick-warming fire. If you want a long-lasting fire, try hardwoods, such as ash, beech, birch, maple and oak. Remember to make sure the room is well ventilated, the damper open and the flue unobstructed before lighting the fire as poor ventilation will cause the fire to smoke. And be sure to place a screen in front of your grate to catch sparks. For more fireplace tips, take a look at the Government booklet Firewood for Your Fireplace. Send 35¢ to the Consumer Information Center, Dept. 130E, Pueblo, Cob. 81009.

Quick Takes

Marriage doesn't pay, at least when income-tax filing time rolls around. Iowa State Univ. consumer specialist Cindy Needles says that a husband and wife who both work generally pay more income tax than two single people with the same earnings, and the higher the income the greater the tax difference. For example, a married couple who have individual incomes of $15,000 and $11,000 and take the standard deductions will pay $750 more in taxes than 2 single persons with the same incomes....Sports fans are going to the dogs says a study by the Daily Racing Form Inc. The survey reports that last year greyhound-racing, college basketball and pro baseball made the largest gains in spectators, while ice hockey and horse-racing both declined....It may come as no surprise to whoever dumps the trash around your house, but each person in the U.S. generates an average of 4 lbs. of garbage and trash every day....Studies at the Boston Univ. School of Medicine suggest that it may be possible to protect almost completely against strokes through early treatment of hypertension (high blood pressure). Animal studies at the school have reported that when high blood pressure is controlled soon after its onset, stroke due to either hardening of the arteries or rupture to the cerebral vessels can be eliminated almost entirely....If they love it in Mobile will they still love it in Manhattan is a question frozen-food manufacturers should be asking, according to data collected by a New York-based marketing research firm. Frozen foods that are fast movers in one part of the country may be shelf-warmers in other areas. For example frozen fish is a hot item in Chicago but gets the cold shoulder in Boston. Minnesotans have a warm spot for frozen dinner bread and rolls but Houston residents pass them by.

U.S. no. 1 arms peddler--Carter

Wants pact with Russ limiting arms sales

WASHINGTON (AP) — Decrying the United States as the world's No. 1 arms peddler, President Carter says he will make proposals to the Soviet Union "before long" to limit sales of conventional weapons.

It was the first time Carter has proposed a U.S.-Soviet agreement limiting the sale of conventional weapons, which he has said is a $20 billion-a-year business.

Last May, the President announced a unilateral policy of restraining U.S. sales of conventional arms, citing "the threat to world peace embodied in this spiralling arms traffic." He said arms sales should be approved only to protect the security of this country and that of its allies.

Carter's statements came during an interview with a group of newspaper columnists, a transcript of which was released by the White House on Saturday. Carter has held such interviews about twice monthly.

During the 45-minute session Friday, Carter also repeated earlier statements that he supports degregulation of natural gas but differs with a Senate measure on how soon controls should be removed.

And the President declared anew that "there has not and will not be any violation" of U.S. commitments to Israel by his administration.

In disclosing plans to propose a limit on conventional arms sales, Carter said the United States is "the worst violator at this time; the Soviets perhaps next; and the French, British, Belgians, to some degree participate in this excessive arms sale."

But he acknowledged it would be very difficult to find a way to limit sales.

Asked if a joint U.S.-Soviet statement on the Mideast issued a month ago represents an erosion of American support for Israel, Carter declared, "I have never violated any commitments made to the Israelis, either by my administration or by the previous administrations."

He said he and Israeli Foreign Minister Moshe Dayan recently reviewed all public and private agreements between their two countries. "There has not been and will not be any violation of those commitments," Carter said.

On his beleaguered energy program, which has been torn apart in the Senate, Carter said he does not believe he has changed his position "that I would work with Congress, as has President Ford, for deregulation of natural gas... The difference (with Congress) is in the rapidity which with natural gas is deregulated."

Carter said his proposal to raise the price from $1.46 to $1.75 per thousand cubic feet would be a substantial step toward ultimate deregulation.

"But I think it would be quite disruptive and very costly to the American people ... to deregulate it now," he added.

The House has passed Carter's plan, but the Senate rejected it, voting instead to deregulate prices after two years.

Boyfriend wounded; 2 men arrested

Gang warfare held as motive in shooting death of woman

Gang warfare was blamed for the death of an 18-year-old San Gabriel woman and the wounding of her West Covina boyfriend, Sheriff's deputies said Saturday.

Dead is Angela Ramos. She died instantly Saturday when a bullet fired from a nearby parked car ripped through her heart, authorities said, Wounded, but not critically, was Maxi J. Flores, 21.

Homicide detectives said both victims were standing at the edge of Ringrove Park in Valinda when a car containing three young men pulled up near them. Auto occupants shouted several gang slogans, then opened fire with an unidentified weapon, officers said.

Twenty minutes later as other deputies stopped an auto for a traffic violation, radio dispatchers broadcast a description of the suspects' car which matched the one deputies had just stopped.

Both occupants were arrested and held on murder bookings. Deputies said they confiscated ammunition from the suspect's car, but no weapon.

Held in Los Angeles County jail are Rudy Gomez, 18, of West Covina, and a 17-year-old boy from La Puente, police said.

Girl, 4, killed in freeway pileup

One child was killed, her father critically injured and a Pomonan hurt Saturday in a three-car pileup on San Bernardino Freeway east of Millikan Avenue in Ontario.

Dead is Scholle Margaret Zismann,4, of Los Olivos, a small Santa Barbara community. Her father, Edward Zismann, 33, suffering chest and head injuries, underwent surgery at San Antonio Community Hospital Saturday night and was listed in grave condition. Released after treatment was Geary Lee Luke, 26, of 1158 N. Gordon Ave., Pomona.

Highway Patrol officers said the accident occurred at midmorning Saturday in eastbound lanes of the freeway. A 1968 sedan lost a left rear wheel and came to rest headed west in the second fastest lane, officers said. All passengers managed to flee the disabled auto moments before Zismann's car slammed into it head-on and Luke's van, following Zismann, hit both other autos, Highway Patrolmen said.

Prince Charles and Gov. Edmund G. Brown Jr., left, quizzically look into a paper bag containing a bean sprout sandwich as they prepare to leave the California Capitol following a luncheon engagement in the governor's office Saturday. The "Save Water" on the bag refers to the California drought.

Trying to avert hospital crisis

LOS ANGELES (AP) — County health officials have invoked emergency measures to forestall a crisis following the closure of three psychiatric wards at Metropolitan State Hospital in Norwalk, a Los Angeles newspaper reported in today's editions.

Personnel from the county health services department and the public guardian's office are monitoring hospital conditions around the clock and a pool of county physicians is standing by to help out if needed.

Meanwhile, a county health services department inspection report was delivered citing the hospital for staff shortages and violations of various state and federal regulations.

The inspectors criticized the facility for staff deficiencies, medication errors and lax chart-keeping, and said some patients had been found in leather restraints locked in rooms without a doctor's order.

The hospital's administrator, Nick Burgeson, said in an interview Saturday: "We are out of compliance. In some of the areas they mention, we were aware. It has been a topic of heated discussion for a matter of time between ourselves and the state."

Burgeson stressed that only admissions to the three acute care psychiatric wards had been closed, and that other admissions to the hospital were continuing Saturday.

Dr. Harold Mavritte, acting deputy director of mental health services for the county, said Saturday that the closure of the wards will have "a serious impact . . . by limiting the number of overflow patients we can admit to the hospital."

Surrender after reign of terror

4 hijack Viet airliner, kill 2

SINGAPORE (AP) — Four hijackers commandeered a Vietnamese airliner and killed two Vietnamese officials Saturday during an airborne reign of terror before surrendering here and appealing for political asylum.

Authorities said the Singapore government, which has no formal diplomatic ties with Communist Vietnam, was considering the hijackers' request.

Details of the hijacking remained sketchy. Officials here said the vintage DC3 plane was on a domestic flight with between 36 and 40 persons aboard when it was diverted. But it was not known where or when the hijacking occurred.

Authorities provided no identifications of the hijackers or of the two dead Vietnamese. A third person, also unidentified, was reported seriously hurt during the hijacking.

There was no immediate official Vietnamese comment on the hijacking.

The hijackers, reportedly armed with one pistol and three knives, forced the plane to land in Thailand for fuel before flying about 1,000 miles south to Singapore, at the southern tip of the Malay peninsula, and putting down at a military airport.

Officials said the plane carried a crew of two. The injured person was taken off the plane first, and the crew members and surviving passengers disembarked after the hijackers surrendered.

The twin-engine, propeller-driven plane was allowed to land at Selatar military airport after the pilot radioed he was running out of fuel, a spokesman for the Singapore Civil Aviation Department said.

Unofficial sources said the plane landed first at Utapao, a former U.S. Air Force base in Thailand, where it was refueled. But the hijackers were refused asylum there.

In August 1976, 1½ years after the Communist takeover in Vietnam, a former South Vietnamese soldier tried unsuccessfully to hijack a French plane at Saigon's Tan Son Nhut Airport. The official Vietnam News Agency said the would-be hijacker killed himself with a grenade, but there were no reported injuries among passengers or crew.

Since the 1975 defeat of the U.S.-backed Saigon government, thousands of Vietnamese have fled their homeland, most by boat.

Many of these "boat cases" have had serious problems in finding countries to accept them. Most Southeast Asian nations have all but shut their doors to new refugees.

Even those that do provide haven try to move the refugees on as quickly a possible. Despite these efforts boat camps have sprung up from Thailand to Japan with refugees forced to live aboard the vessels that carried them from Vietnam.

If you forgot, turn clocks

Californians went off Daylight Savings Time at 2 a.m. today. Remember, fall back, spring forward.

If you forgot to set your clocks back one hour before retiring Saturday night, you are one hour ahead of everyone else today. At 2 a.m., clocks were set back to 1 a.m.

Today is a 25-hour day, giving Californians back the hour they lost last April when the state officially went on Daylight Savings Time.

If you haven't set your clocks back yet, better do it now. Would be embarassing to show up at 10 a.m. your time and find it was actually 9 a.m.

60 years after the revolution: Soviet lags behind the West

But life is better than it was, say Russian citizens

MOSCOW (AP) — The Soviet Union marks 60 years of communism this week secure in its status as a superpower but far from realizing the dreams of the Bolshevik revolution.

Despite — or perhaps because of — its military might, the U.S.S.R. lags behind the West and even some East European countries in such critical areas as industry, agriculture, science and technology.

In many ways it is a developing country, lacking many of the facilities common to smaller industrial nations and anxious to obtain Western products and plants.

On the political side, the Kremlin often uses heavy-handed tactics to suppress dissent.

But these problems and practices will not be the focus of the anniversary observance. Instead the aging leadership in the Kremlin will stress the positive in observances culminating with the traditional parade in Red Square Nov. 7.

The Soviets are expected to continue playing down the military display in the parade in line with their policy of calling for an end to the arms race and a decrease in military spending.

Western diplomats with long Soviet experience acknowledge there have been genuine achievements in recent years. But they often remark on the contrast between the reality of Soviet life and the picture drawn by the official media.

"In foreign affairs, the most significant development since the 50th anniversary has been the accommodation reached with the United States," said one senior envoy, referring to detente and the Strategic Arms Limitation Treaty.

"At home, living standards have improved slightly. Life is more open than it was. But you do not have the dynamic nation the revolution envisioned. Just the opposite. It's immobile, frozen, resistant to any change."

The mobs that stormed the Winter Palace in St. Petersburg — now Leningrad — in 1917 set in motion the transformation of a mass of backward peasants into a world power roughly equal in military strength to the United States.

Soviet President Leonid I. Brezhnev boasted recently there was hardly a corner of the globe that was outside Soviet interest and influence. He and his Kremlin colleagues believe in the inevitable triumph of communism everywhere.

But the schism with China continues, most regimes in East Europe remain subservient to the Kremlin simply out of fear of open intervention, and the Communist parties in Western Europe are demonstrating increasingly that Moscow-style Marxism-Leninism is not for them.

The revolution also held out the promise of a classless society in which no one would want for the necessities of life because the state would own, plan and manage the economy. The one area where centralized planning seems to work is arms production, and then it is at the expense of consumer goods.

While the Soviet system shields citizens from the unemployment and inflation that plague industrialized nations, its performance has been less than brilliant when measured by official promises to become No. 1 economically.

With twice the land area of the United States and 20 per cent more people, the Soviet gross national product for 1976 was $3,300 a person, not quite on the level of Greece or Spain, while the U.S. figure was $7,936. The Soviet growth rate is about average compared with other industrialized nations.

The Soviet Union produces more oil, coal, steel and cement than the United States and is second only to South Africa in the production of gold. Yet little of this wealth filters down to the consumer.

In the current five-year plan, 31 per cent of all investment has been allocated to agriculture, but by Western standards the U.S.S.R. remains incapable of feeding its people without resorting to food imports, even in years of good harvests. Meat shortages are a particular difficulty.

Many Soviet citizens are not interested in such comparisons. They agree with the state-controlled newspapers that life is better than it was 60 years ago and even 10 years ago.

But they expect conditions to keep improving. They want better living conditions and a greater supply of consumer goods.

The problem the Kremlin faces is that when it promises more, expectations rise. When the performance falls short of promise, the leaders run the risk of popular dissatisfaction.

Some analysts believe such dissatisfaction could lead to economic reforms at a future date, reforms that were vaguely discussed in the late 1950s and 1960s and then shelved.

Bavarian who lost his way wants to go back to Maine

SAN FRANCISCO (AP) — He's finally arrived, but Erwin Kreuz' heart is nowhere near this city by the bay. The German tourist wants to go back to Bangor, Maine, the city he fell in love with by accident.

Kreuz, a Bavarian brewery worker from the community of Adelsried, decided to take a charter flight to San Francisco after seeing television shows about the city. But when his plane made a brief stopover in Bangor last weekend, he mistakenly deplaned, and spent three days sightseeing before he realized he had stepped out 3,000 miles too soon.

He became a celebrity in Bangor, but a San Francisco newspaper decided to put up the money to bring him here.

"He's gotta catch his plane back from here, but he didn't really want to come," his interpreter, Ralph Coffman of Bangor, said Friday.

"I'd just as soon have stayed in Maine," Kreuz said in German. Later, he said, "I want to go back to Maine or home."

The 50-year-old Kreuz did not appear impressed Friday.

Coffman said Kreuz' only comment about San Francisco on the trip between the airport and the mayor's office was, "There's no trees," unlike the heavily forested Maine or the wooded hills of Bavaria.

Asked if he was disappointed he would have only three days here, Kreuz shrugged and said, "Buy me a ticket home and pay for me to stay in a hotel and I'll stay a few more days."

During a meeting with Mayor George Moscone in Moscone's opulent office, Kreuz wore a red-white-and-blue cap with Maine in big letters and a map of the state on it.

He smiled and nodded and said "wunderbar" over and over again as Moscone shook his hand, patted him on the back, gave him a framed map of San Francisco in 1846 and told him, "We are very proud you wanted so desperately to come to San Francisco."

Earlier, when asked if he really wanted to meet Moscone, Kreuz began talking rapidly in German and ticking off on his fingers the famous people he had already met. "He savs he's met them all," translated Coffman, shrugging his shoulders.

But Kruez faced more adventures Saturday night. Kreuz, feted beyond his wildest dreams because he got off a plane 3,000 miles short of target last weekend, was to become an honorary Chinese.

"I'd say the lost son has finally come to San Francisco," Kreuz announced in German as he traveled to the domed seat of San Francisco goevernment.

"Alles okay," pronounced the beaming Kreuz at one point. At his hotel, the lavish Hyatt Regency, Kruez found two gifts: a cold case of beer and two pairs of jeans. The beaming brewer celebrated by downing a bottle. He said he usually drinks eight quarts a day.

"I don't drink it. I gulp it down," he announced contentedly, speaking through an interpreter. That night at the Grand National Rodeo and Horse Show, Kreuz got a hero's welcome. He posed for dozens of pictures, including one between a pair of 2,000-pound Brahma bulls. Kruez kissed one of them.

The German's full weekend also includes an affair Saturday night at a Chinese restaurant, where he was to be made honorary member of the Wong Family Association in a special ceremony. He leaves for home Sunday.

DOUGLAS, Ariz. (AP) — U.S. Border Patrol agents were expected to be watching closely today to see if the Grand Knights of the Ku Klux Klan expand their vigil for illegal aliens to the Arizona-Mexico border.

The Klan said its patrol, organized by Grand Dragon David Duke of Jefferson, La., would expand today despite warnings from Atty. Gen. Griffin Bell and other federal officials that "activities by vigilante groups of any kind will not be tolerated."

Duke, who started the patrols in the hills south of San Diego along the California-Mexico border earlier this week, said Klan members would remain "totally law abiding." He said they would be unarmed and would report the sighting of any illegal aliens to the Border Patrol.

After setting up the Arizona patrols, Duke said, he would head for New Mexico and Texas today and Sunday to organize further patrols in those states.

"We will have a very small operation in Arizona, three dozen or so," he said. "We are not going onto the Indian reservations or anything like that ... We're simply going to do some spotting."

The Arizona patrols will be concentrated around this border town near the state's southeastern corner, Duke said.

"We will be monitoring the situation along the border," said Herbert Walsh, chief agent in the Border Patrol's Tucson sector, which covers most of the state. "Should they interfere with our operations or break the law, then we will act."

Duke refused to reveal the names of Klan members participating ,in patrols or the times and places that patrols will occur, citing security reasons and the oath Klan members take not to reveal identities.

"Some of our people are ranchers and businessmen," he said. "They're concerned about their jobs. They're not out there for publicity or notoriety."

Totie scheduled to leave hospital

LOS ANGELES (AP) — Comedienne Totie Fields, who underwent surgery for the removal of her right breast last week, was scheduled for release from Los Angeles New Hospital Sunday, a spokesman said.

The mastectomy came only a year and half after doctors amputated her left leg because of a circulatory problem. Later, she suffered two heart attacks and underwent surgery on her left eye. In all, she was hospitalized eight months.

Miss Fields, 46, was admitted to the hospital last Monday night suffering from exhaustion after embarking on 15 weeks of professional appearances, a spokesman said. The tumor was discovered during testing, and doctors decided to operate immediately.

The comedienne's engagements for the next few months in California and Las Vegas have been cancelled.

Berman's son, 12, dead of cancer

LOS ANGELES (AP) — The 12-year-old son of comedian Shelley Berman died of cancer Saturday at Cedars-Sinai Hospital, a family spokesman said.

Joshua Berman had been ill for 15 months and spent half of that time in the hospital, said spokesman Joe Siegman. Services were scheduled for Tuesday.

He is also survived by his mother, Sarah, and a sister, Rachel, 11.

One killed, 2 injured in Pomona free-for-all

One youth was slain and two other slightly wounded in a knife and tire iron free-for-all in Pomona Saturday in what police described as the aftermath of a fist fight between two girls.

Coroner's investigators said Johnny Rodriguez, 15, of 2472 Barjud Ave., Pomona, died of multiple knife and tire iron wounds. Friends dumped him at the front entrance of Pomona Valley Community Hospital and sped away before police could question them.

Most combatants and partygoers had fled by the time police arrived, officers said. So far no arrests have been made.

Chino brothers killed in crash to be buried

Two Chino area brothers, killed in a fiery collision involving a school bus and two trucks in Hundred Palms Wednesday, will be buried Tuesday in Pomona Cemetery.

David Danny Yamas, 34, and Edwin (Eddié) Rudolph Yamas, 30, were killed when the truck carrying a load of cotton they were driving struck another truck headon near Avenue 66 about 2 p.m. Wednesday in Hundred Palms.

The California Highway Patrol said that a schoolbus from the Coachella Valley Unified School District was struck by one of the trucks prior to the headon collision and sustained some damage from the collision and resulting fire. Bus driver Ida Curtwright was able to get all 52 of the children on board off safely.

Officials said the truck driven by the Yamas brothers was following the school bus northbound on Highway 86 when the bus stopped to make a left turn. The Yamas truck swerved to avoid hitting the bus glancing off the bus and into the southbound traffic lanes where it struck the other truck.

The two trucks burst into flame killing David Yamas outright along with the occupants of the other truck.

They were identified as Calvin Birlew, 51 and his wife, Naoma, 42, both of Los Banyos.

Edwin Yamas, who was driving the truck, was pulled from the vehicle by a passerby and taken to Indio Community Hospital where he died Thursday morning.

A spokesman for the Riverside County Fire Dept. said a plume of smoke could be seen from the burning vehicles 20 miles away in Indio.

The highway was closed for four hours after the accident.

But there's jealousy among city employees

More money for a better worker

By LEE MITGANG
AP Urban Affairs Writer

As labor costs for city governments continue to soar, some are turning to the idea of offering more money in city contracts for better worker productivity.

A relative handful of cities have experimented with the idea for at least five years, but now that New York City has adopted the practice, productivity is becoming a more common bargaining chip for other cities trying to hold down labor costs.

The theory is fine for city governments because it can produce faster, if not always better, work from its employes, cut down on overtime costs, and pave the way for job reductions. But in some of the cities it has been tried in, it has also created jealousy between workers who get productivity bonuses and shorter workdays and those who don't.

And generally, many union leaders fear that productivity is just a nice word for fewer workers.

For New York, there was practically no choice. Because of the city's severe financial bind, unions have been forced to accept the idea that any wage or cost of living increase will have to be funded by productivity savings. It is almost certain that any new union contracts resulting from negotiations set for January and April next year will include many productive features.

"The unions have accepted it. They feel there is no other way out,"says an official of New York City's Office of Labor Relations who asked not to be quoted by name.

Other cities have been trying productivity bargaining, although urban experts hesitate to call it a trend. Most notable are contracts covering sanitationmen in Flint, Mich., police in Orange, Calif., and water meter workers in Philadelphia.

A 1976 survey by the International City Management Association showed that out of 372 cities reporting, 36 of them, or less than 10 per cent engaged in productivity bargaining. Among various methods cities say they use to get more work for their labor dollars, putting bonuses or other sweeteners in labor contracts or otherwise offering to share the fruits of productivity savings with city workers remains the least prevalent.

Sanitationmen in Flint have had productivity cash incentives in their contracts for four years and are now in the midst of renegotiation.

In 1973, the city's sanitationmen demanded some sort of compensation for the growing amount of trash they had to pick up. But the city had the problem of reducing a growing burden of overtime costs. The agreement finally reached paid workers a productivity bonus of eight cents an hour if they cut overtime by 25 per cent. In addition, workers could go home after six hours if their routes were completed.

By 1975, the city was paying out about $208 a person in productivity bonuses, and was adding $2,000 to the bonus pool for each person it could eliminate from the payroll through attrition. And by 1976, workers were allowed to go home after only five hours if their routes were completed.

But this year, the unions, the city government and Flint citizens have taken a harder look at the productivity incentive idea, with no resolution so far. On the bargaining table are further refinements, notably a "complaint factor."

"Citizens were complaining that workers rush through their work to go home earlier," says Rita Patton, director of labor relations for Flint. Thus the city is trying to reduce a worker's bonus by a certain percentage based on any citizen complaints about his work.

On the positive side, the city has found it has reduced overtime hours from 6,700 in fiscal 1973 to only 45 hours in fiscal 1975, according to a study of Flint's program by the Urban Institute published last April.

There has been difficulty in the union ranks. Workers covered by the productivity agreements were working side by side with those who didn't have any. Sanitationmen were allowed to go home early each day, while workers who maintained garbage trucks felt resentful.

The approximately 60 sanitationmen covered by the productivity agreement belong to Local 1600 of the American Federation of State, County and Municilal Employees — AFSCME — representing approximately 1,000 Flint employes. The local's president, Jack Johnson, said in an interview he opposed productivity agreements for other workers he represents because such agreements seem to go hand in hand with fewer city jobs.

While urbanologists haven't given up on the idea of contract incentives for increased city labor productivity, Sam Zigoria, director of the Labor-Management Relations Service of the National League of Cities cites five problems cities have found with the idea:

—City managers are concerned that putting productivity on the bargaining table robs them of management prerogatives.

—Productivity bargaining gets mixed up with other bargaining issues and can lead to costly or unwise trade-offs.

—Productivity formulas that reward work improvements can self-destruct. In Orange, Calif., for instance, police who had agreed to a contract that rewarded lower crime rates with bonuses found that crime rates can only be improved so much.

—Since productivity incentives usually apply to only one unit in a given city agency, it can often create envy among other workers.

—Finally, in a time of urban financial stress, many taxpayers resent paying bonuses for work they feel city employees should be doing anyway.

Memorial fund set for slain mother

Students and faculty at Cal Poly Pomona have set up two memorial funds for Barbara Newton to take care of general expenses and to provide for the education of her two young daughters.

Mrs. Newton, senior secretary in the teacher preparation program at the university, was killed on campus last Monday. She also served as secretary of the Black Council for Unity (BCU) and corresponding secretary of the Black Faculty and Staff Association.

The Barbara Newton Memorial Fund is to help offset funeral expenses for the young Montclair woman. The Associated Students Inc. (ASI) and BCU arranged the Educational Fund for Kathy and Regina Newton as a special trust for her children.

Willie Wright, adviser to the BCU, said the ASI offered $500 to kick off the trust fund and will sponsor annual events beginning this year to raise additional dollars to assist in the education of the Newton girls. Clubs and organizations under the auspices of the ASI and affiliated with the BCU will participate in these events, leaders said.

The faculty and staff of the Teacher Preparation Center will also select a spot on campus to establish a living memorial to Mrs. Newton.

Persons interested in contributing to either funds may make checks payable to ASI/Newton Memorial Fund or ASI/Newton Educational Fund and send donations to Helen Master, senior accountatnt, ASI/University Union, Cal Poly, 3801 W. Temple Ave., Pomona 91768.

Neighborhood center to get CETA funds

The Pomona City Council has decided to approve CETA funding of the South Hills Neighborhood Service Center on a probationary 90-day status.

The council took that action this week because REAC, another agency on probation, has chosen not to accept its allocation of CETA Title I funds of $26,599 for the current funding year.

The council acted on a recommendation of the city's Manpower Advisory Council which voted in favor of funding South Hills, which did not receive any money during 1976-77.

At a recent study session, the council had aired many of South Hills' past conflicts and problems, and voted to reconsider South Hills at a later time, if, and only if, there were available funds pending the outcome of the appeal of REAC (Re-Employment Action Committee for Greater San Gabriel and Pomona Valleys).

In September, the council approved federal funding for REAC for 1977-78, but also put REAC on probation until Dec. 1 when REAC's program would be reviewed.

REAC has notified the city that it is not accepting its allocation of CETA Title I funds this year.

REAC and South Hills are the only two agencies to request CETA Title I funds under a manpower services category, which trains a person how to find a job, but does not provide for any skill training.

South Hills with the funding will be able to assist 26 persons who are unemployed and whose family income is below the federal poverty guidelines.

The council also took the following actions:

—Read a proclamation honoring Judge Carlos M. Teran upon his retirement.

—Read a proclamation urging support of the charity ball Oct. 28 at Griswold's Pavilion to benefit the Blind Children's Center.

—Approved an agreement with the Pomona Chamber of Commerce for $35,000 for commercial and industrial promotion.

—Accepted a plaque and a key to the city from Tijuana, Mex., visited recently by city officials and the Chamber of Commerce. Councilwoman Georgia Grove presented the plaque and Councilman Adrian Wright the key.

—Approved an agreement with the Pomona YMCA for $15,000 of general revenue-sharing funds on a one-time-only basis for the Y's outreach program.

Parking moratorium due

A recommendation that the Pomona City Council set a four-month moratorium on enforcing city laws against parking or storing recreation vehicles in front yards will be considered by the council Monday at 8 p.m.

The recommendation was voted by the planning commission last Wednesday night after a large turnout of recreational vehicle owners protested the ordinance.

During the four-month moratorium, the commission will try to define a recreational vehicle.

Westmont residents protested to thg city council recently because complaints from neighbors had led to citations.

In other matters, the council will consider an appeal by Burger King, 1245 E. Holt Ave., of a commission denial of an application for a larger sign.

The council will continue its discussion of a tax on bingo game receipts.

A contract, with an engineer's estimate of $190,000, will be awarded for upgrading street lights in the area south of Phillips Boulevard and west of Park Avenue.

Clinic offers immunization

People who are 55 years of age or older will have the opportunity to receive free flu immunizations at a Pomona clinic Tuesday from 10 a.m. to 2 p.m.

The free clinic at Palomares Community Center, 499 E. Arrow Hwy., is sponsored by the county health department.

"It is essential that senior citizens obtain the immunizations before mid-November to protect them against this year's strain of flu," said Dr. Annabell Teberg, medical director of the San Gabriel Valley Health Services Region.

She added the fact that the yearly flu shot provides immunity for only about six months.

The vaccine being given this year is a combination of A-Victoria and B-Hong Kong.

Old Mexico, California today

Teens in 'fashion' parade

By TONY AULT
PB Staff Writer

Earlier this month a small group of youths not unknown to local police agencies brought tears to their parents' eyes.

They were not tears of sadness, as the parents had been accustomed to, but hears of happiness.

The special show was presented by a new and unusual organization called "Creole Productions," created through the Aztlan Community Service Center, 635 S. Taylor St., Ontario.

Although not widely publicized in the Chino area, the fashion show filled the Chino Community Center to near capacity with not only residents of the Chino Mexican-American community, but civic leaders, businessmen and community leaders.

The participants were largely members of the Chino Sinners street gang, and other young men and women who might otherwise have been wandering the streets, running afoul of police.

It was both a relief and a joy to the parents attending who saw, perhaps who never would have imagined, their children taking center stage in a show of such nature to please rich and poor alike.

According to Maricela S. Ferguson, director of Creole Productions, and Tony Vicario of the Atzlan Community Service Center, the show is only the beginning of a series of fashion productions to be given in the valley by barrio youths, who will be selected at random.

Cooperating with the production company is a group of merchants from Montclair Plaza and Olvera Street in Los Angeles.

Funds donated for the shows, according to Mrs. Ferguson, will go into the Escholito programs.

The shows will include a parade of styles dating from Old Mexico through to barrio street dress and today's modern businessman. There will be dancing of the period shown, and other entertainment.

Included in the fashions is the original Mexican charro attire, the dress of the female warrior, barrio dress and business suits.

The next performance tentatively is scheduled Nov. 12 at the Claremont Colleges, where a national conference on minorities will be held.

STREETWISE TEENS from South Bronx view the horrors of jail

Street, violent crime still pays

Flow of youths in criminal justice system is unabated

EDITOR'S NOTE — Violent crime is a young man's game and for another decade at least sheer numbers will ensure plentiful supply of players. If the teeming prisons neither deter nor reform, what other ways are open?

By JOHN BARBOUR
AP Newsfeatures Writer

CHICAGO (AP) — While bulging prisons struggle to contain the tide of lawbreakers, street crime, violent crime, still pays and the flow of youths through the criminal justice system continues unabated.

The young gangs that terrorize inner city streets play the odds, and by the time they are caught and the later time they are imprisoned they are committed to a life of predation.

Serious crime has risen in the United States by 70 per cent in the last 10 years. while the population has grown 7 per cent.

"And the gap between the amount of crime reported and the amount of crime experienced is vast," says Norval Morris, dean of the University of Chicago law school.

"It is authoritatively estimated that only half of all robberies of individuals and household burglaries, less than half of all assaults, rapes and attempted rapes, and less than a third of household larcenies are reported."

Even though crime statistics are considered grossly inadequate, there is no doubt that most serious crimes are committed by relatively young people, and criminals are getting younger all the time. The peak age for violence is now 16, and there is no decline in the 15-20 age group until at least 1980.

"The pill came late to the ghetto," Morris says.

"There is no reason to expect that the most serious forms of youth crime — homicide, rape, armed robbery and serious assault, which are concentrated in center-city poor minority populations — will have been reduced by 1990."

The expert consensus is that the certainty of capture and punishment would likely reduce street crime.

There is no such certainty now, and none in the foreseeable future. Street youths know it.

"They've gambled the odds," says Norman Carlson, director of federal prisons. "They know very well that the odds of apprehension are fairly small. And they know they can plea bargain and the chances of imprisonment are pretty low."

In the last seven years, more than half the states have reformed their criminal law codes or are in the process. Congress, for the second time in recent years, is studying a bill which would recodify the federal code. Even these efforts would not produce uniformity.

Bank robbers average 17-year sentences in Georgia and xx years in northern Illinois. But federal judges may sentence bank robbers to anything from probation to 25 years in prison. The new federal codification would at least modify that.

"Sentencing maximums are inconsistent and irrational," says Sen. Edward Kennedy, who with Sen. John McClellan, is sponsoring the bill. "If one robs a federally insured bank today, a 25-year term of imprisonment is possible; but if one robs a post office, the maximum term is only 10 years."

"Let's face it," says prison director Carlson, "we play games. The courts give long sentences knowing full well that it will be written up as 99 years. But hell, the judge knows, the inmate knows, the defense counsel knows that the guy isn't going to serve 99 years. He's going to serve five, six, seven, something like that."

The new federal code would establish a sentencing commission to set guidelines. Sentences would be firm, after appeal, and the prisoner and everyone concerned would know how long he would stay in prison.

The new federal code also would establish four firm measures of culpability. A crime would be judged on whether it was intentional, knowing, reckless or negligent. The code has 80 such levels now.

It would provide standard measures of crime, standard sentences, fixed punishment. Presuming breakers of the law are also students of its severity, this would soon filter down to would-be offenders.

It could also serve as a model for state codes.

Morris proposes that police deal only with crimes such as homicide, robbery and arson. Civilian agents or undercover officers would handle nonviolent crimes such as embezzlement, drug trafficking and prostitution.

Criminal law, he says, should not be used "to regulate the private moral conduct of citizens and to coerce them into virtue . ..

"We annually set our police to arresting four million assorted drunks, addicts, loiterers, vagrants, prostitutes and gamblers ... We overload our criminal justice system to a degree that renders it grossly defective where we most need protection from violence and predation ...."

Study of homicides suggests 'reasons'

CHATTANOOGA, Tenn. (AP) — Southerners tend to react more violently than other Americans when their code of personal honor is challenged, says geography of crime authority Keith Harries.

The Oklahoma State University professor said at a recent crime analysis conference here that a mix of cultural and economic factors helps explain why the South has the highest rate of homicides in the country.

He said there were 12.7 homicides per 100,000 population in the South, 7.6 in the Northeast, 8.1 in North-Central America, 9.0 in the West, and 9.6 for the entire country in 1975.

Harries also noted that homicide rates for both whites and blacks in the South were above the national average.

Southerners have a set of attitudes that generally condone interpersonal violence and they tend to live by their own code of personal honor, he said.

As far as economics and crime are concerned, Harries' view of violence in the South is that it "is nothing more than a function of the relative poverty of the region."

Whereas homicides occur everywhere, quite often as spurof-the-moment acts between relatives and friends, robberies and crimes against property occur more frequently in urban areas where there are more "opportunities" to rob people and to steal and destroy, he said.

Harries cautioned that crime rate data can be deceiving. For example, annexation of a suburb by a city should be taken into account when police report a decrease in the rate of crimes committed in the city, he noted.

By the same token, the media do not always make it clear whether they are reporting crime rates for the incorporated city or the Standard Metropolitan Statistical Area (SMSA).

The week-long conference for state planning employees was sponsored by the University of Tennessee at Chattanooga's Center for Criminological Analysis and Training.

Deafness hits one-in-ten

NEW YORK (AP) — About 20 million persons, or one in every 10 Americans, is partially deaf, and some 2 million hear so little that they are unable to understand normal speech, according to the National Health Education Committee.

The group says premature children and older people have the highest incidence of hearing problems. In premature births, partial deafness occurs almost seven times as frequently as in normal deliveries.

'I've seen men go mad on death row . . .'

EDITOR'S NOTE — The bottom line in the criminal justice system is death — when society draws it. And more and more states are restoring capital punishment along Supreme Court guidelines. In this account, Richard Tuttle, managing editor of the Rochester Democrat and Chronicle, vividly recalls a double execution he covered in 1961.

By RICHARD TUTTLE

In the flatland of North Florida when the fog is lifting at dawn the pine trees are black against the sky.

It is cool and damp, even in August sometimes, and there is a certain alertness to it when you are 15 and camping beside the brackish creeks and the salt marshes.

Then you hear the screech of a bluejay or the song of a mockingbird. As the sun comes up, the trees are still black, but all of a sudden the first ray of sunlight strikes through the mist. The trees that were black are now bathed in red and yellow.

The color is life.

"We have to get up early," the corrections commissioner said, cutting into the thick steak on his plate. "We'll have to be there from the beginning."

We were in a restaurant in Starke, Fla., a small town which serves as a commercial center for that farming district but which mostly has one industry: Raiford Prison.

"Well, the one guy ... the first one ... he killed a cop," the commissioner said, "and the other one raped a child. So what do you do with these people. I've seen men go mad on death row; change into raging animals, crying out ... not for mercy, for death."

"I don't think it is right," I said. "Instinctively, I think it is wrong."

I had been to Raiford before to interview prisoners and once to cover a riot. I had a sense of the day-to-day mood of the place. The white buildings sitting there in open fields behind electric fences with the August sun beating down.

The warden gathered the witnesses together in the administration building along with the reporters. He said everything was calm. He led us out into the inner compound and down a crushed stone path that led to the death house, a separate white, flat building that contained the condemned and the electric chair.

The mockingbirds and bluejays were acting up, fighting and chirping in the trees off to the left. Otherwise there was no movement.

There were about 30 chairs lined up for the witnesses, all facing the electric chair, eight to 10 feet away.

A few witnesses were

Most experts agree that the best answer to crime is prevention — a way somehow to intervene in young lives before they become committed to crime. But how far can society go?

"We know that most of the offenders we deal with have not come from stable family backgrounds," Carlson says. "It doesn't matter if it's an impoverished black kid from a ghetto family in New York, or a wealthy kid from the suburbs of Milwaukee who lived near a golf course. The lack of family solidarity is responsible for most of the social breakdown in this country."

But he would not break in on the family and take the child away to more stable situations. "I grew up in a time when we talked of boys' and girls' homes. I don't think that's any better and might be even more disastrous than letting them grow up in a family situation. At least they have some contact with a real mother or father."

Halloween came every night in Washington

Capitol ghosts: phantom figures lurking in shadows of gaslit era

WASHINGTON (AP) — A gigantic cat prowls stately halls. Brick walls yield muffled scraping. Phantom footsteps echo. And the ghost of Mr. Twine keeps stamping, stamping, stamping ....

Journey back, if you dare on this day before Halloween, to the Capitol's gaslit era. Then, Halloween came every night and even between elections members of Congress ran scared.

The Capitol, said an 1890s paper, is "probably the most thoroughly haunted building in the world" with "not less than 15 well-authenticated ghosts infesting it."

And nervelessly it pointed out the Demon Cat, the Walled-Up Workman, the Solitary Stroller and the ghosts of John Quincy Adams and Civil War Gen. John Alexander Logan.

The Demon Cat was a Poesque puss that patrolled the corridor near the unused tomb of George Washington. Kittensized when first sighted, it swelled into a fierce, fire-spitting monster, emitted a horrendous yowl and sprang. Luckily, it always missed its terrified intended victim, then vanished. The Cat was said to be the last of the feline brigade once recruited to battle the Capitol's rat population.

Statuary Hall is spooky enough at night with its row of silent, stone figures of the men who once walked these halls as living lawmakers. But crossing the hall was a chilling task when John Quincy Adams' footsteps sounded close behind. The ex-president died in this hall when it was the House chamber, and his restless ghost returned for decades.

The Solitary Stroller paced his beat in the basement beneath the House. Erect, with a great moustache, his hands were invariably clasped behind him, said those who saw him. Some thought him to be a foreigner in the diplomatic service; others, the ghost of Pierre L'Enfant, the designer of the capital. His expression was variously described as melancholy, serious, and friendly and smiling.

Mr. Twine worked for the Library of Congress, stamping books with a mixture of alcohol and lampblack in an office resembling a large iron cage. Twine's ghost kept revisiting his office long after the library moved from the Capitol basement. When guards heard rubber meeting flyleaf, they knew Twine was back at his old stamping ground.

The Walled-Up Workman was thought to be a laborer

From the 'Golden Era'

Old film buff bases career on 'nostalgia'

COLUMBUS, Ohio (AP) — The lights dim, the tinkle of a piano begins, the credits flicker, and Rudolph Valentino again gallops across the desert sands.

For those old enough to remember, it is a nostalgic return to the early 1900s, the golden era of silent films.

For those too young to remember how Valentino thrilled movie audiences with his portrayal of the Sheik, or Buster Keaton's antics in "The General," it is a lesson on movies in their infancy.

Sending the old, the not-so-old and the young back to these beginnings is how Bob Verbeck makes his living.

Verbeck, a piano and organ player for silent-screen stars as a teen-ager in Neenah, Wis., now shows old silent films around the country. His career has taken him to the White House, Carnegie Hall and to thousands of theaters and campuses.

Interest in early-day movies has been phenomenal in the last 20 years, he said. He has competition but says, "I believe myself to be the only original, silent-movie piano player on the circuit."

"I think the interest — nostalgia -- shows a conscious feeling on the part of the public that they're missing something — that life is not as good, not as romantic, not as much fun and not as exciting as it was then," he said. "Today's casual social attitude is not as much fun as they first thought. We've all got to have a dreamland in our lives such as romance, idealism."

Verbeck shows the old films at the original speed — about one-third slower than the speed adopted after 1925 for sound pictures. This eliminates the jerkiness, mistakenly associated with silent movies shown on TV and elsewhere, he said.

"For as long as I can remember — I must have been 6 or 7 years old — I've been interested in show business," said Verbeck, who began to play the piano at age 10.

"I've never had a lesson in my life and I can't read music," he said.

His break came when a piano player at the Neenah Theater allowed him to play during his lunch break. From then on, Verbeck said, he played often. "But just when I was getting into it, we moved and the talkies came in," he added.

His family moved to Columbus, where he attended Ohio State University, got a master's degree and stayed on as a sociology professor. But the lure of show business drew him back and 25 years ago he left the university to show the old films he had collected.

During the early 1900s, Verbeck said, about 200,000 silent films were made in this country. He believes fewer than 100,000 still exist.

Initially, "the old silent movies could be picked up for a song — $2 or $3 each — because they were considered worthless, a storage problem and a fire hazard," Verbeck said.

Because they were printed on highly flammable nitrate, which disintegrated quickly, many films self-destructed, rotted in their cans.

"Today, the films cost hundreds of dollars when collectors are lucky enough to find them," he said. He values most of his at $250 or more apiece. Others are priceless, either because of their rarity or their sentimental value as gifts from actors who starred in them.

One film he treasures as a gift is "Elegy," starring Tyrone Power Sr. and Ethel Wales. Miss Wales, also from Neenah, gave it to him. Another gift is a piece of film featuring the classic love scene from Valentino's "Blood and Sand" (1922), from Nita Naldi, Valentino's co-star.

Two treasures in his collection are Edison's 1894 film recording of a sneeze and an 1895 film called "Washday Trouble," which was the first ever shown to the public. Each lasts just one-half minute.

Verbeck's piano accompaniment is unobtrusive — a background to the film's action — not a performance.

sealed behind masonry during construction of the Capitol. Passersby could hear the unfortunate fellow's ghost scraping with a trowel to draw attention. But it never got so bad that any walls were torn down to free him.

The Spectral Scrubber, a departed janitor, returned night after night for unpaid overtime at the expense of the flesh-and-blood cleaning force.

Terrified, the workers listened to phantom water swash and watched an invisibly guided mop glide over the floor.

A fellow worker of Mr. Twines', the Careless Cataloguer, went to his reward with about $6,000 in government bonds hidden among books in his subcellar den. For years after, he haunted the library's vaults looking vainly for the cache he'd been unable to take with him.

At exactly 12:30 a.m. nightly, the doors of the room occupied by the Senate Committee on Military and Militia silently opened. Out stepped the form of Civil War genius and statesman Gen. John Alexander Logan, recognizable by his long black mane, erect carriage and real-life hat. Known as a hard worker, Logan presumably returned to check on his committee's progress.

The biggest ghost story was probably that of a guard who claimed he witnessed a complete reconvening of the 1848 session of the House of Representives. However, the guard was found to be a part-time student who'd been studying that period of American history. His account was dismissed as a dream.

Another spectral visitor was the ghost of ex-Vice President Henry Wilson, who died in the Senate wing in 1875. According to reports, his ghost almost frightened to death a watchman guarding the coffin of a Tennessee senator lying in state in the Senate chamber.

What stopped the parade of ghosts and haunts? Perhaps the advent of electric lights and disappearance of kerosene lanterns. Perhaps the clatter of new construction drove them into hiding. And maybe helping usher them out was the closing of the Capitol bar in the 1890s.

women. The wives of guards, I guessed, and maybe some friends. They chatted quietly, almost in a whisper. The way you talk in church.

A door leading to death row opened and a priest walked in. Behind him was the cop-killer and guards.

The cop-killer swaggered over to the electric chair and sat down. He was trying to be macho. Tough.

The warden was on the phone. Had there been a reprieve? No.

The cop-killer made a short speech about the uselessness of capital punishment. He was trying to die the way he thought a man should die, trying to keep the tremor out of his voice, but his hands trembled.

After the man was strapped into the chair and the electrodes were fastened to his shaved head and his leg, the door to death row opened again and in walked a tall man wearing a black robe and a hood. He went to the electric panel behind the chair and checked the dials.

The warden nodded and the executioner turned the switch.

It smelled like burning hair.

Three trusties came into the room and took the cop-killer out of the chair and put him on a stretcher and wheeled him away.

The door to death row opened again and in came the priest and right behind him Robert Wesley Davis, rapist.

"We shave the head so that the 23,000 volts goes right through the brain with good contact," the official had said. "We wet the sponge under the head device so the contact is complete. We hit him with the first jolt and sometimes we do it again to make sure."

Davis is almost childlike in stature, a chubby little man, the son of a Miami prostitute, a homosexual, a pathetic figure with his shaved head, but most of all a human being about to die.

Davis had been in and out of state institutions since he was 12. He was Miami's best-known sex offender but had never been committed to a mental hospital.

"They knew what I would turn out to be and they never gave me no help," Davis said in a trembling voice.

The warden nodded his head a fraction of an inch and the executioner turned the switch again.

Davis's body was thrown just inches but with tremendous force against the leather straps that held him in the chair. He was shaking and turning purple, and then a scream that is not a scream.

When the body hits the strap across the chest, air is forced out of the lungs and across paralyzed vocal chords. The sound is inhuman, the last breath. It faded away and the switch was turned off.

The doctor and the warden walked over to Davis and looked at him. He was white now, slumped in the chair. They didn't touch him. They stepped back and the warden nodded again.

This time there was no scream but they didn't turn off the switch until smoke started to rise from Davis's head.

The witnesses and reporters walked out of the room into a blast of heat and stillness. The August sun was pounding down hard on Raiford. The prison compound was still deserted.

The bluejays and the mockingbirds had gone.

Air freight users seen

WASHINGTON (AP) — The electronics industry has become the biggest single user of air freight, according to a survey by the Air Transport Association on air cargo statistics of U.S.-scheduled airlines.

The ATA said the electronics industry was followed closely by producers of printed matter, machinery parts, cut flowers and wearing apparel.

Auto parts, photographic equipment, fresh fruits and vegetables, tools and hardware, and office machines rounded out the list of the top 10 air freight commodities.

Women alone: facing life's uncertainties with new perspective

WOMEN ALONE WITH CHILDREN

Women without husbands and children without fathers comprise a sizeable portion of the current valley population. Statistics show that 1 of each 8 women in the country has buried her husband. Most of the women have passed their 45th birthdays, but many have not.

When a mate dies, a woman loses interest

By JON MORRIS
PB Staff Writer

The woman had just returned from her husband's funeral — but she rubbed her eyes. There he was, sitting in the living room.

"She was hallucinating," said Dr. Howard Schuman, an Upland psychologist, in describing one of the many problems facing widows in the United States.

Granted, the case may be rare but the pain of losing their husbands can cause women to do many things they might not normally do, says Schuman. "When a mate dies, the woman loses interest in evething because her main interest was her husband."

And an increasing number of women are facing the problem each year, statistics from the U.S. Census Bureau show.

One of every eight women in this country is a widow. Out of nearly 85 million females in the U.S. in 1976, more than 10 million had buried their husbands.

That figure represents an increase of about 400,000 from the 9,600,000 widows reported by the Census Bureau in 1970.

The rise in the number of widows is due mainly to the greater number of women who live to older ages, and the fact most women outlive their spouses, experts say.

Husbands have the pressures of earning a living, and their hearts give out sooner, according to the Rev. Don Keepers, associate pastor of the Pilgrim Congregational Church in Pomona.

Mr. Keepers expects the trend to change a bit in the future, however, because of the advent of women's lib. With more women working, they are facing more pressures than before, he noted. "So there might be more widowers in future years."

Widows, however, outnumbered widowers by more than 5 to 1 in 1976 according to the Census Bureau. There were less than two million widowers compared to more than 10 million widows.

Remarriage rates are substantially higher among widowers than widows — which is another problem facing women without husbands.

The median age for widows has risen to 71.1, which may be one reason the widows are not remarrying as often as widowers. Most widows are at least 55 years old, Census Bureau statistics show.

And many of them share the same problems, according to Schuman, who has had a number of widows come to him as patients.

"One of the most common problems is loneliness," said Schuman in a recent interview. "Along with loneliness is the feeling of inadequacy, or worthlessness. Some people enjoy solitude, but others panic. Those who were dependent on their husbands will suffer the most during widowhood."

Various other problems of widows range from sexual to handling children (among younger widows) to utter grief and abandonment by friends who are married, says Schuman.

Widows often are told to seek out other men for companionship, but Schuman noted that they resist it. "They say they're not interested in going to bars. They'll say 'All men want the same thing.'"

Schuman indicated he's had patients whose loneliness is compounded by depression and withdrawal — and guilt. "They have the feeling they could have prevented the husband's death. If he was sick, they figure they should have gotten to the hospital on time."

If the woman starts dating soon after the husband's death, and she has children, they will resent it, said Schuman. "The son might be almost ready to murder his mother. He feels she hasn't been true to his father's memory."

And some women can't accept the fact their husbands are dead. The case of the woman who returned from the funeral to "see" her husband sitting in the living room is a prime example of "blocking it out."

Mr. Keepers said that many widows seek the church out for comfort in their time of loneliness. He noted that he was worked with many younger widows who have children.

"They have terrible fright at being left alone with kids. Some had never worked before, and now they have to find their own way."

The problem is that many widows don't want to burden friends with their sorrows, said Schuman.

"But if I was giving advice to a widow, I'd say take advantage of friends. One shouldn't worry about bringing troubles out in the open. Widows should not isolate themselves."

Her new role—father on weekdays and mother on weekends . . .

By TONY AULT
PB Staff Writer

Mrs. Marta Escobar, 39, of Cucamonga has a "deal" with her five children. On weekdays she is "father" and on weekends she is "mother."

Her deal with her children came quite unexpectedly on Feb. 22, 1969 in a La Puente supermarket. She and her husband of 12 years, Oscar Escobar, were walking down the aisle when he suddenly collapsed at her feet. Mr. Escobar, a civil engineer for the California Highway Department and an emigrant to the United States, died a short time later in a hospital of what doctors said was a brain hemorrhage.

That same day Mrs. Escobar became one of an estimated 10.7 million widows residing in the United States, or one of every eight women in the country who have buried a husband.

Admittedly "confused and frightened," Mrs. Escobar gathered up her five young charges, Eric, then 18 months; Carolyn, 5; Mario, 8; Ingrid and Marta, 13, and took them home.

Although their dreams of a bigger house and eight children were shattered, Mrs. Escobar, despite a lack of vocational skills and a command of the English language, knew it would be her responsibility alone to provide a home and rear her children. Mrs. Escobar said, "I never told them, but I was scared to death."

She explained that in the first months that followed the death of her husband her main difficulty was adjusting to the reality that her husband was gone.

"The first six months were hard for everyone. Eric cried and cried for his father. The other children were extremely quiet."

She recalled how the family's financial needs seemed to have been taken care of because Mr. Escobar had "good insurance and benefits. It was a good plan."

But, she said she had turned her families financial affairs over to a trusted relative and "in less than a year it was all gone." She said the relative and a friend of his had spent the entire benefit package.

She said things were so bad at one time she packed up her entire family and went to San Francisco for three weeks "so we could forget."

She said, "It was the best thing that ever happened."

It was during this time that Mrs. Escobar struck up the deal with her children. "It was understood that on weekdays I would be the father, and that on the weekends I would be the mother — doing all the housework and cooking." She said, "The children accepted it. They were wonderful."

Mrs. Escobar, having resolved the family's initial adjustment problems, then set to work. "I went to school for key punch classes. I began looking for work, but found none. My English was so poor, and I didn't even know how to drive a car."

She said she finally graduated from the key punch school and found a job and went to work at a Whittier computer firm. But, she said, she soon was out of work again and started school again.

Meanwhile, Mrs. Escobar said she had applied for and began receiving assistance from Aid to Dependent Children. The assistance helped her in feeding the children, making the house payments and returning to school.

She said in the next few years she worked at various firms, "learning everything I could."

"I really needed to learn," she said.

During that time, Mrs. Escobar said that other unexpected problems cropped up. She had to quit work for more than two months when she learned that Caroline needed major surgery and would be placed in a full-body cast for the time and would need constant care. Later, she said, she had to have major surgery.

She said after her surgery, she happened to apply for a job with thg Los Angeles Department of Social Services as a clerk-typist after passing a civil service examination.

Finally, she was transferred to the Los Angeles District Attorney's office, where only a week ago she learned she had passed a promotion test and would likely become an investigator.

Mrs. Escobar said that during the past eight years, "I haven't had much time to be lonely. I had to bring the children up and get them working." She said that often she had to give her older children "a little push so they wouldn't give up."

She said that she has had little time to think about remarrying. "I will just leave that to God. It it comes, it comes," she said philosophically.

"I'm pretty lucky and pretty grateful. It just takes a lot of courage and being pretty stubborn . . . and a whole lot of pride.

Mrs. Escobar recently moved into a new, two-story house but not without difficulty. She said she received word her loan had been approved, but later the bank said she was ineligible. She managed to come up with some extra money and regain the loan.

"What made me mad, the bank told me my loan had not gone through after I had moved into my home," she said.

Now she is hoping that Mario, a good student, will receive a scholarship so he can continue his education. After that she would like to become a citizen. "That would be wonderful."

Mrs. Escobar said, "I knew at the beginning that we had to finish what my husband and I had started. And . . . we will."

ANNIE OAKLEY . . . WIDOWED IN 1915

HELEN HARDY

Learning to survive after a great loss

Three generations of widows face life alone

By CONRAD CASLER
PB Staff Writer

Annie Oakley and her daughter, Helen Hardy, both widows, share a north Indian Hill Boulevard home in Claremont.

Mrs. Oakley was widowed in 1915 after seven years of marriage to a doctor in Porterville. Mrs. Hardy became a widow in 1950 after eight years of marriage.

Another member of the family, Mrs. Oakley's mother and Mrs. Hardy's grandmother, lived with the family 30 years as a widow before she died in 1945 at the age of 84.

Mrs. Oakley now is 94 and recovering from a broken hip she suffered last month. She expects to be out of her wheelchair and walking again by Christmas.

Mrs. Oakley and her husband-to-be attended nursing and medical school together in New York. They were married in Los Angeles in 1908 after Dr. Oakley had practiced in Porterville two years where he had relatives.

The newlyweds settled in Porterville where their three daughters were born. Mrs. Hardy is the middle daughter with Virginia, now living in Palo Alto with her husband, the oldest and Eleanor, living with her husband in Chillicothe, Ohio, the youngest.

Dr. Oakley was a general practitioner in Central California his entire brief career.

"He was a wonderful man," Mrs. Oakley said. "He would drive out to a farm or anywhere at any time of the day or night. He just worked himself to death."

Mrs. Oakley never practiced as a registered nurse. She did accompany her husband when he made house calls to outlying farms and Indian reservations. "I got what I wanted out of nursing school . . . . a husband," she said.

"We always had a high wheeled automobile so we could ford streams. There were no paved roads than and few bridges," she said.

Oldest daughter Virginia was sent to Pomona College from Porterville and spent two years in the dormitory there before Mrs. Oakley moved to Claremont with her other two daughters when Mrs. Hardy entered Pomona College. For one year, all three daughters were Pomona College students together.

Mrs. Oakley never took a job after her husband's death, but concentrated on raising her girls.

Mrs. Hardy worked as a physiotherapist in Santa Barbara and San Luis Obispo during her marriage, but stopped practicing her vocation after her husband's death to raise her son, now 34, and daughter, now 28.

She now works part-time at Honnold Library on the Claremont Colleges campus. Two years ago she moved in with her mother as Mrs. Oakley's advancing years began to slow her somewhat. Mrs. Hardy still owns her home in Claremont.

Mrs. Oakley almost remarried before moving to Claremont but her fiance was killed in an auto crash.

Mrs. Hardy, a widow 27 years, said of remarriage, the main thing a young widow with children should look for is a man who would be a good stepfather to her children.

"It's important for children to have a devoted stepfather, if a mother remarries," she said.

She also believes it is important for a widow who does not remarry to stay at home and devote her time to rearing her children.

Opinion
Pomona, California ■ Sunday, October 30, 1977

We can learn from history

Years ago, when the Metropolitan Water District was formed to bring Colorado River water to Southern California the Pomona Valley passed up an opportunity to become part of the district and share in the imported water supply. Local citizens were of the opinion at that time that there was no need locally for additional water supplies. It seemed to be a prudent decision at that time. Years later many of those same citizens wished they had joined the MWD at the start.

As the valley grew in the post World War II period, it became apparent that the need for water was outstripping local well water sources. Thus, the Pomona Valley Municipal Water District was formed and citizens of Pomona Valley voted overwhelmingly in 1950 to annex to the MWD. It was costly, however, since the newly formed Pomona Valley Municipal Water District was required to pay into the MWD over a period of years whatever amount it would have paid had it joined when the MWD was formed. We are still paying for it.

The upcoming PVMWD water bond measure appears to us to be a repetition of history. Present facilities for providing imported water for Pomona and eight surrounding communities are fast becoming inadequate and need to be replaced and in some cases expanded to meet future demands.

Pomona Valley Municipal Water District spends about $200,000 a year for electric power to pump water uphill from its treatment plant in north Pomona to supply the needs of water users in Glendora, San Dimas, Covina, La Verne, and Claremont. This cost is certain to go up dramatically in the coming years as the cost of energy increases. Naturally, these costs of operation are included in the cost to the consumer. By the same token, if electric costs can be reduced, savings will also accrue to the consumer.

The Pomona Valley Municipal Water District is asking for voter approval on Nov. 8 of a $26 million bond issue that in the next few years will provide for new water distribution lines, a treatment plant and storage facilities that will provide the thousands of householders in the valley with a better quality of water than they now receive.

The cost of electric power will be reduced to practically nothing because the treatment plant proposed would be built above Claremont at an elevation where the water can be distributed to the various water companies in the valley entirely by gravity flow.

Valley communities have for years pumped water from the ground, using Colorado River water supplied by the Pomona Valley Municipal Water District to augment local supplies.

We know, for instance, that the ground supplies have been overdrawn, that the quality of water is not as good as it used to be, and that dependence on imported water will be greater in the future. We know, too, that the demand for water — high quality water — will increase as the area enters a new period of population growth.

To meet the future needs of this valley, to insure that valley residents will get water when they turn on the water faucet, we must not delay in the construction of new and improved distribution facilities.

We are convinced that the project is a necessity and that a postponement, if the ballot measure is rejected by the voters, will only mean higher costs in the future, and perhaps even the possibility of water rationing down the road.

Let us not repeat the mistakes of the past regarding water development. Let us use that experience to the best advantage of every resident of this valley by voting YES on water bonds on Nov. 8. Future generations of valley residents will thank us for it.

Thoughts

Let the lowly brother boast in his exultation, and the rich in his humiliation, because like the flower of the grass he will pass away. — James 1:9,10.

"No man can tell whether he is rich or poor by turning to his ledger. It is the heart that makes a man rich. He is rich according to what he is, not according to what he has."Henry Ward Beecher, American clergyman.

Two types of arbitration

Dear Editor:

Two articles recently appearing in the Progress Bulletin are, I believe, in need of clarification. One appeared on Sept. 27, bylined by Phyllis Cannon (Labor Council Will Boycott Fund-Raiser for Ayala); the other appeared Oct. 4 and quoted Steve Edwards, president of the California Teachers Association. Both related, generally, to arbitration.

There are two types of arbitration. First, if the parties attempting to negotiate a contract reach a stalemate and other efforts to resolve differences fail, they could agree to submit the issues to arbitration and agree to be bound by the decision of the arbitrator — this is termed "interest" arbitration. Second, if the parties to negotiations consummate an agreement containing a grievance procedure which has as the final step of the grievance process binding arbitration that is termed "rights" arbitration.

SB 164, referred to in Mrs. Cannon's article, related to "interest" arbitration. Its purpose was (is) to provide a realistic method of settling disputes which reach an impasse stage in negotiations between public agencies and their uniformed services (police and fire), and in so doing, avoid strikes by police and/or firemen. Probably few, if any, citizens condone strikes by firemen and policemen (including firemen and policemen), but if they are not to strike, some reasonable and viable alternative must be found to resolve differences in negotiations.

There are, of course, valid arguments on both sides of the issue. This association did not take a position of SB 164. Current collective bargaining law for school employees (both certified and classified) permits a binding arbitration clause ("rights" arbitration) to be negotiated into a contract. I suspect it was this type of arbitration to which CTA's Steve Edwards referred on Oct. 4.

No matter how skillfully a negotiated contract is drawn (even under the best of circumstances), differences do arise in the application and interpretation of its various clauses. (That is why a grievance procedure is included in a good contract. It provides a system for resolving problems which arise from the contract). Most problems should be and are resolved before the final step is reached, meaning arbitration. However, if a contract is to have validity, there has to be a disinterested third party (arbitrator) to decide differences which exist over contract interpretation and application.

We are opposed to "interest" arbitration (a binding decision by a third party over disputes that arise during negotiations) as relates to classified school employees. We think there are better methods of solution, BUT it may be the only real solution re police and fire personnel.

On the other hand, we believe, without reservation, that every collective agreement should contain a grievance procedure with binding arbitration as its final step. "Rights" arbitration tends to resolve issues quickly and is far less costly (to all concerned) than litigation through the courts system.

I think Sen. Ruben Ayala's comments referred to "interest" arbitration (re SB 164) and not "rights" arbitration as currently authorized (but not mandated) in law for school employees. I believe Steve Edwards' comments were, as are mine, directed toward principal support of "rights" arbitration.

Sen. Ayala correctly stated that, currently, despite the "arbitration" issue, we are supporting him.

The story of a leak

WASHINGTON — Buried in the Justice Department's musty files is the story of a leak that might have prevented the Watergate break-in.

The files reveal that the State Department in 1970 began an investigation of a Washington Star story taken from classified documents. The story was traced to the celebrated leaker, Daniel Ellsberg. But strangely, the case against him was dropped.

If Ellsberg had been prosecuted, it is unlikely he would have leaked the Pentagon Papers to the New York Times the following year. This was the leak that caused Richard Nixon, then ensconced in the White House, to form his notorious plumbers.

It was the White House plumbers, of course, who staged the Watergate break-in. Thus, the government's failure to prosecute Ellsberg in 1970 began the chain of events that led to Watergate.

To compound the irony, then-Undersecretary of State Elliot Richardson was linked to the 1970 Ellsberg leak. Richardson went on to become attorney general and then dramatically resigned in protest against Nixon's handling of the Watergate investigation.

Here are the fascinating details: The Washington Star story, revealing dates and details from classified State Department cables, told in terms favorable to Richardson how he was trying to free a persecuted South Vietnamese assemblyman.

The leak was traced to a trusted Richardson aide, Charles M. Cooke Jr., who slipped the documents to Daniel Ellsberg, who was then working in Richardson's office. This came to the attention of the Pentagon's dogged chief investigator, W. Donald Stewart, during one of many investigations of us.

'During the course of a series of Jack Anderson leaks in February-May, 1971," Stewart reported in a memo, "I came across Cooke's name . . . I reviewed his State Department security file and learned that he had been identified as the person who allowed Daniel Ellsberg of the Rand Corporation to review highly classified information."

No disciplinary action had been taken against Cooke for the security breach. Thereafter, Stewart himself went to the Justice Department. This resulted in the criminal investigation.

Cooke admitted under intense questions that he gave Ellsberg access to the classified information and that Ellsberg undoubtedly was responsible for the leak.

"I talked to Richardson immediately and said, 'I'm pretty sure, 99 percent sure, that Ellsberg was the guy who leaked the stuff,'" Cooke confessed to Justice Department attorneys.

"What action was taken against Ellsberg?" demanded the attorneys.

"It just sort of fell into limbo at the time," he replied. "Nobody did anything that I know of. Richardson, I know, had discussed the case with (then-Secretary of State William) Rogers a couple of times."

If Rogers and Richardson had not left the case in "limbo," history probably would have been different.

Footnote: Rogers told us he had "no recollection" of any talks with Richardson about the leak. If he had been informed of the leak, he would have referred it to the Justice Department, he said. Richardson's memory was vague, too, but he said he was sure Cooke's version was correct.• Cooke confirmed the Justice Department account, saying the Richardson-Rogers talk had occurred "within a week" after the leak. Stewart, now retired, has just finished a book called "Leaks." He is "almost sure," he told us, that the Pentagon Papers leak could have been prevented if earlier action had been taken against Ellsberg.

Water in the gas tank

I must preface this with a personal note because I am going to be talking up something in which I have a vested personal interest — hydrogen power.

I am an investor, albeit a small one, in a company which is operating buses — and will soon market automobiles — using water in the gas tank.

I am similarly excited about the potential for several other energy options, but on this one I've put my money where my mouth is and it's only fair that you know that.

Roger Billings of Billings Energy Corp. in Provo, Utah, has converted 21 passenger buses to run on water.

The hydrogen and oxygen in the H2O are separated electrically.

And the company is presently modifying 10 subcompact cars with dual fuel systems — hydrogen or gasoline at the flick of a switch. And these cars will be sold to the general public for the kind of "uncontrolled road testing" which must be the final test of anything this innovative.

From what is learned from these first 10 cars another hundred will be built late next year.

And that's not all. A hydrogen-powered homestead is now in operation, first phase of a hydrogen-powered village.

The modern farmhouse is completely powered by hydrogen. Also the lawn, garden and farm implements burn pollution-free hydrogen.

While the government's only energy program to date has emphasized slowing down, using less, conserving, curtailing — scientists engaged in hydrogen research are excited about its limitless potential.

The hydrogen buses now in operation in Utah generate no pollution. The air coming out of a hydrogen vehicle is cleaner than the air going in. The only byproduct is water vapor. And these buses promise to carry passengers profitably at 25 cents.

The city of Riverside, Calif., is next in line for hydrogen buses on regular runs.

Why buses first? Because not every gas station has hydrogen fuel — yet.

The Energy Research and Development Administration has affirmed the safety factor. You can run a hose from the exhaust pipe into the closed passenger compartment — safely.

So the only "if" in the outlook for this particular fuel is availability.

Gasification of coal is a practical and economical source of hydrogen.

Billings is convinced that hydrogen pumps will appear at service stations as did gasoline 50 years ago — necessarily gradually.

Government could expedite this evolution — but nothing can hold back the dawn.

Innovative, imaginative Americans will do what they have to do.

And of the several optional energy forms, hydrogen presently seems to offer the most advantages for the most purposes with the least investment.

Cashing in on the canal issue

WASHINGTON — (NEA) — Although party moderates remain deeply uneasy over the Sept. 30 vote of the Republican National Committee condemning the new Panama Canal treaties, GOP leaders have wasted no time cashing in on the action.

On the strength of the resolution adopted by the national committee in New Orleans, Ronald Reagan has lent his name and his considerable drawing power to a GP fund-raising letter pegged to the canal issue.

The appeal which was mailed Oct. 21 to some 450,000 potential contributors, represents the Republican party's first attempt to capitalize on the anti-treaty sentiment which is proving such a gold mine for right-wing groups outside the party structure.

With the aid of direct mail wizard Richard Viguerie, a plethora of conservative organizations have been raking in hundreds of thousands of dollars by playing on the Panama Canal issue.

Now the Republican National Committee hopes to do likewise with the help of Reagan, who virtually created the issue last year during his hard-fought primary battle against former President Gerald Ford.

In his letter, Reagan is asking for $2 million in contributions to "defeat those Democrats who vote time and again to support actions that weaken our national security."

Ironically, GOP Chairman Bill Brock had done his best in New Orleans to head off an official party denunciation of the Canal treaties. But conservatives on the national committee prevailed.

Both the New Orleans vote and the Reagan letter create awkward problems for Ford, who staunchly supports the treaties, and for Senate Minority Leader Howard H. Baker Jr., who will be bucking the official party line if he ultimately votes for ratification.

Yet neither man objected to the Reagan fund-raising appeal, apparently believing the GOP's need for money outweighed any personal embarrassment.

And indeed, the Republicans have been hurting financially. As of Oct. 3, the national committee had raised only $6.8 million of its targeted $10.5 million budget for 1977.

Some of the party's fund-raising difficulties have been caused by the success of independent conservative groups, including Reagan's own Citizens for the Republic, in grabbing off donations that might otherwise have gone to GOP organizations and candidates.

But Reagan is being careful to stay within the GOP fold. He is holding off on a Panama Canal fund-raising pitch for his own Citizens for the Republic until after the appeal for the Republican party is well under way.

Furthermore, Reagan has steadfastly refused to step outside the party structure in order to lead a conservative charge on the canal issue, annoying some of his erstwhile supporters by his caution.

The national GOP will be indebted to both Reagan and Ford if it winds up reaching its budget target this year. A mid-September fund-raising letter from Ford, stressing a whole array of "critical issues" apart from the Panama Canal, has proven unexpectedly successful.

The Ford appeal, like the Reagan letter, was mailed to about 450,000 potential donors and had produced over $800,000 in contributions by mid-October, an extraordinary return.

It isn't easy, considering the tensions of last year's primary battle, to keep both Ford and Reagan — and their respective backers — under the same umbrella.

But with some fancy footwork, Brock may yet pull it off — to the financial benefit of the entire Republican party.

Just in jest

Psychologists are now in agreement. There IS such a thing as female intuition. And one of the reasons women have this ability, those experts say, is because females are more sensitive to nonverbal communication. Well, maybe so, maybe so! But sensitive though they may be, imagine how frustrated they would become if they actually had to communicate nonverbally.

Salad good for goldfish

DEAR DR. MILLER: Do you suppose my goldfish, Gorgeous George, ever needs a salad? I never feed him any. — J.N.

DEAR J.N.: Since goldfish are omniverous, George should do best when greens are available. While spinach is one source, an even better one is bright green, healthy anacharis (available from many aquarium supply stores). He'll munch on a bunch if you simply drop it in his tank.

DEAR DR. MILLER: Poor little Joey. The doctor tells me he has a tumor in the abdomen and wants to operate. In a case like this, does a little parakeet ever have a chance? — L.T.

DEAR L.T.: Skilled veterinary surgeons do successfully remove abdominal tumors from parakeets though, obviously, there is considerable risk involved. The bird's age, general condition, and the type and extent of the tumor are all vital factors. If surgery is to be successful it must be done early.

DEAR DR. MILLER: If only you could see Toy San now. She is not that scroungy, destructive little puppy we first wrote you about. She has developed into a handsome dog and, most importantly, the obedience and training work you recommended have made her mannerly and a joy to have around. Many thanks for encouraging us to stick with her during those early trying times. — S.S.

DEAR S.S.: While I wouldn't encourage the seeking and selection of puny, problem puppies, those who already have one can usually rehabilitate it. Physical rehabilitation can be accomplished with a veterinarian's help and undesirable behavior patterns can often be erased with patient, persistent and knowledgeable training. Thereby, psychological rehabilitation of sorts can be accomplished, too, over a period of time. Remember, though, it's enough of a challenge to raise a well-mannered, well-behaved puppy who has a desirable background and temperament. It is an increasingly greater challenge (and one that often meets with frustration) to even cope, let alone completely remold, those early behavior patterns which are partially or completely undesirable.

The more visible the better

Dear Ann Landers: Our 16-year-old daughter is a nervous wreck and my husband is so burned up he can't see straight. Three weeks ago someone started the ugly rumor that Janet is pregnant.

There is absolutely no truth to this vicious story but once something like this gets loose, it's impossible to trace it — or stop it. Janet wants to change schools. She says everyone stares a hole through her and she just dies when she sees them whispering behind her back.

My husband feels we should go to the principal and ask for permission to transfer her to a school on the other side of town. Janet would prefer to leave the city and stay with her married sister who has a nice home about 70 miles from here. We await your counsel. — Dayton Parents

Dear Parents: The best way to prove the story is a lie is to have Janet stay right where she is — and maintain a perfect attendance record. To allow her to leave town in order to run from the gossip would suggest that it might be true. The more visible and active and cheerful she is, the better — and the same holds true for you, her parents.

Dear Ann Landers: My mother-in-law died recently and left my husband a few acres of worthless land. There's an old rundown shack on the property. No one has lived in it for at least 20 years.

My husband has the bright idea that he wants to have the shack "remodeled" into a summer home so we can rent it out as income property. If you saw this place you wouldn't believe it. It should be torn down. I've tried to explain this to him but he says he'll do a lot of the work himself. (In a pig's eye he will. I'm still waiting for him to fix our roof that has been leaking for two years.)

If he goes ahead with this project it will cost a fortune. When you remodel anything it always costs twice as much as you thought it would. Please say something, Ann. He thinks you are smart because you write a column. I am dumb because I am only — A Wife

Dear Wife: Your husband should contact a construction expert and ask for an estimate on the remodeling job. When he hears what it will cost he'll probably shut his mouth. And if you're smart, you'll let the expert do all the talking.

Dear Ann: We love those "regional" versions of that old song, "Does Your Chewing Gum Lose Its Flavor on the Bedpost Overnight?" The South, North, Midwest, and West was represented, but not the East. Here's one that was popular when we spent summers at Bungalow County in Monticello, New York. — P.J. From Brooklyn

On the bedpost overnight?
When you mother says, 'Don't chew it!'
Do you swallow it for spite?
Can you catch it on your tonsils
Can you heave it left and right?
Does your chewing gum lose its flavor
On the bedpost overnight?

Dear P.J.: Now that all parts of the country have been heard from, this winds it up. So help me!

Ann Landers discusses teen-age drinking — its myths, its realities. Lean the facts by reading "Booze and You — For Teen-Agers Only," by Ann Landers. Send 50 cents in coin and a long, self-addressed, stamped envelope to Ann Landers, P.O. Box 11995, Chicago, Ill. 60611.

Why Halloween was canceled

Because this is a generation conceived after the Tonight Show, born during a commercial, educated by a big yellow bird, and has Baretta as a night light, I will explain it in language they can understand, Television.

I am saddened to inform you, kiddies, that Halloween has been canceled due to poor ratings and a preponderance of sex and violence.

One of the original holidays, it has enjoyed high ratings for 66,304 weeks. (Second only to Christmas and "Roots".)

The holiday, an ASD (All Saint's Day) Production, was originally created to focus attention on fun and games. (Like a Gong Show with taste). Little children would dress up like witches, ghosts, and goblins and roam the streets at night, then rush up to a door and yell, "Trick Or Treat." In keeping with the game, the person answering the door would opt for a treat and give them an apple or a piece of candy. Then they would try to guess who was behind the mask.

In the '50s, Halloween got the "Cher" touch. It became more elaborate, costumes became more sensational, and I opened my door to one group who were choreographed. The little bags gave way to pillow cases and the patter of little feet on the porch to track shoes. It was like a greed Olympics. Cars and buses would bring in kids from all over the city and dump them into plats. Olders dominated the night. Some of them had mustaches that tickled their masks.

In the '60s, the critics did a number on Halloween, as did sickies who put razor blades in apples and drugs in the candy, and Halloween fell out of its primetime spot and into daytime programming. It lost a lot of its audience and those who wanted to roam the darkness were at the mercy of parental discretion. Charlie's Angels couldn't have protected the little people. (The bionic dog? Maybe.)

Holidays are a ratings game. Few of them have the clout to name their own day. Many have been delegated to Mondays where they compete with Monday Night football. The cancelation of Halloween should never have happened. We, as a people, should have been so outraged that a small band of of people could take away an imaginative fun day for children that we would have fought to keep it.

I, for one . . . apologize.

Exercise may aid leg veins

DEAR DR. LAMB — I suffer from varicose veins and so was very interested in your column about them. I found out the hard way what standing without support can do. I got a mild case of phlebitis after doing it one New Year's Eve.

I want to know if a person with varicose veins should jog. I would like to take up jogging — not to excess, but 15 minutes to half an hour a day on the grass or a thick carpet. Jumping rope is another activity I would like to start to increase circulation and the strength of my feet.

As varicose veins are inherited in my family but not in my husband's are there any precautions I should take with my 9-year-old daughter to prevent her from suffering from this condition? She loves gymnastics.

DEAR READER — The point everyone with varicose veins needs to understand is that when you work the muscles in the legs they contract against the deep veins in the legs. This milks the blood up toward the heart. Exercise involving the legs actually decreases the pressure of blood in the veins in the legs.

As long as the deep veins are working properly exercise may even help empty the surface veins you can see over the legs.

By contrast, if you stand still there is nothing to milk the veins empty and the blood pools under pressure. This increased pressure tends to stretch the elastic veins in the legs. That is why standing is hard on veins but walking or jogging is not.

Of course you can jog if your physical status is otherwise normal. Start gradually, though, not because of your varicose veins but to avoid discomfort and muscle soreness. I'm not as enthusiastic about jumping rope unless you are already in good shape and know how to do it without jarring the feet too hard. An inexperienced rope jumper can damage the bones in the feet and it will not make the feet stronger. I'll vote for a jogging program for you instead.

I am sending you The Health Letter number 5-8, Varicose Veins, to give you a better understanding of what causes varicose veins, how to prevent them and how to manage them if you already have them. In some cases, but not all, surgery is indicated. Others who want this issue can send 50 cents with a long, stamped, self-addressed envelope for it to me in care of this newspaper, P.O. Box 1551, Radio City Station, New York, NY 10019.

Yes, varicose veins often occur in families. The best thing you can do is prevent the veins from being overstretched. Think of them like a rubber balloon. If you stretch them too much too often they become like overstretched sacks.

The way to prevent overstretching is to provide support outside the leg. That is why I think anyone who has to stand long hours for any reason should have some support. This is also a good idea during pregnancy. The developing baby creates pressure on the veins and causes them to become overfilled. However, unless you already have severe varicose veins you do not need to wear support hose as a preventive measure during exercise. Your daughter might need support if she ever takes a standing job or during pregnancy. Never wear anything tight around the thigh that impedes the emptying of the veins either. Other than these measures there isn't much you can do to prevent varicose veins.

DEAR DR. LAMB — You recommended that women past the menopause should get a least 1000 milligrams (1 gram) of calcium a day. I try to eat foods that contain a large amount of calcium but I am one of those who cannot tolerate dairy products. I'm 58, in the age group you mentioned, and I don't want to start having softening of the spine. I was diagnosed as having a spastic colon years ago and have a severe gas problem.

I am wondering if it is wise to take calcium with magnesium as a supplement. We have a water softener and I understand these chemicals are lost.

I am in a quandry about the supplement and had stopped taking them for fear I could be getting more than I need by taking three a day.

DEAR READER — There is nothing wrong with taking a calcium supplement. Some of the various preparations are irritating to the digestive system and others are not. A frequently overlooked source of advice on a good supplement preparation is your neighborhood pharmacist. He may be able to help you choose one that is good for you.

You wouldn't get enough calcium in your water, even without the softener to really solve your problem. You may find that you can use uncreamed cottage cheese. It contains far less lactose than ordinary milk and you may be able to build it into your diet without causing you to have digestive problems.

There was nothing wrong with South's three-notrump contract except it turned out that South didn't come close to making it.

After the spade lead he could be sure of nine tricks if he could bring in four clubs without letting East into the lead. Hence, he should have played a low club from dummy at trick two and finessed in his hand. Back to the board with the ace of clubs and a second finesse to bring in all five clubs.

Instead, he led the ace to guard against a possible singleton queen in the West hand. Not that a club trick won by West would hurt South. West could not lead a spade successfully.

Anyway, South played the club ace, finessed the second club, played the king of clubs and jack of clubs. East took his queen, led a spade and it was bingo time.

Before a hundred readers write in to tell us that South could still make his contract after misplaying the clubs, we know that he could have done just that.

He should simply cash the red ace-kings and throw West in with the seven of hearts. West could take whatever hearts he still held, but would then have to play a spade and give South a trick with the queen.

Winnie loved Marx films

Seasoned Citizens will recall during World War II that Nazi Germany's Rudolf Hess parachuted into England. Big bit. Hess was Adolf Hitler's top hand. Clearly, his mission was of monumental importance. Prime Minister Winston Churchill, however, had scheduled himself to see a Marx Brothers movie. The record shows he refused to give up the film that day to check out the Hess arrival.

Given a chance, monkeys like to eat every 90 minutes, bear in mind.

PEANUT BUTTER

Q. "What's the price of peanut butter in Plains, Ga.?"

A. About $1.25 for a 12-ounce jar, I'm told. In New York City, that much costs about 89 cents, incidentally.

A. Can only report the Dallas Cowboys' cheerleaders each get $15 per game.

Q. "How many city blocks in New York City's five boroughs?"

A. 39,000 about.

A. $60,000 per episode.

DOGS

No instrument yet devised is as good at finding leaks in natural gas pipelines as is a properly trained dog. Trick is the dog can tell the difference between the real gas and other hydrocarbon odors. The instruments can't, not every time.

Do you know why the names of most small towns used to be painted on their water towers? Not the least important reason was to help airplane pilots find their way.

That claim the southwesterners originated the practice of branding cattle doesn't hold up. Cave paintings in southern Europe prove livestock was so branded much earlier.

When your granddad was a lad, nobody was anybody who didn't have a frosted glass window in the household front door. Millions were sold by the mail-order houses.

Counseling Corner

'Supplier' best for marriage

By R. CLIFF WATERS
Marriage and Family Counselor

One primary purpose of marriage is to satisfy a basic human need: the need for the security of affection, companionship, "belonging." Marriages cannot, however, be held together merely by the pressures of law, religion and society. Marital stability depends on the cohesive power of an inner harmony between husband and wife which is built on mutual love and comradeship.

So many people today are convinced that marriage is dead. Their dissatisfaction with marriage is very real. It is not just the cry of the young who believe in "free love" and who are sure you can't really know if you are in love with another unless you have lived together first, or some caught up in the women's liberation movement.

Just about one out of every two marriages in California this year will end in divorce. So, to many, there is abundant evidence all about us that the institution of marriage is defunct.

I am often asked to supply a prescription for keeping a marriage healthy. A good marriage is established in love, but it is sustained only as that love develops and is given expression in a special pattern of relationship. Mark Twain, in one of his mellower moods, put it this way: "Love seems the swiftest, but is the slowest of all growths. No man or woman really knows what perfect love is until they have been married a quarter of a century." That may be a bit extravagant, but it does reflect a significant truth.

A young man or a young woman will have great difficulty making a good marriage if he or she approaches it as a consumer of love, not a supplier. So often I hear that he or she was looking for "someone to make me happy, someone to satisfy me, someone to serve my aims and yearnings."

Alfred Adler, one of the pioneers of modern psychology, said this about marriage: "Each partner must be more interested in the other than in himself or herself. That is the only basis on which love and marriage can be successful."

An Rx for a healthy marriage: Express affection and appreciation to one another day in and day out. This is the most effective technique for smoothing the rough edges of marriage.

A good marriage is made by two people, who, motivated and directed by love for one another, establish and sustain their marriage on a foundation of such respect and trust and concern for one another that it cannot be shattered by all the buffetings and menaces and challenges which come to every marriage.

Culture is different, in every way

China notebook: AP editor reviews his stay in Orient

EDITOR'S NOTE — A group of Associated Press executives and directors recently toured Chin for 16 days. The trip started in Peking, went north to the farmland of Inner Mongolia, and then back south through Peking, Shanghai and other cities in the south, leading finally to the exit point in Canton. Following are some items from the notebook of one of the travelers, the executive editor and vice president of AP.

By L. D. BOCARDI

PEKING (AP) — China is different, that's all. In every way. And once you get that into your consciousness, things begin to fall into place better and you stop wasting your time being surprised.

The differences started to appear soon after our plane, a four-engine jet belonging to the Chinese national airline CAAC, took off from Tokyo.

A stewardess, dressed in the same plain white, open-collared shirt and gray trousers we would see as a virtual Chinese uniform, came down the aisle and offered packages of candy, gum, a cup of tea and a fan to each passenger.

Then, our first brush with "rules": "It is forbidden to use a camera, binoculars or a radio while flying over the territory of the People's Republic of China."

The announcements all started with a crisp "Passengers." No relaxed "Ladies and Gentlemen" for this crew.

Toward the end of the four-hour flight, three minutes before touchdown in Peking, Chinese martial music clicked on the airplane sound system. We hit the runway in Peking with a song about Chairman Mao in our ears and his portrait looking down from the terminal wall.

Even the cabin crew's send-off would be different. "Goodbye, everybody, and may you all be successful in life and work," one of the attendants said.

Street Scene

Still not adjusted to the 12-hour time difference from home in New York, we wake up at 5 a.m. and look out on the main street outside the Peking Hotel, where foreign visitors are regularly lodged.

Already the bicycles are starting. Soon the trickle becomes a flood as Chinese ride their black bicycles to work 20 or so abreast in a stream that continues for hours.

Because the bicycle is THE means of street transportation, the infrequent auto is the interloper. As a sometime bike rider at home, I'm a minority against the motorized masses. Here, in our compact government-owned sedans, it's the bikers who hold sway.

During the 16 days, we stayed in six hotels. In only one — the Peking — did we have a room key. And there, when we went out, we just hung it on a numbered hook on a rack at the elevator.

We left money, cameras and other valuables in the rooms. Nothing was ever taken.

Before the trip, we had been told not to worry about figuring out the cost of our purchases in yuan, the local currency. Just hold out your cash in your hand and the clerks will take what they need.

Looking past China differences

Once I figured out the money, I tried it a few times, feigning confusion. A clerk would peel off big yuan and little yuan. They never made a mistake and never took more than they were supposed to.

When we asked about crime, we were told that there is some in the cities but it was impossible for us to make any real assessment.

We found it virtually impossible to lose anything.

At the airport in Kweilin, one of our guides produced a hanger with a damp yellow washcloth on it. Someone left it at the hotel, he said. Then the forgetful one claimed it.

Our hosts either did not notice, or perhaps were too polite to mention, that it had been taken from the hotel we had stayed in in Tokyo.

Courtesy

The courtesy and hospitality which mark the Chinese handling of a visiting American group such as ours are extraordinary.

Someone in the group mentions that he has a sore throat. Minutes later one of our translator-guides is at his side with medicine for the throat and some pills to help if a cold is coming.

You sit in a meeting room with 50 people in it. The host notices that the sun is shining in the eye of one guest. He stops his briefing and orders the curtain drawn.

Worker Incentives

Two types of banners and posters are common in factories and workshops throughout China.

The first carries a political slogan or exhortation.

"Warmly celebrate the 11th Party Congress" said a red-on-yellow streamer in the composing room at People's Daily in Peking.

"Unite around the central committee under Chairman Hua" said a banner in a woolen mill in Inner Mongolia.

The other type is a work performance chart that hails those workers who exceed their quotas and outproduce the rest of the work force.

The composing room at the newspaper in Peking was adorned with a citation for the "third shift of the workshop in this advanced collective, given by the revolutionary committee of this press organization for making 135 per cent of its typesetting quotas."

Waste Not

Nothing is wasted. Lighting is minimal in most places. Interior hallways in factories and offices were often unlit. If something were left on the floor you would trip over it. The Chinese solve this by leaving nothing on the hallway floors.

Land use shows the same distaste for waste.

In the countryside and even on the outskirts of cities, every usable scrap of land is being used for agriculture of some sort.

Animals are grazed on a narrow strip just a few feet wide between the road and a rice paddy.

At Mao's birthplace in Shaoshan, there is a patch of land a few hundred feet wide between his family home and a neighbor's house. The patch is planted with rice, and visitors to the national landmark walk along a narrow path at the edge.

Strangers

Except in Inner Mongolia, which gets up nearer to the Russians, we were able to walk about without guides.

The reaction of the people to us varied. Some smiled. Some looked the other way. Some fixed us with hostile stares.

Some Chinese on the streets cooperated when we asked to take their pictures. More waved us off, or just turned away. A guide said that particularly among some of the elderly, the idea lingers that when your picture is taken, some of your spirit goes into the photograph.

NATIONAL CAUSE — Billy Birdsong stands near the union notice welcoming his fellow employees at J.P. Stevens in Roanoke Rapids, N.C. Birdsong is a union man, the Amalgamated Clothing and Textile Workers' Union which represents the Roanoke workers — the first of Stevens' to be organized. Stevens' labor policies are a national issue, a national cause to some. There's a nationwide boycott of Stevens' products organized by the textile union.

Town divided; rift runs deep

Textile industry labor battle is centered in Roanoke Rapids

EDITOR'S NOTE — For the national labor movement, organizing the southern textile industry long has been a major objective. The battle is centered on Roanoke Rapids and the J.P. Stevens Co. But for the workers caught in the dispute, the issues are less sweeping and more immediate, and the rift runs deep.

ROANOKE RAPIDS, N.C. (AP) — Billy Birdsong joined the union because he didn't like the way the boss man was treating young Danny Cook. "I figured it could be me next," he says.

Wilson Lambert doesn't like the union and wants it kicked out of the mills, where he's worked for 35 years. The company, he says, has never done him wrong.

The Birdsongs and the Lamberts are the bottom line of a struggle that labor considers vital to efforts to organize the South, where new industries are proliferating, but where organized labor is lagging. Conversely, many southern business leaders see unions as a threat to the region's economy.

Billy Birdsong is 31. His father, now retired, was a foreman in the mills where his mother still works as a weaver. Billy started there 13 years ago.

Wilson Lambert is 57. He's a machinist, and he's worked in the mills for 35 years.

Billy Birdsong and Wilson Lambert, both employees of J.P. Stevens, both peas from the same southern pod, a generation apart. But the Wilson Lamberts don't talk much to the Billy Birdsongs these days. "It's like a football game," Lambert says. "If you're trying to beat the other side, you're not gonna be friendly to them."

The other side, to Wilson Lambert, is the Amalgamated Clothing and Textile Workers' Union. It represents the 3,000 workers at Stevens' seven Roanoke Rapids plants. Three years ago, by a vote of 1,685 to 1,448, they became the first of Stevens' 45,000 workers to be organized, but there is no contract and little movement toward one.

There is no strike and there probably won't be

Italian birds are getting 'itchy feet'

MILAN, Italy (AP) — City officials think they may have found a formula for ridding the artistic downtown area of pigeons.

After experiments with contraceptives, bans on tourists' feeding the birds, and attempts to capture and transfer them elsewhere, the experts have come up with a chemical that gives the pigeons itchy feet. A recent test of the British-made product "Scarecrow" on the cornices and eaves of Milan's Merchant Palace forced the pigeons to fly to other roosts in the city.

Municipal experts said a battle has been won, but several months more will be needed to extend the chemical campaign to other sections and prove its effectiveness. Even then, they say, other control methods will have to be combined with the itchy feet.

The Merchant Palace is an artistic building a few yards from the Gothic Cathedral Square. It and other monuments and buildings in the city have been subject to corrosion from the droppings of the pigeons.

The number of pigeons in Milan is estimated at 300,000 to 400,000, or one for every four inhabitants, a level termed intolerable by city officials both for the monuments and for the health of the people.

Professor Giorgio Persiani, head of the municipal veterinarian office, said short-term effects of "Scarecrow" proved good.

"Pigeons kept away from the Merchant Palace after the experiment with 'Scarecrow.' If it also works in the longer term, we would extend painting the chemicals to all municipal buildings and artistic monuments," he said.

He said a German-made contraceptive for birds, to be given once a year, and massive capture of birds and their transfer to distant areas, would be compulsory and parallel choices.

"The German product is especially good for reducing the number of the city pigeons as it can be given once a year, while previous contraceptives were needed every month, mixed with seed," the professor explained.

As far as transfer of pigeons was concerned, the professor recalled that authorities of a natural park south of Rome had announced its availability for housing pigeons expelled from the cities.

The pigeon problem is not in fact limited to Milan, but also involves the municipalities of Venice and Siena where pigeons are a major attraction for tourists and at the same time a major threat to the monuments.

MILL WORKER — A worker leaves a J. P. Stevens' textile plant in Roanoke Rapids, N.C., lint clinging to his clothes. The cotton dust and noise are points union organizers are using in its boycott literature.

one, because union leaders say Stevens would just shut the plants and go elsewhere.

But there is a nationwide boycott of Stevens' products, organized by the textile union and the AFL-CIO, with strong backing from civil rights organizations. It has been going on for a year, and the union maintains it will go on until the company ends actions that have led to a number of National Labor Relations Board and court decisions against Stevens. The company has been ordered to pay $1.3 million to workers held to have been laid off improperly.

Workers against the union say the boycott could cost their jobs.

Many business and civic leaders in textile towns agree. They contend the southward move of the textile industry over the past 50 years has brought prosperity and that the unions will bring inflation.

Whatever the reason — and the union claims it is threats by management to close plants and lay off workers — fewer than 10 percent of southern textile workers are organized.

Wilson Lambert and a number of other Stevens workers, most of them over 50, are trying to organize an election that would throw the union out of the plant. They call themselves the Education Committee.

Union members claim the Education Committee members, many nearing retirement, are scared and misled by management innuendoes that a stringent contract would lead to layoffs and possibly a shutdown.

Stevens had closed a number of its New England plants when it arrived in Roanoke Rapids on Jan. 11, 1956, to take over from the Simmons Co. the seven mills that ring the town like a horseshoe.

Stevens is the major employer, both in the city of 15,000 residents who are 90 percent white and in Halifax and Northampton counties where at least half the population is black.

Businessmen say Stevens has brought a lot to Roanoke Rapids.

Stevens management and people like Towe bristle at the union's boycott literature, which tends to make the plants sound like 19th-century sweatshops.

Union stalwarts show equal disdain for Stevens' self-portrayal as a benevolent modern employer, with clean plants and the most up-to-date equipment, wishing nothing but the best for its employees.

The company says it has raised wages an average of 7 percent to $3.98 an hour in Roanoke Rapids. The union puts the figure 30 cents below that, but there is little argument that textile workers are among the lowest-paid manufacturing workers in the United States.

There is a continuing dispute over the worth of the Stevens pensions. After the pension plan was revised, some recently retired workers get $20 a month — $2 for each of the last 10 years they worked. Those still working get that money plus $4 a month for each additional year they work.

Most also got cash settlements from the Simmons pension fund, as much as $12,000 for some, but that was 20 years ago and a lot of that money is gone now. Stevens has a profit-sharing plan, but union leaders claim it has been eaten up by inflation and bad investments.

Most mills are air-conditioned and have cafeterias, but the company says little can be done about the noise from the looms and the cotton dust, which can lead to brown lung disease. Many workers wear ear plugs and communicate by hand signals and by reading lips.

Billy Birdsong has quit the mills half a dozen times. He's back as a loom fixer at $5.17 an hour, the best-paying non-supervisory job.

Birdsong was hired after he quit school because his parents worked in the mill. He moved up even though, he says, there were people who had been sweeping the floor for 25 or 30 years who should have been offered promotions first.

"Most of 'em were black folks," he says. "In those days, if you had a dark suntan, you had trouble getting hired."

Wilson Lambert likes to talk about how expensive it is to live in areas where unions have a lot of influence. What bothers him most, though, is what's happened to Roanoke Rapids since the union came.

"It used to be I'd go down to the movie over 'round the corner and it'd be 'Hi Wilson, how're ya doin?' Now people don't speak to each other," he says. "It's just not the same."

VITAL TRACE

Dr. Michael K. Hambridge analyzes blood plasma for its zinc content, using a spectrophotometer in a University of Denver Medical School laboratory. After years of concentrating on vitamins, "now we are in the trace element era for nutrients," says Dr. Hambridge. And zinc is one of those essential elements needed in minute quantities by the human body — the average adult contains two to three grams of zinc, about the weight of two paper clips.

Zinc traces vital

Minerals needed in healthy body

EDITOR'S NOTE: That little bottle of pills on the breakfast table should contain more than vitamins, researchers say. Equally important are a number of minerals, like zinc.

By C.C. MINICLIER
Associated Press Writer

DENVER (AP) — Americans have been counting their vitamins since the early days of World War II, when Army doctors complained of puny and poorly developed draftees.

"For so many years we concetrated on vitamins,' says Dr. Michael K. Hambidge of the University of Colorado Medical School. "But now we are in the trace element era for nutrients."

Illustrative of the new emphasis on trace elements, named for their underepresentation in the body, is the research conducted on zinc.

Researchers say zinc may speed the healing of wounds, aid in fighting some diseases and even prevent the "blahs."

Human requirements have also been established for iron, iodine, copper, chromium, manganese and cobalt, Dr. Hambidge says.

"The fact that you can hardly see them has nothing to do with their biological effectiveness," says Dr. Bert Vallee of the Harvard Medical School.

For instance, the average 154-pound adult contains only two to three grams of zinc. There are 28.5 grams in an ounce.

Yet researchers say a zinc deficiency during pregnancy may result in congenital malformation of the embryo.

All the evidence isn't in yet. "An enormous amount of benefits have been claimed," says Dr. Vallee, one of the nation's leading zinc experts. "Not all are equally valid."

This past spring, Dr. Hambidge finished a study for Kelloggs on the effects of adding zinc to breakfast cereals. He concluded that it produces no ill effects.

Kelloggs has started adding zinc to some products, and it and General Mills list the zinc content of most of their cereals on the package.

The makers of two infant formulas, Similac and Enfamil, also began adding zinc after some of Dr. Hambidge's early findings.

Among the chief sources of zinc for humans are oysters, beef, liver, peanuts and lima beans.

But its level is borderline in many prepared foods, says Nancy Glick, a spokeswoman for the Food and Drug Administration, which includes zinc among its nutritional guidelines. She says tha' processing robs food of its natural zinc content.

Researchers at the University of Detroit School of Dentistry have found in tests on animals that zinc supplements speed the healing of surgical wounds and mending of fractures.

Speakers at a Fort Lauderdale, Fla., conference on zinc in health and disease agreed that there is accumulating evidence of some relationship between zinc and the body's ability to fight disease.

And Dr. Donald F. Caldwell, a psychologist at Wayne State University, has associated zinc deficiency with lethargy, apathy, unwillingness to learn and a general "blah" attitude.

Professor lives past

NEW YORK (AP) — Professor John Kouwenhoven gets that rare chance — to step back into time and "live" the history he once taught — thanks to the magic of television make-believe.

Dr. Kouwenhoven, professor emeritus of Barnard College, and an expert on American cultural history, was asked to serve as an advisor on the new fall television series of the Public Broadcasting Service, "The Best of Families."

Following the show's progress in person over a period of two years, he helped the producers at the Children's Television Workshop authenticate vital details of the 1880-1900 era treated in the dramatic series. The producers, in turn, drafted him as an actor. It's not a big role, but he will play a preacher in a brief but poignant scene at an 1883 wedding.

"My acting debut was kind of a joke," he laughs. "I think that Ethel Winant, the series' executive producer, thought that I had been hanging around the set for so long that it would be fun to get my face into the show like Hitchcock does in his movies. I play a minister and my line is predictable, 'Who giveth this woman to marry this man?'"

Ephemera is 'wastebasket' archeology, not just trash

EDITOR'S NOTE — For years, parents have saved kids' recital programs and report cards and paper doily Valentines. Vacationers save travel brochures, diners collect matchbooks. Saving paper pasts has a name, and if you're serious enough about what you save, you might qualify for membership in a recently formed society for savers.

By GEORGE ESPER
Associated Press Writer

BENNINGTON, Vt. (AP) — Uh, hold it.

Don't throw this away.

Save it.

This is ephemera.

You could be an ephemerist but don't know it.

At the recent "This Is Ephemera" exhibition at the Bennington Museum, people came out of curiosity then commented:

"I thought it was a disease."

"I throw that junk out."

"That's trash."

That's right.

Ephemera is wastebasket archeology, the collecting of printed or hand written material meant to be thrown away.

"The whole field," says Calvin P. Otto, "is intended to be those things which man normally does not keep."

Product labels, bills, greeting cards, ticket stubs, menus, newspapers, posters, parking tickets, tour guides, honorary certificates, promotional material, to name a few.

Why would anyone keep them?

"Why does man keep anything in the sense of a historic nature," Otto responds. "What we're really trying to preserve and what in fact has been preserved are historic records in print. It's a copy of that part of society."

Otto became an ephemerist when he quit being a philatelist — stamps are in a class by themselves. Now he is one of eight founding fathers of the two-year old Ephemera Society and chairman of its North American office headquartered in Bennington.

"If you're a collector, you're probably an ephemerist but don't know it by its name," he says.

Otto, 47, is the president of the Wood Fong Corp., of nearby Hoosick Falls, N.Y. His company, which makes wood fiber board used by newspapers in making the curved, one-piece plates necessary in letter press printing, also has a plant in England.

A few years back, Otto was ephemerizing in a market in London. A friend introduced him to Maurice Rickards, an Englishman who has written 23 books on ephemera, including the interpretation of World War I through posters, which were a strong propaganda medium.

"It just happened to be a circumstance that we met one another and one thing led to another. We realized each other's interests and the next thing you know a society is born," Otto said.

Of the eight founders, Otto is the only American. The others are Englishmen, all professionals in graphic arts or design. The society's president is Sir John Betjeman, poet laureate of England.

"We didn't know whether we were the only eight humans in the world who cared or not, but we now have well over 350 members and are growing very rapidly," Otto said.

"The society's basic purpose is to get together people who do collect to help preserve material, to help others to interpret it ... To the majority of the people, if they run into grandma's old trunk or the company archives, it's trash. It heads for the fireplace. That's what we're trying to stop."

Otto says he uses ephemera "as an escape mechanism to allow your mind to do something different than your normal work."

"The collecting of ephemera is a great deal in my mind like prospecting for gold. The fun is in the search. Searching and then putting together a collection of things regardless of what they are that you can then enjoy both visually and historically."

Otto has between 3,000 and 4,000 items in his collection of ephemera, including advertising cards, receipts from steamship companies, posters and old newspapers. His personal collection ends about 1920.

His two most prized possessions are the Oxford Gazette of 1665, the first English language newspaper that was produced as a regular newspaper, and a poster from Italy dating back to 1630 that warned of plague in an Italian town.

EPHEMERA — Other people might have thrown all this away. Calvin Otto, at home in Bennington, Vt., displays what to him is prime ephemera. Otto, who defines ephemera as those things which man normally does not keep but which have value as historic records, is one of the founders of the Ephemera Society.

An orphan of Sonora Desert

Poet-philosopher 'guides' tourists in Mexican ruins

VILLA HERMOSA, Mexico (AP) — Sooner or later a visitor to this tropical capital of the state of Tabasco will come across Raul O. Mendoza.

Raul is a tourist guide who has been leading travelers and scholars in and out of Olmec and Mayan ruins in the nearby jungle for 22 years.

But Raul is more than a tourist guide. He is part Yaqui Indian, an orphan of the Sonora Desert in northern Mexico who has developed a personal, mystical view of life through his contact with jungle trails, ancient ruins and the archeologists who visit them.

Many of his ideas come from nightly meditation in view of the stars which shine down on his penthouse apartment atop the battered San Rafael Hotel in the center of town.

Raul is 56 years old, 6 feet tall, husky and bearded. When he smiles, his white teeth shine like the sun and he looks 20 years younger.

He calls himself "the wandering man" or "the child of the sun." He says local residents call him the "white witch" because he does good and no harm.

His philosophy is based on a belief that life is a

Sudden windfall for LA. shareholders

LOS ANGELES (AP) — Things are going better for the shareholders of Coca-Cola Bottling Company of Los Angeles — the value of their stock has shot up more than 60 per cent in two weeks.

L.A. Coke is a solidly profitable company but it hasn't discovered oil under a bottling plant. Instead, its shareholders are the beneficiaries of a wave of tender offers currently enlivening a depressed stock market.

Tender offers, in which one company offers to buy out the shareholders of another, are an esoteric area of corporate finance involving millions of dollars and hard-fought court battles. Although the action takes place in brokerage houses and boardrooms, tenders can provide a sudden windfall for investors, as in the case of Coca-Cola.

L.A. Coke stock, which was trading in the low 20s two weeks ago, jumped to $30 a share last week after MCA, Inc. announced a tender offer at that price Oct. 7. L.A. Coke's management contested the entertainment conglomerate's takeover bid in court, but later said they were in favor of an offer by Northwest Industries at $40 a share.

Because of the short-lived bidding war, an investor who bought L.A. Coke stock only two weeks ago has seen it soar from $24 or $25 a share to its current level of $40, a hefty — and rare — profit.

"Mergers and acquisitions are the only thing going on in the stock market these days," says Ron Fox, a broker with Drexel Burnham Lambert here. "As the prices of these securities are coming down, the asset value of the corporations are becoming more realistic and therefore they are more prone to takeover bids."

As measured by the Dow Jones Indstrial Average, the stock market is drooping along at a two-year low. In the last 10 months, the 30-stock average has tumbled from about 1,000 to the low 800s. Some stocks swim against the tide but most don't, and their low prices have made companies attractive to other corporate buyers.

W.T. Grimm, a Chicago consulting firm, says there were 20 mergers or acquisitions involving $100 million or more in the first half of the year, compared to only 12 in the first six months of 1976.

"The market has been rather depressed the whole year, so you can probably acquire a company at a bargain price," explains Miss T. Simick, a Grimm research analyst.

MCA, flush with cash from "Jaws" and other entertainment ventures, clearly saw an opportunity to expand into areas already tapped by competitors. Twentieth Century-Fox controls Coca-Cola Bottling Company Midwest of St. Paul, Minn., and General Cinema bottles Pepsi and Seven-Up. A tender offer for the L.A. bottler, which markets Coke and other soft drinks in the West, was the quickest way to do it.

The purpose of a tender offer "is for the tenderor to gain control of the tenderee in a very quick manner without having extended negotiations with the target company's management," says Robert Rifkind, an attorney who has participated in numerous takeover battles. "In a tender situation, the management of the target company is generally unfriendly and would not agree to a negotiated acquisition."

L.A. Coke's management was definitely unfriendly. The company urged its shareholders to reject MCA's offer as inadequate and accused the entertainment firm of violating securities laws in connection with the tender. Meanwhile, L.A. Coke was looking for what Rifkind calls "the white knight."

"Many target companies escape the clutches of tenderor by being acquired by a third company," he says. "The point going for the third-party tenderor, which we usually refer to as 'the white knight,' is that management of the target company is cooperative and friendly."

L.A. Coke found its white knight in Northwest Industries, a Chicago firm whose consumer products group accounted for 40 per cent of its $1.6 billion in 1976 sales. Northwest, which has interests in steel, chemicals and various consumer products, topped MCA's bid with an offer of $40 a share.

Those who bought stock in L.A. Coke before the original tender offer weren't the only ones to benefit from the bidding contest. In the week between the MCA and Northwest offers, more than 25 per cent of L.A. Coke's 4.3 million outstanding shares changed hands, with most of the buying coming from arbitraters, highly sophisticated stock traders whose profits come from guessing right on tenders.

"Basically," says Rifkind, "the arbitrager is an investor, usually an investment banker, who is willing to buy the stock of the target company in large quantities in the hope that the tender offer will be successful or that a white knight will come along and make a topping offer."

Arbitragers, says Rifkind, "buy many thousands of shares, sometimes hundreds of thousands, and can afford to buy at just a little under the tender price and make a small profit on each share but a large profit overall because they own so many shares."

Such traders are "the catalyst which makes the normal tender offer successful," says Rifkind, because they can be counted on to sell to the highest bidder. Arbitragers "are always unsentimental about the stocks they own," he notes, and have no interest in the company except for the price of its stock.

never-ending source of energy which comes from the sun. He advocates "love and peace for everyone."

Raul believes in the power of colors to heal the sick and he often visits the local hospital to apply colored ribbons to the patients.

He has heard that the Yaqui Indians in northern Mexico also experiment with colors and see the light of life, but they use peyote and other drugs to practice witchcraft. "I think the drugs damage the brain. I would never use them," he says.

A visitor looking for a guide can usually find Raul at his hotel or at the La Venta Museum, an outdoor collection of ancient Olmec ruins, including a giant, 20-ton stone head.

His tour of the museum is a mixture of scholarly information he acquired while attending a two-year guide school at the University of Mexico in Mexico City and Raul's personal interpretations.

He is an unorthodox guide, but enchanting. No one can spend a day with Raul and walk away unaffected by this original Mexican philosopher.

Raul says he was born in the Sonora Desert and is part Yaqui Indian. He doesn't remember his parents, was raised for a time by his grandmother.

One day he ran away, never to return. His wanderings took him to the sea, where he spent 14 years aboard a Norwegian freighter.

Raul has written many of his thoughts in free verse.

Despite government efforts to suppress it

Soviet 'dissident' movement marks 10 years of survival

By THOMAS KENT
Associated Press Writer

MOSCOW (AP) — "The Chronicle of Current Events" — a crudely duplicated, secretly distributed journal of the Soviet dissident movement — is marking its 10th year of survival despite efforts to suppress it.

Police dragnets and infiltration campaigns have led over the years to the arrest of several Chronicle editors and distributors. But the typewritten journal, like the dissident movement itself, has never been snuffed out. Its editorial board — size and location unknown — is quickly replenished following the arrest of any member.

The Chronicle's latest issue, emblazoned "10th Year of Publication," began to be slipped hand-to-hand among readers just a few weeks ago. It totals 115 pages of closely typed onionskin paper, designed to be recopied by readers for further clandestine distribution around the country.

Each issue is bound in plain white paper to appear as inconspicous as possible.

"Just a few copies of the journal are made originally and then the Chronicle relies on readers to spread it further," says one Soviet dissident familiar with the journal's distribution. "For that reason, no one knows just how many copies are finally made of each issue. But it certainly is many hundreds."

The latest issue of the Chronicle, like most others, contains news of dissident activities and alleged Soviet government misdeeds from scores of Soviet cities, villages and labor camps.

Items include stories about a Lithuanian priest who was blocked by officials from publicizing a forthcoming Mass; the cousin of a Ukrainian dissident allegedly taken off a train by police and interrogated about his relative's dissident activity; a young man in the Crimea whose efforts to leave the Soviet Union are being blocked; and the punishment of dissident prisoners who conducted a hunger strike in Mordovia.

Each report is in the dry, terse style traditional of the Chronicle, without editorial comment. Some reports are lengthy an legalistic. Even small errors in the Chronicle's reporting are painstakingly corrected in subsequent issues.

The Chronicle uses an extensive network of volunteer correspondents, who are warned by the journal itself not to try to find out too much about the publication they are reporting to.

"Tell (your news) to the person from whom you received the Chronicle," the journal instructed in one issue. "He will pass it on to the one from whom he received it, etc. Only do not try to pass through this whole chain directly yourself, so as not to become a suspected (police) informer."

The Chronicle first appeared April 30, 1968, and now comes out about five times a year.

Dissidents accused of involvement in its publication or distribution have included poet Natalya Gorbanevskay, sent to a mental hospital shortly after the first issue came out; Vladimir Nekipelov and Sergei Peragov, sentenced to two and three years' imprisonment respectively in 1974; and Sergei Kovalev, sentenced to seven years' imprisonment in 1975.

Dissident sources say KGB security police interrogators are continuing their efforts to destroy the journal and have even asked dissidents they question to bring them the latest issues. But the police pressure stopped publication only once, for 18 months in 1973-74, despite a reported Communist party decision at the end of 1971 to bend every effort to stamp out the Chronicle.

Ballad origins

The term "ballad" originated in medieval England. Although the word is currently used to denote romantic and often sentimental narrative songs, the first ballads were dancing songs.

Treating ills

Project uses old remedies

NEW DELHI, India (AP) — In an unusual project joining Western and traditional medicine, doctors in south India are searching for a treatment for rheumatoid arthritis using herbal medicines, oils and pastes prescribed by ancient Hindi scriptures.

The World Health Organization (WHO), which is conducting the four-year project, says the initial results are encouraging.

"Since the project began, we've had about 20 cases of rheumatoid under study. Two have been cured and most of the others are showing good improvement," Dr. Purshottam Diesh, the WHO project director, said in an interview.

The project, being conducted jointly with the Indian Council of Medical Research, is being run in Coimbatore, a city in southern India, at a clinic specializing in a branch of traditional Indian medicine called ayurveda.

Ayurveda, a Hindi word meaning science of life, is based on the holy Hindu scriptures called Vedas and has been practiced on the Asian subcontinent for more than 3,000 years.

According to Diesh, ayurvedic medicine does not isolate and treat a particular ailment the way Western medicine does. Rather it seeks to treat the ailing body as a system somehow out of balance.

In the case of rheumatoid arthritis, the painful stiffening and inflammation of joints, muscles and tissues is seen by ayurvedic medicine as being caused by an imbalance in the body's metabolism.

The system imbalance in the arthritis sufferer may have been brought on by anything from grief or shock to overexertion or poor eating habits.

Diesh said Western doctors have been aware for years that certain ayurvedic cures practiced for centuries in Asia do relieve arthritis symptoms, sometimes permanently. But never before has modern science sought to scientifically analyze ayurvedic remedies for arthritis sufferers.

At the Ayurvedic Trust Hospital in Coimbatore, which uses herbs gathered by peasants from a nearby mountain range, a patient is first examined by both modern and ayurvedic doctors before treatment begins, Diesh said.

If the diagnosis is rheumatoid arthritis, an ayurvedic treatment begins consisting of cleansing baths, herbs taken internally, massages with herbal potions and oils, and other physiotherapy, all designed to restore the entire body to its proper balance.

The project is being confined to a limited number of cases, taken on both an in-patient basis and out-patient basis. Cases of severe deformities brought on by later stages of the disease are not being considered because of their low possibility of cure.

There are no accurate estimates of how many Indians suffer rheumatoid arthritis nor how many people throughout the world are slowed, crippled or killed by its treachery, Diesh said. But guesses run into the tens of millions, he said.

Exhibit of Peruvian gold major art event

NEW YORK (AP) — "Peru's Golden Treasures" is an exhibition of great riches — with the fabulous metal's face value only one among its precious qualities.

The exhibition was designed by the American Museum of Natural History here, where it will be until the end of the year. Then it will be shown in Chicago, San Francisco and Detroit.

The show is a major art event — 225 of the finest examples of ancient Peruvian gold from the famous Museo Oro del Peru, in Lima, the largest display of Peruvian gold ever seen in this country.

The wonders it encompasses range from a gold spider you could hide in the palm of your hand to a showy poncho made of about 13,000 airy little gold plaques sewn together. There are designs showing fierce warriors or playful animals, as well as those based on geometric abstractions. There are elegantly simple shawl pins, and there are elaborate royal crowns.

Ironically, most of these items were made not to be used but to be buried, as funerary objects, yet they still say much about everyday life, about the customs and habits of the people of those little-known cultures, up to 2,000 years ago.

For example, beautiful, crescent-shaped tweezers, some decorative enough to have been worn as pendants, indicate the method of "shaving" used by this lightly-haired people. A ceramic included in the New York installation depicts a man using his tweezers to pluck hair from his chin and holding a polished stone mirror — there's one in the same case.

These exhibits have special meaning in other ways. They are extremely rare, a tiny sampling in existence today that can only hint at treasures that are lost forever. For when the Spanish conquistadors arrived in 1532 they took all the gold, primarily Inca, they could lay their hands on and melted it down for easier shipment out, without regard for its beauty, craftsmanship or any value other than as wealth.

Most of the gold in the show is from pre-Inca times, gold which was overlooked because it was buried in tombs around the country. The Spanish rifled tombs, too, but they didn't find all the gold.

Another irony: although the Spanish so predominantly valued the gold in terms of money, the ancient Peruvians never made gold into money at all. They didn't use money, in fact, probably exchanging work for goods.

Gold to them was a symbol of power, of the sun god they worshipped, a substance of light and beauty, easy to work. Some of their gold objects were painted over, or covered with feathers, jewels or other metals: the fact that objects were gold gave them an instrinsic significance and the gold itself didn't always have to show.

Physically, the exhibition doesn't cover much ground. It's compact and easy to get around. Objects are simply and spaciously shown on backgrounds color-keyed to the four main pre-Inca periods, covering a span of 2,000 years. While the show is in New York it includes some rare items from the Museum of Natural History's collections — ceramics, priceless embroideries and other contemporary items.

Master baker's life is 'bread'

PARIS (AP) — In a country where everyone eats his own weight in bread yearly, Bernard Ganachaud is in a very tough position. He's a master baker, a French artist in dough fighting an uphill battle against the philistines of mass production.

"Bread is life itself," he said in an interview in his oak-beamed bakery in northeast Paris the other day. "It represents all the trials of my youth, all the suffering it took to learn the profession."

Ganachaud, who began baking at his father's side 39 years ago at the age of 8, added, "You have to have a love both of bread and the craft of making it, not just a love of money. Otherwise, you should be in a factory turning out bread by mass production.

"An artisan, a true craftsman, must be available permanently to show his apprentices by his own example what must be done. He can't accept the least imperfection in making bread. It would be a catastrophe."

There are 112,000 bakers in France; 42,000 of them are certified makers and most have their own shops. There are also about 100 big industrial bakeries in France, and their operations are expanding constantly.

Ganachaud said the quality of bread is threatened by the giant bakeries and supermarkets that stock their packaged loaves, but that the small shopkeeper must survive because only he can cater to the trice-daily French need for "warm, blond and crusty bread."

Ganachuad led a visitor to a tray of steaming croissants, picked up one of the golden brown, crescent-shaped rolls and pulled it slowly in two. "Look how flaky and airy it is," he said. "If a customer eats one of these, a second isn't necessary. How can factories compete with this?

"They can't, mainly because of distribution problems," he said, answering his own question. "Their trucks get bogged down in traffic and can't deliver morning, noon and night when the French want their bread, and want it hot and fresh. They also can't provide the variety of tastes an artisan can."

"If bread is made from wholesome, natural ingredients and well prepared it's good for your health," Ganachaud remarked as he passed his medieval-style, wood-fired stone ovens that bake at a slow, gentle heat in full view of customers. "A big problem is that many doctors advise against eating bread. They denigrate it.

"Another problem is recruiting qualified help. It's getting harder and harder to find good bakers. Nowadays there's too much emphasis on the intellectual side of baking, the theory of it, rather than the practical side, the technique itself."

Ganachaud said he and his helpers prepare their dough in the evening using only natural leavening, put it in refrigerators to retard the fermentation process, fire their furnaces with oak or pine, and bake in the morning.

"We do nothing to hasten fermentation process," Ganachaud said of the 30 types of bread he makes. "Some of the industrial bakeries speed it up to three hours. Here it's six hours. Everything is slow and natural and our bread tastes better and lasts longer."

Ganachaud gained his master's title at the age of 20 in Brittany, where his father Jean had a bakery. He originally wanted to be a lawyer but baker's hours made study impossible. At the age of 25, with his bride Josette, he opened a shop in Tours.

Five years later he had saved enough to buy a bakery in the French capital, and in the next 17 years he bought surrounding property, tripling the size of the original establishment.

He also gained the rare distinction of becoming a Chevalier of the Order of Good Bread.

New 24-exposure film to appear soon on market

By IRVING DESFOR
AP Newsfeatures

Be prepared to accept 24-exposure rolls of Kodacolor 400 and Kodacolor II films. It's a new film length that will eventually replace the present 20-exposure roll size in these two films only. The 36-exposure roll will continue unchanged. The change to the 24-exposure roll has already been under way in Japan and in some Europen countries and it reflects what photographers prefer, according to Kodak officials.

A convenient low-cost "Rechargeable Battery System" for popular-size batteries is now available from General Electric. They are introducing nickel-cadmium batteries in four commonly used sizes along with a miniature modular charger that accepts all of them for recharging. With the proper modular accessory, the batteries are capable of being recharged up to 1,000 times for convenient overnight re-use.

The rechargeable nickel-cadmium batteries come in pairs of AA, C and D sizes and a single 9-volt size. These are the sizes used in still and movie cameras, flash units and in other home and office gadgets like calculators, transistor radios, tape recorders and toys.

Individual modules hold each size of battery in pairs of AA, C and D or a single 9-volt size. Each module can be snapped onto one miniature BC-3 charger unit, plugged into an electric socket and the batteries they hold can be brought to full power in from 12 to 16 hours. GE estimates that it costs less than a nickel to recharge one of their D batteries 200 times.

The new rechargeable battery system is the result of modern engineering technology which has miniaturized bulkier and more expensive units to make them compact and economical. Now you buy the components you need in the size you need and stop throwing dead batteries away.

Nickel-cadmium batteries do not deteriorate when not used nor are they harmed by being left on charge indefinitely, according to GE engineers.

The rechargeable battery system seems to offer the advantages of long-term convenience and low-cost maintenance for the ever-increasing number of battery-powered gadgets being offered for photography, home and office use. For further information, write: GE Rechargeable Batteries, Box 992, Gainesville, Fla. 32602.

A simple way to mount photos in albums is being offered with "Foto-Mount," a new type of adhesive tape. It comes in half-inch-wide rolls which resemble other adhesive tapes. It differs in application.

When "Foto-Mount" is pressed down firmly on the back of a photo and the backing paper is removed, it leaves behind a strip of adhesive. The photo can then be placed anywhere on a smooth surface and it will remain in place indefinitely. However, the photo can be removed easily at any time and placed elsewhere without tearing or struggle. And whenever you wish, you can lift the photo and remove the adhesive by rubbing your finger over it. It peels away like a thin layer of dried rubber cement.

Are you tired of simple things and pinching pennies and being practical? How about splurging $14,200 on one lens? Then you could shoot candid pictures on a moonlight night by available light at an exposure of 1-500th of a second on ASA 400 film. Or, if there is no moon and you had to shoot by starlight, you could get pictures at ¼th of a second.

Yes, there is such a lens and it's available in the United States now. Just ask for the Zeiss N-Mirotar lens. You'll also have to get a Contax-RTS 35mm camera from a Yashica dealer to go with it. That's extra, of course.

How does the $14,200 lens work? It consists of three essential parts: a wide aperture catadioptric (mirror) lens, a three-stage image amplifier tube, and a wide aperture macro lens.

The mirror lens forms an image of the night scene being photographed on the photocathode of the image-intensifier tube. The tube intensifies the brilliance of the image 80,000 times, and projects the intensified image onto a screen from which it is picked up by the macro lens and transmitted to the film plane of the camera.

Ornithologist surrounds himself with life's work

By MAUREEN CONNOLLY
Associated Press Writer

WAYNE, Maine (AP) — Ornithologist Olin Sewall Pettingill Jr. surrounds himself with his work, in a house filled with pictures and books of the birds he has spent half a century studying, writing about and photographing.

The former director of Cornell University's ornithology laboratory and wildlife filmmaker for Walt Disney is the noted author of books that have helped students and amateur bird watchers for years.

Pettingill, who is 69, has a comfortable, Victorian-era house by the water in this lakeside community. Outside, there is little indication of his life-long devotion to birds. But inside, the walls, floors and furniture are covered with paintings and small wooden and procelain sculptures of birds. Eagles grace a rug, an owl mobile hangs in the kitchen and ducks are imprinted on light switches and lampshades.

He laughs telling visitors how as youngsters, his two daughters complained they were tired of seeing only birds throughout the house, and asked their parents to consider another decorating scheme.

Pettingill, called Sewall by friends, recently completed a revision of his popular Guide to Bird Finding East of the Mississippi, first published in 1951, and is rewriting his similar Western handbook.

The books tell bird watchers the best spots to find certain species.

"When I wrote those books, I had no idea that in 25 years I would be doing it all over. There have been appalling changes in bird life and the environment. Many fine areas for birds are gone," he said.

After learning that prime sites named in his earlier books have become highways and shopping centers, Pettingill's new books will focus more on sanctuaries and public areas that he hopes will remain untouched for some time.

His films of penguins attracted the attention of Walt Disney, then starting his True Life Adventure series. He called on Pettingill for a film on penguins and later for several other wildlife films.

Pettingill made the penguin movie on the Falkland Islands, 300 miles off the southern tip of South America. He has made several trips to the Falklands since to photograph the penguin.

His wife, Eleanor Rice Pettingill, who died earlier this year, described a Falkland visit in her book, "A Penguin Summer." She was her husband's companion and helper throughout his career.

Although he claims no favorite bird, Pettingill likes seabirds, the penguin, puffin and albatross, and birds of the prairie, especially the American woodcock. "Seabirds stir my excitement," he said.

He keeps no live birds at his house, but has boxes for tree swallows and several feeders at his nearby summer house. He said he likes watching birds feed by his window while he has breakfast or lunch.

"Birds are very useful in a number of ways," he said. "They are monitors of the environment. They are with us where ever we go, except for the far reaches of the artic, and sometimes, the midocean."

Old forge is coming back

WASHINGTON (AP) — There's renewed interest in the old craft of blacksmithing, according to the National Geographic Society.

It points out, however, that the emphasis nowadays is on fine craftwork and not on horseshoes.

Pilots, business people, doctors and scientists are among those taking up the challenge of turning a chunk of iron into a thing of beauty, it says. In addition, more universities and art schools are offering courses in blacksmithing, and wrought iron objects are turning up in art galleries.

Liz revisited: cast in new role as political wife on farm

By JURATE KAZICKAS
Associated Press Writer

WASHINGTON (AP) — These days her life is as much corn on the cob as caviar, political scenarios instead of movie scripts, a tractor alongside the limousine.

Elizabeth Taylor says that suits her just fine.

Gone are her personal hairdresser, trunks of clothes and private jets. Now when she travels it might be by bus or commercial airliner — economy class — with an overnight bag stuffed with jeans and electric haircurlers.

Elizabeth Taylor's stage is the Virginia countryside, not Hollywood. Her role: political wife. The co-star and occasional director is husband John W. Warner.

Warner, a former secretary of the Navy and onetime head of the American Bicentennial Administration, wants to become a Republican senator from Virginia in the 1978 election. He has taken his famous bride of 10 months on a blitz of the state, logging more than 14,000 miles appearing several times a week at fairs, barbecues, rallies and fund raisers.

Almost everywhere they go, the crowd is a record turnout. Elizabeth Taylor Warner obliges her adoring fans with a flash of her legendary amethyst eyes and rosy-lipped smile.

"Liz has brought the role of political wife out of obscurity and into the forefront," Warner says, beaming with pride.

For those who remember Elizabeth Taylor as a movie queen in diamonds and ermine, it's incongruous to see photos of her riding in a pick-up truck or on a tractor, calling to the cattle on her husband's farm, mingling with the folks at dozens of small town receptions.

"There's no way I'd be doing this if I didn't believe in it," says Mrs. Warner. "In acting, you're so closeted and protected. This is so much more one to one. You're not playing a role in politics, you're dealing with real life issues."

The Warners were honored guests at the Old Time Fiddler's Convention, and despite an attack of bursitis and back problems that put her into a wheelchair, in the truest tradition of "the show must go on," Mrs. Warner insisted on keeping the engagement.

She tottered to the microphone, her eyes glistening with tears of pain as she held her smile for the cameras. Then a power failure forced her to wait a pain-wracked hour before she could finish her speech.

Two days later, Elizabeth Taylor Warner entered a hospital in Washington and was put into traction for a week.

"She would have kept right on going, but I just had to ground her," says Warner.

The Warners met on a blind date for a party for Queen Elizabeth II given at the British Embassy in Washington last year. Warner, now 50, had been divorced for three years from his first wife, Cathy Mellon, and Miss Taylor was single again after six marriages. They courted on weekends between New York, where she was finishing a movie, and Warner's 2,000-acre farm in Middleburg, Va.

Warner was doing some campaigning for Gerald Ford and Miss Taylor asked if she could join him.

"It was a new experience for her," said Warner. "She had been on the fringes of the Carter campaign and really did not have a background in partisan politics. We had a lot of fun together and when I saw people's reactions to her, I realized we had an interesting team relationship."

Shortly after their marriage in December, they began their campaign.

"I told her if we're going together into the public arena, we must share it."

"You have to believe in what you're doing," she says. "People detect it very quickly if you are a phony. You have to care about people."

If Warner gets past the Republican convention next June and makes it to the Senate, Mrs. Warner could be an interesting political wife. She's already said she is enthusiastic about the Equal Rights Amendment despite her husband's reservations.

And when he expressed doubt that she could make a contribution to foreign policy or defense strategy, Mrs. Warner shot him a stern look and said: "There's no reason why a woman can't know as much about defense as a man, no reason at all. It's all in the training."

NEW ROLE FOR LIZ — Elizabeth Taylor Warner, plagued with back trouble, is helped out of a helicopter by her husband, John Warner, at home in Middleburgh, Va., recently. The Warners were giving a country supper there for the Republican candidate for governor. Since her marriage, Mrs. Warner has embraced a new role on a new stage — that of political wife in Virginia, where her co-star, her husband, aspires to the Republican Senate seat.

Refurbishing their own rooms

Teen-age decorators can wax creative, and it helps

By VIVIAN BROWN
AP Newsfeatures

Young people may come up with some creative ideas when they are given the opportunity to refurbish their own rooms. In any event, it will improve their dispositions, two mothers have learned.

One parent provided a sum that was far less than the investment she might have made in her 17-year-old daughter's room. "And I would not have been able to inject so much personality into it," she said.

Another mother indulged her 15-year-old son. He was restless and unhappy with all the castoffs he had been living with, and wanted to do it himself. She was hesitant, but now says "I was truly amazed that he could do this in such a mature way and that it cost so little."

Both parents recommend the idea, not only because it puts youngsters on their own, and makes them feel as if they have accomplished something, but because they work better in surroundings they enjoy.

Daughter kept her studio-lounge bed (it was two years old) but she moved it from its place along the wall so that she could put a headboard on the wall. She painted a length of picket fence white, and put it behind the bed to serve as a headboard.

Two ice cream chairs bought at a tag sale for $9 and then painted white were used in the corner of a room with a wire spool from a building supply store that made a very good table. She covered the table in a plain white fabric and stenciled little flowers to its border. She did the same thing at the windows where she used some old white sheets as curtains.

The walls were painted vivid pink and the molding white. In the corner with her little patio grouping, she put a large poster of a waterfall. In another area there was an environmental poster showing mountains and streams.

Her red rug went very well with the vivid pink and white room scheme. She had also painted her old chest of drawers the same pink as the walls which gave it a nice fresh appearance.

The mother of the male decorator was surprised that he pitched into it with "such gusto." She thought that the agreement to provide funds would be a starter and then after that she would be spending additional money for the things he really wanted. But, no.

He retained his brown rug, and kept a buff color on the walls. A rug that he found at the dump was cleaned and put on one wall and below it was a long free-form barn board that he also found at the dump. He attached it with angle irons to the wall, strong enough to hold his stereo system. A minijungle of green plants — nine or so, in every size — was created by putting the greenery around the room on high and low tiers of cinder blocks that he found about the house outdoors. It gave the room a cool, refreshing look.

The bureau was discarded. In place of it he stacked heavy boxes he had obtained from the local liquor store. He painted them shiny brown and used the bins for clothing and all sorts of things. Each box was attached to another with four screws used in the corners of the boxes.

One good purchase was a draftsman's table that was put in the area formerly occupied by the bureau. It is a good place to do homework and it would be useful when he begins studying for his chosen career, architecture, he told his mother.

Japanese turn to U.S. cars

By NAOAKI USUI

TOKYO (AP) — Japan may be known for its compact cars, but there is one field here where big American vehicles dominate. This is the reikyusha, or "soul forever" car used as a hearse and complete with a built-in, Buddhist-style temple to hold the casket.

"Engine output, size and dignity make us use the full-size American cars," said Kiyoshi Yoshikura, director in charge of vehicles for one company in Tokyo, in an interview.

"Japanese cars are too small to carry caskets as long as 7 feet," he said, "and the temple itself weighs at least 1,100 pounds. American cars with their bigger space are much easier to operate."

Yoshikura's company owns 12 American funeral coaches. Mechanics cut away the rear section of the body to install the heavy, decorated temple structure. Each temple is made of select Japanese cyprus wood, its walls and ceilings covered with silken cloth. The floor is of tatami, the traditional Japanese straw matting. Each costs $27,000 to $34,500.

The reikyu-sha leads the funeral procession to the site of the service, to the crematory, the cemetery and then back to the home of the deceased. Each of Yoshikura's 12 American cars is used an average of 47 times a month. The trip usually covers about 16 miles and costs 18,000 yen (about $68.)

It is "a very modest fare, set by government regulations," Yoshikura said.

Driving the soul forever car is a difficult task in Japanese traffic and on narrow Japanese streets.

"You have to be very careful not to make a sharp turn, which happens frequently in Tokyo," Yoshikura, the son of an undertaker, said. "The car is top-heavy and may capsize if banked more than 49 degrees."

The first motorized reikyusha in Japan appeared in 1923 when a Tokyo undertaker converted a Model-T Ford into a funeral vehicle complete with Buddhist temple, Yoshikura said. Before that the temple cart was pulled by animals, usually cows. And before that the pot-shaped caskets then in use were placed in a temple-like structure carried on human shoulders. shoulders.

Mystery of Lady Lindy . . .

By RANDOLPH SCHMID
Associated Press Writer

WASHINGTON (AP) — The mystery of the Lady Lindy has jogged back into American thoughts this year with historians recalling the disappearance 40 years ago of Amelia Earhart.

Hundreds of thousands of people have viewed a summerlong exhibition of Earhart memorabilia at the National Air and Space Museum.

And still no one really knows what happened over the bleak Pacific Ocean that night in 1937 when the pioneer aviatrix and her navigator vanished.

It was her second try to fly around the world near the equator, something never before accomplished. All previous flights around the world had followed northerly routes, shorter and over more populated areas.

And, having started from Oakland, Calif., on June 1, 1937 she had gone more than 22,000 miles before being lost, the night of July 1-2, between Lae and Howland Island.

The 18-day search covering 265,000 square miles of ocean turned up nothing, and Miss Earhart and navigator Fred Noonan were listed as lost at sea.

But rumors began almost immediately that she had been on a secret spy mission to look at Japanese island fortifications and was captured.

No U.S. government documents exist to document such a theory, and no evidence of such a capture has ever been found. But rumors persist about native stories that a white man and woman were held prisoner by the Japanese and later died in prison.

But J. Gordon Vaeth of the National Environmental Satellite Service, who spent three years studying her disappearance, concluded in a recently published article:

"My own conclusion is that there is no hard evidence of any kind — to support a finding other than that the Electra simply ran out of gas and the pilot and navigator were lost at sea."

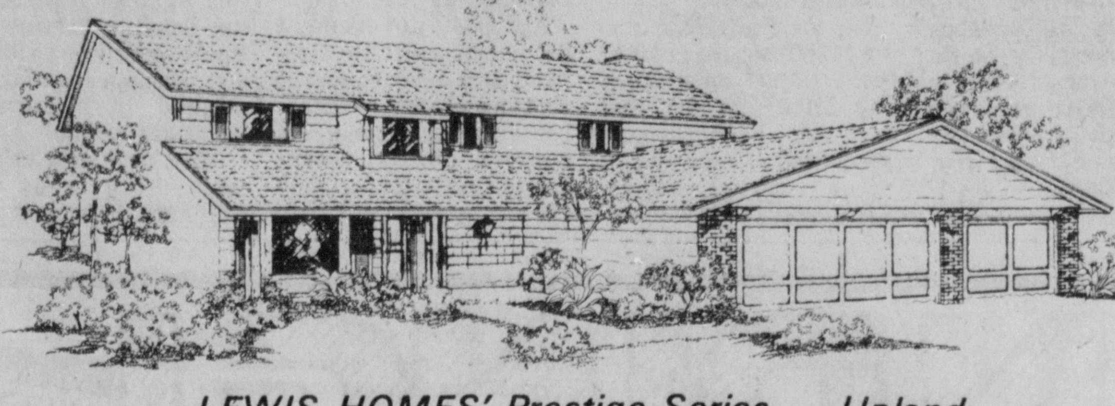
Prestige Series now under construction

Prestige. To Daniel Webster the word means having or showing success, rank or wealth. "Precisely what we were aiming for," agrees Richard A. Lewis, president of Lewis Homes and developer of the Prestige Series homes now under construction.

Prestigious, for example, is Plan 455; a five-bedroom home of 2,693 square feet situated on a 10,000 square foot lot. Pass through the ceramic tile entry to the living room, formal dining room and wonderfully modern kitchen. The luminous ceilings light up the pass-through serving counter, trash compactor and built-in microwave oven. Just off the breakfast nook is the sunken family room with custom designed fireplace and its own wet bar. Adjacent is the guest bath, laundry room and a bedroom/den room. All this and a three-car garage with room enough for a work bench and storage space.



LEWIS HOMES' Prestige Series — Upland

Three additional bedrooms and another bath are upstairs plus the master bedroom suite with a private bath, dressing area and balcony. And while storage space is already ample throughout this model, there is further space in the attic.

"In areas like Orange County, San Marino and Encino where residential growth is so spectacular these days, we estimate this home would run upwards of $140,000," says Lewis. "Upland, however, is newly discovered and while it offers so many advantages to home buyers it has the to feel the financial wallop the more heavily developed areas are suffering." The Prestige Series Plan 455, hence, starts for as low as $105,000. Mountain view settings and the highly rated Upland School District are a complementary part of the area, and the noted Claremont Colleges are just minutes away.

"In keeping with our aim for quality," continued Lewis, "we've limited construction of the Prestige Series to only 37 homes." In each home you'll find cedar shake roofs, refrigerated airconditioning, shag carpeting throughout, customized fireplaces and wet bars.

Prestige Series homes are available in 3, 4 and 5 bedrooms with 2½ or 3 baths and 3-car garages in one-and two-story and split level stylings. All homes are situated on 10,000 square foot lots.

Lewis Homes' Prestige Series range in price from $86,500 to $109,000.

To reach the homes please take the San Bernardino Freeway (10) east to the Mountain Avenue exit in Upland. North on Mountain to Foothill Boulevard. Right on Foothill to San Antonio Avenue. Left on San Antonio to 22nd Street and left to models.

New energy guidelines

WASHINGTON — The National Association of Home Builders' new guidelines for conserving energy in new housing are gaining wide acceptance throughout the country.

The NAHB Thermal Performance Guidelines for One and Two Family Dwellings were unveiled at a recent conference here to more than 160 representatives of housing related industries, utilities, governmental agencies and consumer groups. During a question and answer period, the guidelines were described by industry and government officials as "innovative . . . impressive . . . practical . . . flexible . . . extremely workable . . . " and worthy of the support of the Carter Administration and the new Department of Energy.

David Stahl, executive vice president of NAHB, noted that the NAHB guidelines were unique, blending the best and the latest technology with sound consumer economics to produce a "practical, flexible and comprehensive" energy program for new housing.

The NAHB guidelines are based on energy index numbers, which are determined locally from data on local weather conditions, fuel costs and the efficiency of the heating and cooling systems used in the home. The index numbers then are matched to bar graphs representing 19 different construction areas to determine the amount of insulation or type of energy conserving features which are most effective for the money invested.

All the energy saving recommendations are cost-effective; that is, the energy saving materials and techniques used in building the home will be repaid to the homeowner within at least a seven year period through energy cost savings.

In the Washington, D.C., area, for example, the guidelines call for R-30 insulation in the attic (9-

The median sales price of an existing home in California climbed once again to hit a new high of $63,394, a nearly two percent increase from a month ago and 30 percent higher than last year's figures.

The statistics, released today by Jerome Blank of Albany, president of the 110,000-member California Association of Realtors, were based upon August sales reports taken from a statewide sampling of real estate boards representing approximately 42 percent of the Association's membership.

Speaking before Bakersfield area Realtors, Blank noted that while prices continue on an upward trend, the real estate market, which took a dramatic upward spiral earlier this year, appears to be stablizing at a "more reasonable" relationship to the overall economy.

"I believe the so-called 'Gold Rush' of California housing prices has begun to wane," Blank told Valley Realtors. "Earlier this year we experienced a price explosion resulting from a pent-up demand for housing which drove prices to an all-time high, but as new construction adds to the supply we are beginning to see a leveling-off of prices throughout the state."

He noted that the Central Valley area traditionally follows the pattern set in the highly urbanized Los Angeles and San Francisco areas.

Interestingly, Blank added that the greatest frequency of sales, nearly 20 percent of the total, occurred in the $90,000 and more price bracket. Homes in the $50-$60,000 price bracket ranked second at 17.5 percent.

Three bedroom homes, regardless of price range, continued to command the largest consumer demand, representing more than 50 percent of the resale market.

On other matters of both public and Realtor concern, Blank re-affirmed his Association's opposition to proposed federal enforcement of a 1902 law which would place a 160-acre limit on the size of farms using water from federally-funded irrigation projects.

He explained that the 1902 law was originally intended to offer family farmers low-cost irrigation water in arid areas, primarily in the western states. The Act, which Blank termed a "horse and buggy law" limits farm size to 160-acres per person, or 320 acres for a husband and wife residing "on or near" the property.

Since that time, more than a million acres of agricultural land has been irrigated with waters from federal projects with more than 85 percent of that land in California.

"Both the technology and economics of agriculture have changed dramatically in the past 55-years," Blank explained. "We can't expect California farmers, either large or small, to meet the nation's greatly expanded food needs by adding further federal restrictions on our functioning free enterprise system."

He said the Realtors intend to take the issue to Congress and the President, if needed, to block proposed Department of the Interior enforcement of the outdated law.

Property management seminar set

The full spectrum of property management will be explored by leading experts during a one-day seminar to be held at the Riviera in Palm Springs on Nov. 4.

Sponsored by the Property Management Division of the California Association of Realtors, the broad based seminar touches on management of such properties as condominiums, commercial and industrial facilities, office buildings, residential and resort developments and shopping centers.

According to Edward T. Clare Sr., CPM, chairman of the division and a participant in the seminar, the session is designed for the real estate professional, investor and members of the public interested in the "dollar and sense" of good property management. He said that the Palm Springs location was selected because of it's proximity to a wide variety of property uses including resorts.

Clare of San Diego, who will touch on such subjects as Owners Goals, Investment Properties, Operations and Making Money in Management, will be followed by Posey Carpentier, CPM, of Long Beach, who will present the Diary of a Shopping Center Manager. She will be followed by Hans J. Prufer, CPM, of San Juan Capistrano, who will speak on the topic, How to Win in Small Claims Court.

The day-long seminar begins promptly at 9 a.m. and concludes at 4:30 p.m. with an hour and a half break for lunch.

Fee for the educational event, including all course materials, is $25 for members of the C.A.R. Property Management Division and $35 for non-members. Advance reservations are suggested and may be made by mailing checks to the California Association of Realtors — PMD, 505 Shatto Place, Los Angeles, CA 90020.

Energy efficient home displayed

RIVERSIDE — Bendix Home Systems, Inc. will display a totally balanced energy efficient home at the Dodger Mobile Home Show, November 2-13. Built for the average mobile homeowner at an affordable price, the display home will offer an energy conversation package that covers: Solar water heating, insulation for air infiltration control, devices for water saving and heating and recommendations for energy efficient mechanical systems, lighting and decor.

The Bendix Energy Efficient Home is the result of support technology conducted by the Bendix Research Laboratories, Southfield, Michigan.

At the Dodger Show, Bendix research personnel will demonstrate and answer questions about energy conservation. With the aid of $55,000 worth of camera equipment and infra-red lighting, viewers will see how air filters and heat is lost in the average home.

Americans still buying large homes

Despite rising energy costs and declining birth rates, Americans still are buying large homes, according to the National Association of Realtors. The number of Americans buying homes with four or more bedrooms increased to 26.6 percent in 1976 from 22.4 percent in 1968. The number of homes sold in the four-or-more-bedroom category in 1976 was only .2 percent below the percentage recorded in 1975.

UCB economist predicts spry '78 business year

LOS ANGELES (BW) — After a sluggish pace of economic activity early in 1978, which will be felt especially in the industrial sector, Los Angeles County will turn in a rather "spry" business performance in 1978, United California Bank (UCB) said.

Dr. Raymond Jallow, chief economist, in releasing the bank's 15th annual economic forecast, cited two prime reasons for this trend.

The first was continued population growth, which will add 42,000 new residents in 1978. The second was a "strong upsurge" in 1977 in commercial building — up more than 10 percent — and an "astounding surge" in industrial building activity, with permit valuations up more than 140 percent. Many of these facilities will become operational in 1978 and will provide a firm base for employment growth.

Jallow said, "almost all sectors of the county will contribute to the job market as some 64,000 new nonfarm positions open up next year.

"The local aircraft industry should stabilize after its mid-1977 setback of the shutdown of the B-1 program," Jallow said.

"Residential construction activity will not match the high level of this year and will drop 11 percent, with 34,000 new housing units expected. The supply/demand situation is basically favorable, but talk of rent controls will exert somewhat of a dampening influence on the construction of apartments.

"High work force participation will yield a median family income of $19,680," Jallow said. Total retail sales in 1978 will advance 10 percent to $29.4 billion, but competition for business will intensify.

"Los Angeles County will continue to experience an outflow of business and government leaders are aware of the problems and appear to be taking steps to remedy them."

Meadows II grand opening in Ontario

One- and two-story homes from $53,495 to $68,995

Celebrating the Grand Opening of Meadows II in Ontario, the homebuilding firm of American National Housing Corporation is offering three and four bedroom homes priced from $53,495 to $68,995. When completed, the newest development of the popular homes, near the Ontario National Golf Course, will contain approximately 252 one and two story residences.

"Originally built in Chino, the Meadows designs were so well received that we searched for another property where we could present another series and buyer interest has been so strong that we opened sales earlier than anticipated," said Jim Lenon, vice president of Sales and Marketing for the homebuilding firm.

"Along with reintroducing our 'Answer home', we have added a newly-designed floorplan with four bedrooms and a three-car garage. This two-story plan will satisfy families desiring the extra space not available in the Chino series."

One- and two-story homes at Meadows are offered in 4 different floorplans. Interiors range from 1,231 to 1,870 square feet of living space. A formal living room, dining area, family room and fully-featured kitchen form the core of the home with spacious master bedroom suite and family bedrooms and baths completing the plans.

Within the kitchen is a General Electric range, double oven, dishwasher and disposal. Ceramic tile countertops, hardwood cabinetry and luminous ceilings are standard in the large country kitchens.

Design features include formal entries, wood-burning fireplace located in the living room or family room, and direct entry to the attached garage. Wall-to-wall carpeting is installed throughout.

Master bedroom suites have a private bath and dressing area. Cultured onyx pullman tops and ceramic tile around showers and tubs are listed among the quality materials found throughout the home. Family bedrooms are generously proportioned and homes contain 2 baths.

Exterior styling for Meadows II homes display wood and stucco siding surrounding the recessed front entry, wide windows, and sliding glass doors. Wood trim, posts and wood shake roofs accent the exterior elevations available in a total of 12 different stylings. To compliment the interior package front yard landscaping and sprinklers and complete rear yard fencing is included.

Completed (and furnished) models, displaying the floor plans and features of the new homes, are open daily from 10 a.m. to 6 p.m. at Archibald. Buyers have reserved 28 homes in the first unit of 36 homes available for sale. Occupancy is scheduled for mid December with sales for unit two to begin October 30.

Located within easy range of schools of all levels in the Ontario Unified School District, Meadows II homes are close to neighborhood and regional shopping facilities. Parks, playgrounds and recreational opportunities surround the new development of family homes.

Access to the convenient California freeway system is nearby and leads to major employment and recreational centers in Los Angeles, Orange County, Riverside County and San Bernardino County. Local employment centers can be reached along wide throughfares and boulevards.

To reach the sales information center and model complex for Meadows II, take the Pomona Freeway and exit at the Archibald offramp. Drive south on Archibald just one block to 2714 Pine Valley Ave. and the newest development of the popular series of moderatly-priced homes. For further information, call (714) 988-6506.

Plimpton will wrap up Day One of the convention with his keynote address to all attendees in the Rivergate. Plimpton, author of the biggest-selling sports book in history, "Paper Lion," as well as "Out of My League" and the "Bogey Man," is the ideal model for the theme of the convention: "Outperform Yourself in '78." His fascinating exploits in the professional sports world serve as an inspiration to everyone.

Seprate sales and management sessions are scheduled for the second day of the convention. Four of the top real estate sales and management speakers in the United States will appear before the convention attendees. Salespeople will hear Zig Ziglar, Joel Weldon and Dave Yoho, while brokers and managers will attend an intensive half-day management seminar hosted by world-renowned management consultant Gunther Klaus. Also in the management session, Century 21 President Art Bartlett and other key executives of Century 21 will set the management direction for the organization in 1978.

An awards ceremony and a special guest speaker will highlight the third and final day of the convention.

Century 21 is composed of more than 4,500 independent real estate offices throughout the United States and Canada, with more than 40,000 salespeople comprising the Century 21 sales team.

Spindle side

Females in Anglo-Saxon clans were called the "spindle side" of the family as they did all the spinning of flax into cloth. Women were not fit to marry until they had spun their dowry of linens. In 1665, the colony of Massachusetts passed a decree requiring every family to weave three pounds of cloth a week, and set up quotas based on the number of women in a household. Elect officers at convention

Realtors gunning for property tax relief

SAN DIEGO — The 100,000-member California Association of Realtors wound up its 73rd annual convention recently, electing a slate of 1978 officers and taking positions on a number of legislative actions ranging from property tax relief to opposition to proposed land use controls by the federal and state governments.

The convention, attended by more than 5,000 Realtors from throughout the state, opened following three-days of director and committee meetings at the Town and Country.

A political tone was set early during the week when directors voted unanimously to sponsor an initiative tax plan to achieve at least $700 million in homeowner and renter property tax relief along with controls to limit local government tax levies.

Expressing "disappointment" at the Legislature's failure to enact a property tax relief bill during the last session, C.A.R. President Jerome Blank of Albany said his association will be ready to circulate an initiative petition early next year if the Legislature is unable to bring promised relief to Californians.

"We are going to watch what the Legislature and governor do in the next few months," Blank said. "We hope they can do the job, but if they can't we will have a plan of our own ready to take to the voters."

In other actions, the Realtors also apposed enforcement of a 1902 law which would place a 160-acre limit on the size of western farms using water from federally funded irrigation projects.

Blank said his organization would make every effort to oppose the envorcement of the "outdated and restrictive" law.

"Both the technology and economics of agriculture have changed dramatically in the past 55 years," Blank explained. "We can't expect the farmers of California, either large or small, to produce to meet the state's expanded food needs by adding one further restrictive intervention on the free enterprise system."

The political tone of the convention continued as the Realtors were welcomed to San Diego by Mayor Pete Wilson at the opening session on Thursday. He struck a particularly responsive cord when he charged the governor and Legislature with failure to deliver property tax relief.

He took a hard line against what he termed "no-growth environmentalists," while describing Sao's "residential growth management" programs as a better alternative.

Wilson also took a shot at the governor and his director of planning and research, Bill Press, whose controversial Urban Policy Strategy came under heated debate during a land use conference later in the day.

"I do not appreciate the Office of Planning and Research dictating urban development strategy when that is properly a local matter," the mayor said.

Undisputed star of the day was former Texas Governor John B. Connally, who charged that the environmental policies practiced by some office holders were actually "hurting, not helping" the economy. He called "jobs" one of our most important natural resources.

The former governor, who also has served as both Secretary of the Navy and Treasury both under Democratic and Republican Administrations, claimed that consumer costs, included that of housing, were being raised due to the controls being put on products by governmental agencies such as the Federal Energy Commission and the Environmental Protection Agency.

Congressional bureaucrats were hit hard by Connally as he called for a limit on both Presidential and Congressional terms and for a break-up of the entrenched Washington bureaucracy.

Following a fast-paced schedule of concurrent conferences covering the entire gamet of realtor concerns, delegates to the 73rd annual convention adopted a 15-point 1978 Statement of Policy for the statewide orgainzation.

"We (will) continue to support and protect in every lawful manner the right of private ownership of property and the encouragement of private enterprise to the end that American ideals and free institutions shall be fostered and preserved," the preamble states in part.

Heading the list of statements was that of consumer protection in which the realtors reaffirmed their support for educational programs designed to inform the public and real estate licensees.

Other points covered in the five-page document included education, environment, financing, government regulations, license law, natural resources, professional standards, public policy, public service, rehabilitation, taxation and others.

Unanimously elected to serve as officers for 1978 were Don Wiedmann of San Diego as president, Clark Wallace of Moraga as first vice president and Sebastiano Sterpa of Burbank as treasurer.

The Baldy View Chapter of the Building Industry Association announced recently at its annual installation dinner dance the new Officers and Board of Directors for 1977-78.

Attending the dinner dance were 160 members of the Baldy View Chapter, representing builders, contractors, and associate members from all over the West End and Pomona Valley.

This year's installation afforded the largest turnout for such an event in the chapter's history. Until recently, Baldy View BIA was not recognized for the public leadership it was capable of providing. However, the recent sewer moratorium enacted by San Bernardino provided the opportunity for the chapter to demonstrate its organizational potential. Under the direction of outgoing president Jim Smirl, Vanguard Builders, Baldy View went into action in educating the public and presenting detailed information and data to the Board of Supervisors to argue its case. Facts, figures and specifics presented by the county planning staff were thoughtfully questioned and made to conform to the true realities of the overall complexities of the moratorium question. The end result was the establishment of an advisory committee to allocate available sewage allotments and allow sensible growth to continue.

"What we did, we did in the best interests of the public and for rights of individuals to own homes," said Jim Smirl. "We were confronted with a life-and-death situation that could not only stop our industry dead in its tracks, but cut the legs right out from under the whole economy of the West End," he said.

The momentum of Jim Smirl's leadership will be carried on by in-coming president, Jim Crowell, who stated in his acceptance speech, "We, as an industry, are faced with challenges that are every bit as serious as an imminent depression. We have an obligation to confront the problems of sewer moratoriums, school availability, arbitrary bureaucratic decision making, and many other problems in a positive and forthright manner. We cannot afford to lose, nor can the public, which depends on the income generated by our business."

HUD plan wins praise

Robert Arquilla, president of the 90,000-member National Association of Home Builders (NAHB), praised a plan to reorganize and streamline the Department of Housing and Urban Development (HUD) as a "major step in the right direction."

The reorganization, announced by Secretary of HUD Patricia Harris, is designed to improve the efficiency and effectiveness of the department. Also, it is supposed to provide a direct line of communication and authority between the HUD hierarchy (assistant secretaries) working in Washington and local field offices where HUD's $10 billion in housing programs and community development block grants are implemented and dispersed.

Arquilla noted that the proposed changes would result in a "substantial speedup" in processing time for builders who use federal housing programs or FHA financing to build single family homes or apartments.

"Once impliemented, the new management setup within HUD has the potential to eliminate many of the headaches and unnecessary delays now confronting builders who participate in federal programs," Arquilla said.

On a separate but related topic, Arquilla said that the Housing and Community Development Act of 1977 makes some significant changes in the FHA mortgage insurance program. The housing bill was signed recently by President Carter.

Arquilla pointed out that the bill raises the mortgage ceiling to $60,000

With lots averaging one-half acre

Chino's Saddlewood country community offers growing room

Providing growing room inside and out, the new country estate community of Saddlewood in Chino offers three and four bedroom family homes situated on lots averaging one-half acre and is priced from $83,995.

Large enough to corral and maintain horses, the unusually large lots give families the opportunity to have a swimming pool, volleyball court, vegetable garden and landscaping with space for children to grow, study and play in a country environment.

One and two story Saddlewood homes ranging from 1,850 to 2,318 square feet provide families with interior growing room for children plus private retreats for adults in addition to formal entertaining areas.

Formal living and dining room areas are separated from family rooms and kitchens for easy traffic flow and zoning of activities. Simultaneous get-togethers for adults and teens can be scheduled without conflict, encouraging the home centered activities desired by single-family homeowners.

"Spacious homes on spacious lots have continued to be the number one priority of Americans because the privacy, convenience and comfort cannot be found with any other type of housing," said Jim Lenon, vice president of Sales and Marketing for American National Housing, builder and developer of Saddlewood country estates.

"Community involvement, civic responsibility, and respect for others are American values which many authorities agree is based upon our tradition of single-family home ownership," he continued.

Enhancing the new residential community is a neighborhood park within the boundaries. Picnic and barbecue facilities and a playground are maintained by the Saddlewood Homeowners Association for the use of occupants of the estates.

A complete equestrian center is accessible from the bridle trail system linking each lot. A training ring, wash-down area, water troughs, and horse trailer loading turn-around are provided where adults can work out and children can care for their own horses.

Surrounded by the farmlands and ranch country of west Chino, the new residential community preserves the character of the area, long noted for its rural atmosphere. Homeowners can easily reach the metropolitan centers of Los Angeles, Orange County and the San Gabriel Valley via the Riverside or Pomona Freeways.

Model homes displaying the three different floorplans and the long list of features included with each home are open daily from 10 a.m. to 6 p.m. The sales information center is located in the model complex.

To reach the new homes of Saddlewood, scheduled for occupancy in November, take the Corona Freeway (71) to the Chino Avenue exit. Drive east on Chino Avenue one block to the half-acre country estates in Chino. For further information, persons may call (714) 628-4761.

A first for South Carolina

Truluck needs luck for making wine in Lake City

By THOMAS C. COTHRAN
Associated Press Writer

LAKE CITY, S.C. (AP) — The flat, tobacco-growing countryside around Lake City bears no resemblance to the rolling hills of Burgundy. It doesn't look like Napa Valley in California either.

But there's a man there who aspires to make wine, despite the humidity and the soaring temperatures in summer.

"Nobody has ever produced a good tablewine in our area to know what they compare to," says Dr. James P. Truluck Jr., a dentist and part time vintner.

"The people we have been reaching in our sales are proud to drink a wine that is produced in South Carolina."

Truluck says he never drank wine before he served a two-year tour at Chateauroux Air Force Base in central France. Born and bred in Lake City, he had never spent much time anywhere else.

But he was a country boy hankerin' for culture, and he visited French vineyards in his off hours, developing a taste for wine.

"When we returned to Lake City, we were afraid to serve wine to our guests," says the 44-year-old dentist. "Nobody here drank wine."

But they do now. And the bottle many are reaching for bears the cream-colored label of Truluck Vineyards.

Truluck dreamed about the winery for several years after returning from France. He bought his 165-acre tract near Lake City, population 6,500, in the late 1960s, planted the first vines in 1972 and harvested the first grapes in 1974.

The first commercial bottling was in 1976, when he produced 1,400 gallons of wine. This year 4,000 gallons were produced, to be marketed So. Carolina.

Small local vintners can't hope to match the California winemakers, whose sales account for 80 percent of the wine sold in the South, Truluck says. "We're just trying to bring a common tablewine which is produced within 200 to 300 miles of every Southerner," he said.

New energy guidelines studied—inches of mineral fiber blanket or its equivalent) and an R-14 insulation value for walls (insulation plus exterior sheathing) for homes equipped with heat pumps, oil or electric resistance heating systems and electric air conditioning. However, because natural gas is less expensive compared to other fuels in the Washington area, the NAHB guidelines call for only R-19 insulation in the attics of gas-heated, electrically-cooled homes. The wall insulation value remains the same at R-14. Double-glazed windows or storm windows are recommended for all Washington homes.

"The NAHB guidelines meet or exceed other energy construction standards now in existence, including the Federal Housing Administration's Minimum Property Standards," said Alan Trellis, director of NAHB's technical services department.

Ivan Wohlworth, a builder from Hicksville, N.Y., who is cochairman of NAHB's special committee on energy, stressed the local application of the new guidelines. "No longer must home buyers waste money on energy conserving features where they may not be needed. Likewise, there are many areas where we can save substantial amounts of energy by adding specific construction features to the homes we build," he said.

"Obviously," Wohlworth said, "the more insulation we use in homes, the more energy we save. But there is a point of diminishing return. To be realistic and practical, the amount of insulation we use must be tied to how much money we can afford to invest and how much money we can recover through energy cost savings in a reasonable period of time."

The NAHB guidelines call for more energy conserving measures in areas where the climate is very severe and fuel costs are high.

The guidelines were developed by the association's wholly owned subsidiary, the NAHB Research Foundation, Inc., in cooperation with NAHB's technical staff and a special builder committee.

NAHB has begun a series of special seminars throughout the country to explain the program to builders and others interested in this new approach to energy conservation. Remaining seminars on the schedule include: Oct. 31-Nov. 1, Stouffer's Denver Inn, Denver, Co.; Nov. 17-18, Sheraton Center, Oklahoma City, Ok.; Nov. 21-22, Regency O'Hare Hotel, Chicago, Il.; Dec. 1-2, Hyatt Regency Hotel, Phoenix, Az.; and Dec. 14-15, Royal Sonesta Hotel, New Orleans, La.

10,000 women sterilized

Singapore making strides in limiting size of families

By S.V. SUPPIAH

SINGAPORE (AP) — Nearly 10,000 women were sterilized in Singapore last year. During the past seven years, more than 47,900 women have been sterilized, while 2,000 men have undergone vasectomy operations.

Last year 12,900 women had abortions in government hospitals, where government doctors have performed 45,500 abortions since 1970.

The Singapore Family Planning and Population Board said most women cited "financial difficulties" as the reason for seeking sterilization, which costs $2 in government hospitals. An abortion costs about $4.

The board estimated that more than 273,000 births were prevented as a result of abortions, sterilization, use of the pill and other contraceptives between the years 1966-75.

The number of working mothers last year swelled to 44 percent of the labor force, going up from 21 percent in 1957.

Limiting the size of the family has become a compelling necessity for the majority. The alternative is a heavy financial burden and great inconvenience.

More than 31 percent of the labor force of 835,000 earn less than $81 monthly, while another 42 percent earn less than $163.

The government discourages large families by giving income tax concessions only for the first three children, imposing a stiff maternity hospital charge of $200 for the fourth child, who gets no preference in attending schools near his home, and giving low priority in housing to such families.

Now more than 107,000 women have started to plan their families to conform to the slogan, "Two is enough."

Singapore has been very successful in sharply reducing its birth rate from 4.7 percent in 1958 to 1.4 percent last year.

The majority, or 76 percent, of the population of 2.2 million is Chinese; 15 percent Malays; 7 percent from the Indian subcontinent.

The Chinese, who do not necessarily subscribe to traditional moral considerations, have set the pace by keeping their families small. Such considerations, on the other hand, may be discussed at length by some Indians, Malays and Eurasian and Chinese Catholics.

But they have to face reality. "The more you have the less they get" is a slogan that cannot be easily ignored.

The board hopes to "dissuade" young people from getting married early and, if they do, to encourage them to "space the birth" of their children.

Orthodox men and women are said to feel deeply disturbed by these measures, which may even create other social problems. But it is predicted that Singapore, an island of 225 square miles, will have a population of 3.5 million by the year 2030, when zero growth rate has been achieved by "replacement."

Singapore's materialistic outlook and drastic solution to the population problem cannot be duplicated or imitated even by immediate neighbors Malaysia and Indonesia, where family planning is not popular.

However, compact Singapore, though tiny in size, hopes to remain slim and sleek in terms of population size.

Who's afraid, why?

Who's afraid? Just about everyone. How much do you know about the psychology of fear? Here's an opportunity to test yourself.

1. If you fear flying, it's probably because you had a bad fight in the past.
True ( ) False ( )

2. Men express as much fear of flying as women.
True ( ) False ( )

3. Hypochondria is often a response to deep depression.
True ( ) False ( )

4. Healthy children do not suffer from fears.
True ( ) False ( )

5. Fear is contagious.
True ( ) False ( )

6. Some people get married primarily because of fear.
True ( ) False ( )

7. People with nervous disorders are more predisposed to phobias than those who are not nervous.
True ( ) False ( )

8. There are no positive aspects of fear.
True ( ) False ( )

ANSWERS:

1. FALSE. Surprisingly, a bad fight seems to have nothing to do with fear of flying.

2. FALSE. Only 7 percent of the men questioned in a study of flying expressed fear as compared to 20 percent of the women. However, this only may be further proof that men are more reluctant to admit fear.

3. TRUE. Sickness is a way of life for hypochondriacs but, according to Dr. Louis Rittlemeyer, associate professor of psychiatry at Georgetown University, many hypochondriacs suffer from underlying depression. Hypochondria protects a person from becoming more depressed.

4. FALSE. According to a study by the Foundation for Child Development, healthy children are beset with a variety of fears, including fear of violent TV programs, of strangers, even of their fathers.

5. TRUE. When a parent shows fear, a child adds this anxiety to his own. In this way, fear can sweep through a family. It can also be transmitted from one adult to another.

6. TRUE. According to Princeton University philosopher Walter Kaufmann, millions of Americans get married because they are afraid to make decisions on their own.

7. FALSE. This apparently isn't true. Dr. Henry Pechstein, a psychiatrist, says that only about 20 percent of people suffering from nervous disorders complain of phobias.

8. FALSE. Normal fear is an alarm mechanism which warns us of danger. Without it, we probably wouldn't live very long. On the other hand, if the alarm rings all the time, we can become crippled by fear that has no basis in reality.

The Wigfields have another son, Roger A., of New Philadelphia, Ohio, and a daughter, Doris M. Lombard of Ontario. There are 21 grandchildren and seven great-grandchildren.

UNICEF marks 31 years of aid

Today, UNICEF (United Nations Children's Fund) will commemorate 31 years of helping needy children in 100 countries around the world.

It is estimated that more than 100 million children under five are still severely malnourished, and 90 percent of the young children who die each year could be saved with simple preventive measures.

A primary goal of UNICEF over the years has been to assist developing countries in their fight to overcome their hunger problems. To this end, UNICEF approaches the task in a variety of ways, such as instructing mothers in proper diet techniques and stocking ponds with protein-rich fish in rural villages. This village level self-help model is designed to prepare people for self-sufficiency after initial aid and education.

Because public awareness of the efforts of UNICEF is essential to the ultimate success of UNICEF projects, multicultural education has been initiated in the public schools here. The program is designed to strengthen the ties of children in the industrialized nations with those in undeveloped countries.

Educational materials including films, maps, pictures and books about food, songs, dances and games enjoyed by children around the world, are available to aid in furthering international understanding among children.

Fine Arts slates Armour program

Author-humorist-satirist Richard Armour will speak to members and guests of the Fine Arts Foundation of Scripps College Tuesday at 2 p.m. in the Humanities Auditorium on the Scripps campus.

Armour will discuss his latest and 55th book, "It All Started with Nudes," which he describes as the shortest and most playful of any book on the history of art. Although the major purpose of the book is to entertain, he says, it will also enlighten those who know nothing or little of the history of art, and the informed may learn some odd bits of information not generally gleaned from histories of art.

The book will be available for purchase at the tea in the Lang Art Gallery following the lecture, and the author will autograph copies.

A Phi Beta Kappa graduate of Pomona College and a Harvard Ph. D., teacher and former dean, Armour claims his work conducting tours for six years through European galleries and museums was an important experience for writing his latest book.

He did the research for the book in the art history collection of the Denison Library on the Scripps College campus. The library is currently exhibiting all the manuscripts, drafts, corrections, galleys and correspondence associated with the book as well as the sketches and drawings of the book's illustrator, Campbell Grant. Grant is a teacher of art and history who has illustrated 14 of Armour's books.

Members and their guests attending the lecture and tea will be able to view selections of American art from the permanent collections of Scripps and Pomona colleges, including paintings, drawings and prints by Inness, Cassatt, Hassam and Prendergast hanging in Lang Gallery. It will be the last day of the exhibit.

Home tour slated by hospital group

Autumn Festival, a tour of four attractive Glendora homes, is planned for Nov. 20 from noon until 5 p.m. It will be the fourth annual benefit sponsored by Glendora Foothill Presbyterian Hospital Auxiliary.

According to Mrs. Betty LaFetra, 1977 home tour chairman, the homes will range from a charming older home, a tastefully decorated young family home, one for a growing family which will spotlight a garden, and a new Spanish-trend home with pool and game room built around an atrium.

A selection of gift items from the auxiliary shop and home baked goods will also be available during the tour.

Tickets for the event, open to the public, are on sale a the hospital gift shop or by calling 213-335-6350.

Book sales rise as literacy falls

> "(Many magazines which review books) reflect an automatic superiority among people who read books. It is almost like an intellectual Mafia; the converted talking to the converted. A new novel will be discussed purely in reference to the author's previous work . . . " Baker said, explaining the popular appeal of Bookviews.

By NORMAN NADEL

NEW YORK (NEA) — Americans are buying more books than ever before in the nation's history, and nobody can say precisely why.

If anything, the signs point in the oppoiste direction. Books today cost more than they ever did. The economy has been depressed, with unemployment still higher than it should be. According to an endless stream of reports over the past 20 years, children are not learning to read as well as they should. Young people are entering college — or trying to enter — with only ninth grade, or eighth, or seventh grade reading ability. Many college graduates cannot use the English language properly, or write a coherent, correct letter. Surveys indicate that hours once spent reading are now spent watching television.

The number of new books published each year increased steadily for a period, then levelled off in the past two or three, but at an extremely high level. Presently, about 30,000 new titles appear annually in the U.S., plus 10,000 reprints or new editions of books formerly published, for a total or 40,000. The number of copies of each new book or reprint can range from about 5,000 (sometimes less) up into the millions.

One important index, according to John F. Baker, editor of a new magazine, Bookviews, is the increase in the number of bookstores, not only in New York, which always has dominated book-selling and buying, but all around the country.

"Particularly startling in recent years is the expansion of the big book-selling chains," notes Baker. "BRENTANO'S, Walden's and B. Dalton, for example, have been opening in the big shopping centers. Areas such as the South and Southwest, that might have been without a bookstore for 100 miles around a particular community, now have one, conveniently located, with a good stock, attractive lighting and all the attraction, and they're doing business.

"We don't know who's buying the books. The book industry is probably the least market-research-oriented of any major industry. But we do know, for example, that in the last two years both fiction and non-fiction best-sellers sold far more copies than in previous years. It took a total sale of 120,000 or more copies to make the hard-cover best-seller lists in 1976, whereas in previous years you could make it with about 80,000. As for the mass market paperbacks, two or three years ago about 40 or 45 titles would sell a million or more copies annually.

Last year there were 53 or 54 million-plus paperbacks. And this is happening all over the country."

One upbeat result of this is the appearance of the new monthly Bookviews, at a time when magazines generally are having a difficult time, due primarily to new and expensive postal regulations. Published by the R. R. Bowker Company, a Xerox affiliate , previously best known for Publishers Weekly and Library Journal, the new and fairly breezy mag is aimed at the general public whereas the two established ones are trade-oriented.

"Harper's, The Atlantic, The New Yorker, the New York Times Book Review, The New York Review of Books and Saturday Review, among others, all review books," explains Baker. "But many of those reflect an automatic assumption of superiority among people who read books. It is almost like an intellectual Mafia: the converted talking to the converted. A new novel will be discussed purely in reference to the author's previous work, and whether it shows growth and development, or decline. Cheever's "Falconer" was a recent example of that.

"We use essentially the same reviews that appear in Publishers Weekly and Library Journal, but with data pertinent only to bookstores and libraries left out.

"What's left is a good, meaty, consumerish sort of review. Crisp, to the point, seldom more than 250 or 300 words on a book; it gives the lay reader a pretty good idea about what the book is like. One bookseller, after reading our first issue, told me: 'You've created a Publishers Weekly for the people.' That made me feel good."

In addition to reviews, the new magazine offers longer articles, such as Alistair Cooke talking about books and TV, and newspaper columnist Ann Landers choosing her favorite psychological self-help books, in the September debut issue. The October issue tells about the Irving Wallaces ("the family that writer together makes millions together"), and offers Julia Childs, describing her favorite cookbooks.

First issue of Bookviews, available in the bookstores, went faster than Baker or anybody else expected. Apparently all those people who are buying books these days, for their own mysterious reasons, also like to read about books as well.

Wellesley unit sets gathering

Patsy H. Sampson, dean of faculty and professor of psychology at Pitzer College, will address members of the Wellesley Club Saturday in the Claremont College Faculty House.

Her topic will be "Beginning the Child Study Center at Wellesley." The meeting will be at noon.

Dr. Sampson was director of the Child Study Center and assistant professor of psychology at Wellesley College from 1967 to 1970.

Digital watchmakers dropping from market

AP Newsfeatures

Time is running out on some solid state watches. Extensive engineering, expense, production and testing have gone into the evolution of the digital watch which, unlike conventional watches, has no watch movements — balance wheel, tuning fork and the like.

But that complex mechanism has created problems. A number of traditional watchmakers — for example, Gruen and Benrus — have become dropouts from the digital watch market. Some semiconductor companies have abandoned digital business. Fairchild has reported an $8 million pretax loss on digital watches in the second quarter, according to Business Week.

A digital watch is not a simple timepiece that anyone can repair. An entire module may need to be replaced at a factory, which has the complex electronic equipment needed for module testing — something the consumer should know.

There are 35,000 watch makers and jewelers who can service, repair and adjust conventional watches, electronic tuning fork watches and quartz watches with conventional dials. In contrast, "there are no experts in retail stores who have been trained to repair solid state watches," the Bulova Time Center says.

In addition, there are no standards for the hundreds of modules of digital watches — one reason inexperienced people cannot repair them — or for minibatteries or for battery replacement procedures. Some types of watches, such as the light-emitting diodes (LEDs), may have complicated setting procedures that burn up their lives quickly. In fact, this year there has been a big shift from watches with the LEDs to the models with liquid crystal displays known as LCDs, reports the business news magazine.

Typical quartz crystals used in quality, solid-state digital watches keep time by vibrating 32,768 times a second. Some watches may need regulation for accuracy, and only a watch rate measuring timer, an electronic instrument used by jewelers, can be used for that purpose.

The public's confusion is compounded by retailers who do not know enough about these watches to provide service, industry sources say. Two years ago when a million solid state watches were retailed, some stores reported a 60 percent return of new watches due to malfunction. In 1976 jewelers reported returns of 30 to 40 percent, whereas returns of handwound watches were at the rate of only 1 percent.

Some module assemblers did not make proper tests necessary to these complicated mechanisms, according to industry sources, and many solid state watches were of poor quality — a great many selling for a few dollars. A lot of intricate circuitry is involved in time and calendar displays on watches in dividing down the high frequency to hours, minutes, months. Such watches must be meticulously assembled.

LCD-type digital watches display time by light reflection and are minibattery-powered for continuous operation, usually 12 months; LED models light when a button is pushed, burning energy rapidly and often bringing complaints of short battery life by consumers.

Sales people should be equipped to demonstrate performance and features, and should be able to set the watch accurately to the second, minute, hour and day of the week. The store should carry the minibatteries that are needed and be equipped to change them, industry sources suggest, although a jewelry shop can provide these services.

Bazaar planned

Theme for the annual Christmas bazaar, "Holiday Magic," to be prested by Westmont United Methodist Women, is Holiday Magic.

The bazaar will be held Friday and Saturday at the church social hall, 1781 W. Ninth St., Pomona. The handcrafted items to be offered are suitable for holiday gifts.

Baked goods will be offered as well as jams. There will be a white elephant table, dessert and coffee both.

Hours the first day will be 10 a.m. to 4 p.m. and the second day, 10 a.m. to 1 p.m.

Monetary leadership vs. economic generalship

Carter, Burns square off for a 'heavyweight' fight

By JOHN CUNNIFF
AP Business Analyst

NEW YORK (AP) — They're not yet shouting like Muhammad Ali and Joe Frazier, but Arthur Burns and President Jimmy Carter are leading up to the best heavyweight fight since those two boxers met.

Carter threw the first dart last week when in effect he warned the Federal Reserve, of which Burns is chairman, to refrain from needlessly raising interest rates and hurting the economy.

Burns replied Tuesday in Spokane, Wash., when he told an audience that the economy's poor performance is a consequence not so much of his monetary leadership as that of the President's poor economic generalship.

Neither of the two darts carried their messages explicitly. The words were couched in the language of domestic diplomacy, but they were on target and they stung as badly as a punch in the face.

This is a class confrontation whose meaning cannot be minimized. It is more than a battle between monetarists and fiscalists as to who effects the biggest economic changes. It is a battle of philosophies.

Burns has always represented what is usually called a conservative viewpoint. He abhors federal deficits. He believes the nation's greatest enemy is inflation. He believes that free enterprise is the way to go.

President Carter has stated his agreement with those beliefs, but in Burns' view, and in the views of many others, he has contradicted himself in practice, and Burns seems to feel that therein lies the problem with the economy.

Burns' response to Carter's challenge was centered on the importance, the need — in fact, it could be said, of the absolute necessity of — corporate profits. Without profits, he said in effect, Carter could make no headway.

He defended the independence of the Fed, the nation's central bank, and he demonstrated that independence by saying he would go right ahead if necessary with a tighter monetary policy — money supply and its cost — that his board attempts to control.

But he went far beyond a defense of monetary policy when he criticized the uncertainty over energy policy, environmental codes, taxes, government regulation and dedication to fighting inflation. Doubt was eroding confidence, he suggested.

Burns drew in some powerful allies from the business world who have been complaining about the same thing, arguing that it is foolhardy for them to spend when they don't know what the future brings.

This community of interest, which includes banking and heavy industry, is in a quiet fury over what it feels is a lack of leadership from Washington, as well as wasteful intrusion from its bureaucrats.

Given some assurance, it has been saying, and provided with assurance also that Washington will keep out of its affairs at least until it can gather momentum, it can raise production, produce jobs and pay its taxes.

But Burns also has many, many critics. A huge school of thought which has many squabbles within itself is in agreement that the blame for the current economic malaise belongs to Burns and bankers and big business.

Burns especially has been criticized, mainly because of what is seen as an erratic administration of the money supply, permitting it to grow too fast and then being forced to cut back, pushing up interest rates and slowing economic activity.

The bases of these disputes are deep and involved, and we still might not get a clear resolution as the fight develops. But as the language becomes more explicit, finally we might obtain a clear exposition of the issues.

That is, if the two battlers don't call off the fight as being too dangerous to their individual and mutual interests.

Couple is trucking as team

LAKELAND, Fla. (AP) — Two years ago, Jackie Tisch couldn't drive a stick-shift car. Now she's with her husband, driving a 42-foot tractor-trailer cross-country.

"I was tired of my job and I hated being separated from my husband days at a time," says Mrs. Tisch, 29, who had been a dental assistant for six years.

"Larry borrowed a truck from a dealer and taught me to drive. We would go to a football stadium up north where I drove around and around in a snow-packed field until I mastered the gears," she says.

She took her chauffeurs's test, passed and joined her husband at the wheel.

They sold their home and furniture and bought a $52,000 refrigerated rig that Mrs. Tisch says "was worth twice as much as our home."

They now live in the truck.

"It's not as bad as it sounds," she says. "We had plenty of room for three large pieces of luggage, a train case and two sets of golf clubs."

They have a double-wide sleeper behind the cab, a stereo, television set, radio and CB set.

They aim for 1,000 miles a day and travel mostly interstate highways at nights when they can to make the best time.

The only problem, she says, is food.

"All menus look the same after a couple of days on the road. Have you ever heard a place with a bunch of trucks in front of it is a good place to eat? Don't believe it. Truckers are there because there's room to park, food service is fast and they gas up there."

What about spats?

"Oh, we have lots of fights," says Mrs. Tisch. "When I get mad, I just go in the other room and pout."

WATERBED INVENTOR — Charlie Hall, inventor of the waterbed, explains away misconceptions about waterbeds. "Actually, although I hate to say anything negative about waterbeds, as far as sex goes, well, that's not the best part."

'But they enliven people's spirits . . .'

Man-powered airplanes not practical

PASADENA, Calif. (AP) — The winner of an $87,500 British prize for designing a man-powered plane cheerfully admits his invention is impractical. But he hopes his idea will become a popular form of recreation.

Paul MacCready, an aerodynamics engineer, was told recently he had received the Royal Aeronautical Society's prize for designing the Gossamer Condor.

After two unsuccessful attempts, a bicycle racer on Aug. 23 piloted the primitive, pedal-powered plane along the Society's prescribed three-mile figure-eight course, set up at Shafter Airport in rural Kern County.

"Man-powered airplanes aren't practical," he said, "but they may enliven people's spirits. They can use them for recreation like sailboats.

"People are realizing that we're at last achieving a goal that man has had for thousands of years, and that has been neglected since power began being put into aircraft," MacCready said. "A lot of other goals have been achieved in between. But now at last this one also has been accomplished."

MacCready said the plane still was not perfected, but he said when it is, average bicyclists will be able to operate it.

British businessman and aviation enthusiast Henry Kremer offered the 5,000-pound prize 18 years ago to anyone who could design a man-powered aircraft. The prize money has been steadily increased since then.

In the first successful flight, Bryan Allen, 24, flew the 70-pound craft for 7½ minutes around the course, clearing 10-foot pylons at the start and finish.

MacCready, president of a Pasadena energy and environmental research firm called AeroVironment, attributes his success to his departure from tradition.

"Virtually everyone else did it conventionally," he explained. "They were trapped into making elegant, streamlined vehicles that took thousands of hours to build and thousands of dollars to repair."

In contrast, MacCready said his crudity allowed him to do 12 substantial revisions on his craft within a year.

The plane, with a 96-foot wingspan, is built of superstrength "Mylar" plastic ribbed with aluminum tubing, bordered by light plastic and held together with piano wire.

The pilot propels the vehicle by pedaling a bicycle chain which turns a propellor behind the cockpit. The plane is maneuvered with a handle that elevates a smaller, frontal wing.

"If people had used the same approach, they could have done this in 1915 or 1925," said MacCready.

The father of waterbed

Jello-bed was interesting, but not a path to riches

By STEPHEN FOX
AP Business Writer

LOS ANGELES (AP) — Inventing the waterbed didn't make Charlie Hall rich or famous, but it did leave him with some interesting memories involving Jello.

Now 34, Hall was a design student living in San Francisco's Haight-Ashbury district when he came up with the forerunner of the waterbed 10 years ago. His invention, actually a vinyl bag filled with 300 pounds of Jello and styrene pellets, "was interesting but not successful, because you needed a forklift to move it."

There were other problems. The bag developed a leak and Jello began oozing into the downstairs apartment. Hall decided it had to go.

"There was all this goo mixed with styrene beads," he recalls, "I was afraid it would clog the toilet and I couldn't just throw it out. So I ended up taking it out at night in little bags and putting them in garbage cans at the beach."

Hall persevered, substituting water for Jello and adding a frame and heater. An art gallery invited him to show his invention and he came up with an eight-foot square waterbed covered in red velvet and dubbed "The Pleasure Pit."

"It was a big hit," he said, "I thought the merits of the waterbed would be seen immediately."

It didn't work out that way. Waterbeds, says Hall, were viewed as part of the "Hashbury" hippie culture, another example of California craziness.

"People saw these undulations and there were all these hippie and sex connotations," he said. "Actually, although I hate to say anything negative about waterbeds, as far as sex goes, well, that's not the best part. Waterbeds are for sleeping."

Hall and members of what is now a $135-million-a-year industry are fighting "waterbed misconceptions" through a public relations campaign which the American Waterbed Council says "is designed to achieve the AWC's goal of obtaining consumer waterbed acceptance by skillful use of the media." The campaign, launched here this week, will also "counter negative publicity such as the current water shortage in California," the AWC says.

Hall, whose own waterbed company went bankrupt, never made much money from his patent. He has since returned to inventing and has marketed several other products. But he also leaves his Bay Area home for frequent waterbed promotions, which he describes as "a bit of a different thing."

Waterbeds account for about four per cent of national bed sales today, the AWC says, with 15 per cent of California's 20 million residents supposedly floating on them each night. Heavier vinyl and improved construction methods have eliminated leakage problems and today an "average" waterbed and accessories costs between $500 and $800. Water is not included.

Walkers coming to mall

Walker's of Long Beach is coming to the Pomona Mall on Thursday.

The Walker philosophy is based on giving customers the most for their money by eliminating operational frills but not product quality.

Walker's of Long Beach has an enviable 43-year reputation as a merchandiser of high quality fashions. The new Pomona Mall store (located in the former Nash building) features a complete selection of ladies dresses and sportswear, coats, suits, lingerie and accessories as well as a fully-stocked men's department.

Reliable replacement sought for dwindling resource

Fears of natural gas shortage prompts search for alternatives

By MARTIN MERZER
AP Business Writer

COLUMBUS, Ohio (AP) — Dean Sweet, like hundreds of American business executives, saw only two choices during last year's severe natural gas shortage. He could make arrangements for another fuel — or he could close up shop.

"We had a 30 percent curtailment last year, and it was mighty cold," said Sweet, who owns a company in Ohio which makes grain storage equipment. "Necessity is the mother of invention, so we scrambled around and bought 15 oil-fired space heaters."

But that was just a temporary measure to get through last winter's bitter cold, and this winter, too, if the anticipated gas shortage materializes. Sweet still is searching for a reliable, inexpensive and permanent replacement for natural gas, a declining resource.

Federal officials estimate that natural gas provides 40 per cent of all industrial heat and power in the United States, and hundreds, perhaps thousands of companies are in the process of switching to alternate fuels. There has been no survey to determine the number.

With winter approaching, some gas companies already have announced curtailments for large industrial users. Numerous factories in the Midwest, where the crisis was most severe last winter, and elsewhere are being forced by necessity — and, in a few cases, government edict — to switch from natural gas to other fuels.

The alternatives — all of which have drawbacks — are diverse, ranging from oil and coal to more esoteric fuels such as synthetic gas and garbage, including corn husks and other agricultural wastes. Some firms even are drilling for their own supplies of natural gas.

The plant, a 30-acre complex about 50 miles from Columbus, turns out 230 buses and trucks daily, using 3,000 employes on two shifts.

International Harvester has been told by the local utility that it will get no gas at all for heating the plant this winter. So, like several other large companies, it is searching for its own gas.

Seventeen wells have been drilled in southeastern Ohio at a cost of $2.5 million, and the firm hopes to produce enough gas to keep its Springfield plant and three others running all winter.

"The severity differs from point to point in the country," said Mike Petersen, International Harvester's Chicago based manager of energy operations. "But in Ohio, it's the worst. As a consequence, Ohio is on the leading edge of dealing with it."

Many in the state, which gets 45 percent of its wealth and 34 percent of its employment from manufacturing, blame Columbia Gas of Ohio for the situation. They say most other areas were better able to withstand last winter's crunch than those served by Columbia.

Utility officials blame the federal and state governments for delays in granting approval for gas storage facilities and emergency purchases of gas. The company says additional storage facilities have been located, and only large plants should suffer curtailments this winter.

In the past few years, most major corporations have assigned top executives to find new sources of industrial energy.

"Energy is such a very significant part of our activities, and the economics are such, that you can't afford to stand still," said Wally Allaire, corporate director for energy resources at Allied Chemical Corp. in Morristown, N.J. "I report to the president of the company, and that's true in all of the biggies."

Allied, like other chemical companies, can't do much about shortages of gas and oil "feedstocks" from which chemicals are made. But Allied has done something about the heating in its several dozen plants. Each has installed a system that can burn oil in place of natural gas.

"It cost us several million by the time we got through," Allaire said. "But it paid off last year. We would have had to shut down."

Many other firms are switching to oil. Demand for the two most common forms of industrial fuel oil was up 11 percent and 21 percent this past August as companies began stockpiling for the winter.

But another oil shortage is always possible and oil is more expensive than natural gas. So some firms are installing, and many more are considering, coal-burning equipment.

Coal accounts for 90 percent of the nation's fossil fuel supplies. But last year, it was the source of only 18 percent of industrial energy, and that was half of coal usage in 1955 — before clean-air considerations forced many firms to switch from coal to gas and oil.

Industrial conversion to coal is key to President

Reports reveal economic life

NEW YORK (AP) — Just when a lot of people were getting accustomed to the notion that the nation's economy was sinking into a quagmire, a few reports were issued that tend to riddle the notion:

—Machine tool orders, or orders for equipment that will be used in making other goods, spurted in August after declining in June.

—The level of orders at the nation's factories rose in August for the first time since May.

—The Index of Leading Economic Indicators also rose in the same months after having declined for two months earlier this year — and three straight until the July figures were revised from a minus to a plus. What all these indicators share in common is the future; they are all indicators of further economic activity. They represent commitments to that activity.

There is additional evidence of some underlying strength in some of the other individual indicators. Capital spending plans are moving up. So are building permits. Again, these are signs of activity to come.

It doesn't take much to change the kaleidoscopic pattern of the economy, just a one-month shakeup of the indicators. The change can develop with remarkable speed.

The stock market, for instance, is one of those leading economic indicators. When other components of the leading index show strength the stock market is inclined to rise as a consequence. And in rising, it contributes further to a rise in the index, of which it is a component.

A one-month rise after three months of weakness might not be enough to dispel the fog and drizzle that has been dampening Wall Street's outlook, but it should quiet for the time being some of the fog horns of disaster.

For months, their gloomy voices have been telling a tale of woe to come, of an international economy mired in recession, of inflation raging throughout the world, of problems beyond our ability to deal with.

To deny there are serious problems is to close the eyes to reality.

To name a few: teen-age unemployment, the plight of the debt-ridden poorer nations, the difficulty of maintaining free trade when jobs are lost to unfair competition, overregulation, underutilization of capacity.

The stock market, which is supposed to represent the investment community's attitude toward the future, is a special case of its own, depressed for reasons that many experts are at a loss to explain.

There are serious social and economic problems that seldom catch the headlines. The difficulties involved in starting a small business, for example. The lack of training programs to facilitate the employment of youngsters.

But to gather all the problems into a patchwork quilt and then try to spread it over the entire economy is just as unrealistic.

Those recent expressions of confidence in the economic future, for example, cannot be covered by the blanket. They protrude.

New orders at the nation's factories, a healthy level of building permits, orders for new machine tools, and financial commitments to new plants and equipment are the reality — or else the money so committed doesn't mean thing.

Expanded cable TV predicted

SAN DIEGO (AP) — An advertising executive says almost one-third of all Americans will have cable television in their homes by 1981 with the trend cutting into revenues of TV networks.

The prediction is made by Edward N. Ney, board chairman of Young & Rubicam, Inc., of New York. He spoke Monday to the American Advertising Agencies Association of which he also is chairman.

"We think the cable TV industry advertising availability will hurt the large TV networks and might hurt some magazines, too," Ney said in an interview later.

But the expanding Cable TV industry is an attractive alternative to the big networks which are increasing time charges, said Ney.

There are 12 million cable TV subscribers in the United States, "a 17 percent penetration in the market," he said.

Natural gas shortage fears prompt search—

Carter's energy program, and although the government can order large plants to convert to coal, it has moved slowly. Only 60 plants have received such orders.

The conversion is expensive. "It's not the kind of decision you make for economic reasons,' said a Goodyear Tire & Rubber Co. official.

Goodyear is spending $12 million for coal-burning equipment at a tire plant in Lawton, Okla. An oil or gas boiler would cost $2.5 million.

"In 1974, we had to switch back to coal," said plant manager George Rayer. "It was simply a matter of not having any other fuels to use."

The company received federal permission to return to coal after promising to construct an $8 million anti-pollution system. Now it uses 400-700 tons of coal each day.

"We were lucky," Rayer said. "We already had the coalburning equipment, and it only needed some adjustments. And we're near steady supplies of coal."

But many other firms, big and small, are not so lucky. International Harvester, which never used coal at its Springfield assembly plant, estimates that it will cost $15-20 million to convert.

To help offset the cost of building coal-burning facilities, Allied, International Harvester and other large firms are considering proposals to build huge plants in cooperation with other nearby factories. All the plants in an area would share costs and energy.

Synthetic gas, produced from coal, once was widely used. But the development of cheaper natural gas killed the coal gas industry.

Now, several firms are gearing up to produce the gas again, but there isn't much of a market because coal gas costs more than natural gas.

Garbage is also becoming an industrial energy alternative to gas, oil and coal, and it burns cleaner than the others.

So Bill Smith, the superintendent of facilities, began looking for an alternate fuel supply. Coal-burning equipment was found to be too expensive, and oil supplies too unreliable.

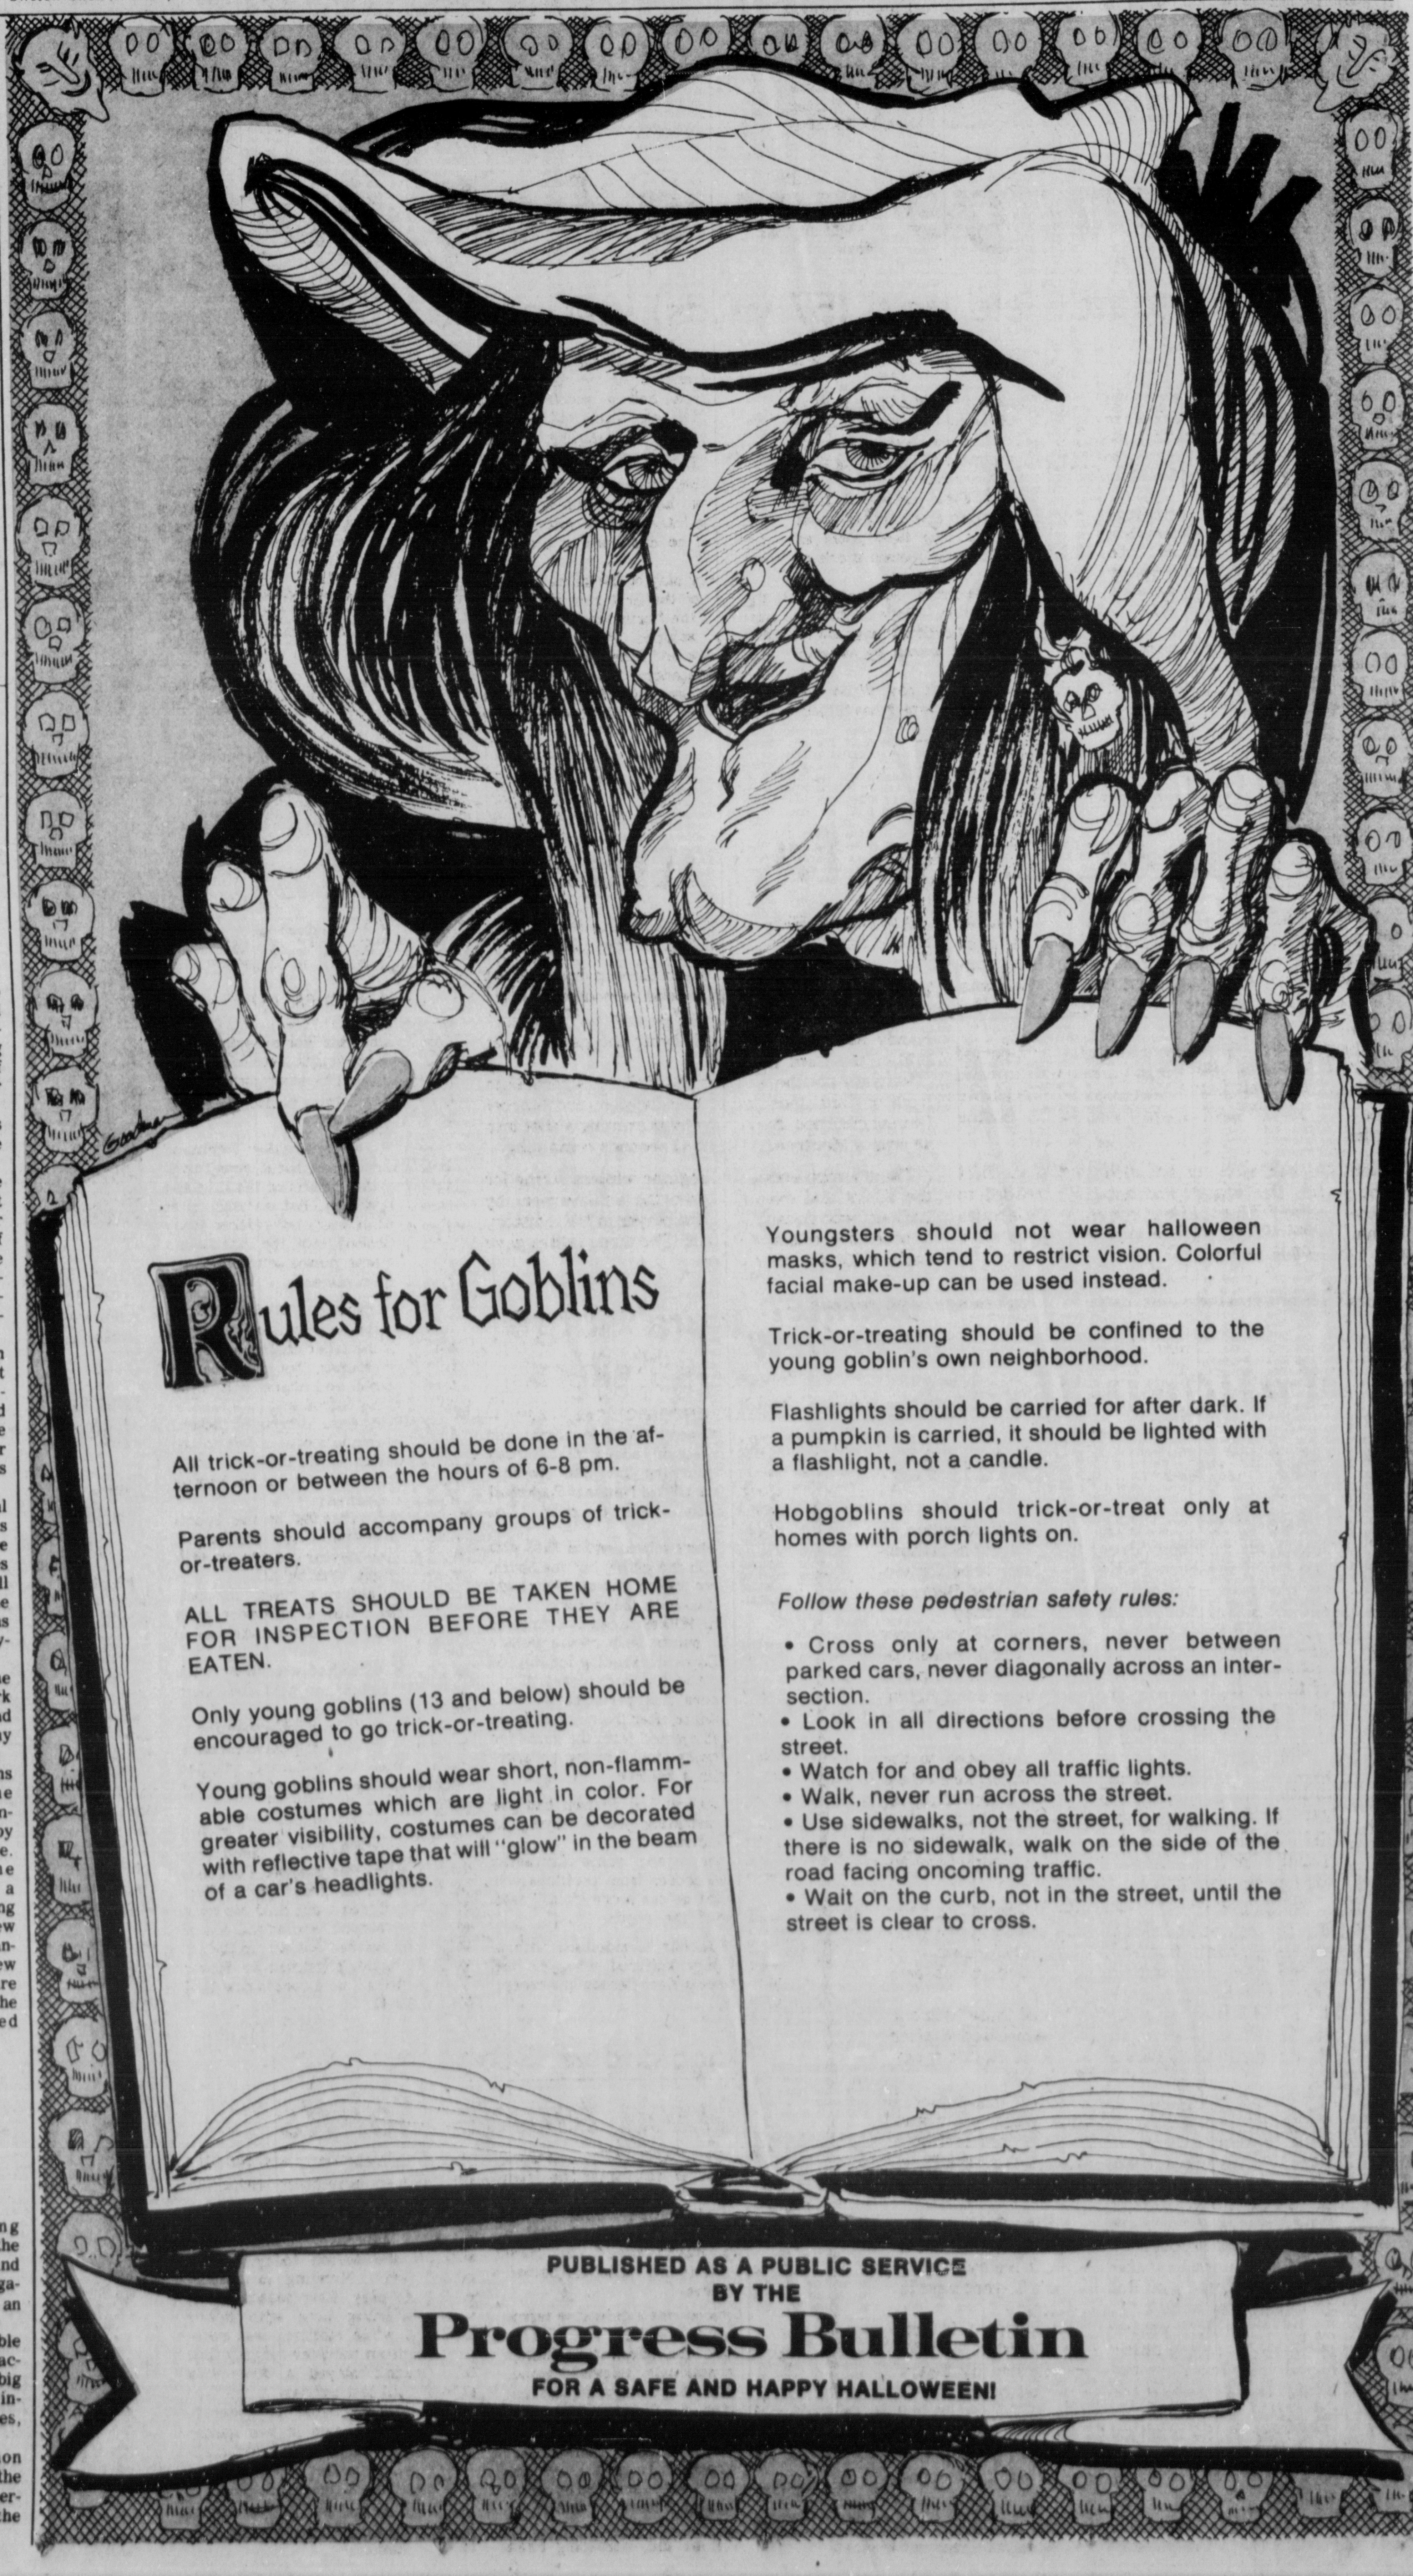
Then Smith learned about a new type of boiler that can take practically any waste material, burn it without pollution and convert the energy to heat.

The system is called a "pyrolitic incinerator." Unlike ordinary incinerators that burn garbage with plenty of oxygen, the pyrolitic system uses an oxygen-lean atmosphere that produces a gas. The gases then are burned at temperatures so high they burn their own smoke.

Nationwide, about 100 firms are using the devices. But only certain plants can use them without re-piping their heating systems completely, because they must be meshed with systems of special size and design.

At Rockwell, a $500,000 system was installed last summer and is working perfectly, Smith said. It will pay for itself in fuel and refuse-hauling savings within four years, Rockwell's system is one of the few that also can produce air-conditioning.

"We have free fuel," Smith said. "It burns all the refuse we produce, and neighboring plants deliver their garbage to us."



Rules for Goblins

All trick-or-treating should be done in the afternoon or between the hours of 6-8 pm.

Parents should accompany groups of trick-or-treaters.

ALL TREATS SHOULD BE TAKEN HOME FOR INSPECTION BEFORE THEY ARE EATEN.

Only young goblins (13 and below) should be encouraged to go trick-or-treating.

Young goblins should wear short, non-flammable costumes which are light in color. For greater visibility, costumes can be decorated with reflective tape that will "glow" in the beam of a car's headlights.

Youngsters should not wear halloween masks, which tend to restrict vision. Colorful facial make-up can be used instead.

Trick-or-treating should be confined to the young goblin's own neighborhood.

Flashlights should be carried for after dark. If a pumpkin is carried, it should be lighted with a flashlight, not a candle.

Follow these pedestrian safety rules:

- Cross only at corners, never between parked cars, never diagonally across an intersection.
- Look in all directions before crossing the street.
- Watch for and obey all traffic lights.
- Walk, never run across the street.
- Use sidewalks, not the street, for walking. If there is no sidewalk, walk on the side of the road facing oncoming traffic.
- Wait on the curb, not in the street, until the street is clear to cross.

UCLA is back in 'Run for the Roses'

By DON BRADLEY
PB Staff Writer

LOS ANGELES — The "Back-to-the-Wall Gang" suddenly has a lot of company.

UCLA, after squeezing out a 20-12 win over Washington Saturday, finds itself one of four team Pac 8 teams with only one loss.

The biggest roar of the game went up from the 38,692 in attendance when, with 6:55 left in the contest, it was announced that California had upset USC, 17-14, at Berkeley.

"The race is a race once again," said UCLA coach Terry Donahue. "I tell you that was a tremendous job by California. I didn't think they'd come back (from last week's loss to UCLA).

"We're back in it, but we're no more in it or out of it than we were last week, quite frankly. If we don't win every game we're out of it."

Stanford, having played one more conference game than the rest of the contenders, is in front right now with a 4-1 record. UCLA, USC and Washington all have 3-1 marks.

But if any team has a break in the schedule, it is the Bruins. UCLA faces Oregon and Oregon St. away and USC at the Coliseum.

USC hosts Stanford at the Coliseum Saturday, is away at Washington and meets UCLA. Stanford, after USC, has a non conference match with San Jose State and then has its annual "big game" with Cal.

Washington is at Cal Saturday, hosts USC and then closes with cross-state rival Washington St.

"All I'm going to do is prepare our team for Oregon," Donohue said. "We've got a problem psychologically because we've played three games in a row against real good opponents and they've taken a lot out of us emotionally."

The Washington game was much closer than the score would indicate. It was 3-0, UCLA at the first quarter, 6-6 at the half and 13-12, UCLA after three quarters with all 12 Washington points coming on field goals by Steve Robbins who tied a Pac 8 game record.

But the Huskies had the momentum and had scored the last two times they had their hands on the ball, the last one set up by former San Dimas star Wayne Moses' interception at midfield.

It was a short, 24-yard punt by freshman Aaron Wilson that set up the clincher for the Bruins.

Taking over at the Washington 35, James Owens and Theotis Brown alternated at running the ball into the Huskies' end zone.

It was Owens for five yards, Brown for eight, Owens for one, Brown for four and Owens for four to give the Bruins a fourth-and-one at the 13.

Brown blasted through right tackle for 13 yards and burst into the end zone standing up.

"We needed to build up confidence on our team and every once in a while, you have to go for it first down instead of a field goal) and that's what we did," explained Donohue. "We were just going for the first down."

Moses, Washington's right cornerback surprised everybody in the Coliseum when he caught Owens, a 9.5 sprinter FROM BEHIND when the UCLA speedburner had broken into the clear for what looked like a sure touchdown in the second quarter.

But the former San Dimas star caught up with and tackled Owens after a 47-yard gain to the Washington 25. But UCLA eventually settled for a field goal or the game might not have been as close.

"I couldn't let him get a touchdown," said Moses. "I had to catch him some way. It was just one of those situations where you go as fast as you need to go. He was on his way."

Moses, who also played basketball and was a trackman for the Saints, is concentrating on football at Washington.

"It's too cold up there to do anything else," he grinned then sobered as his thoughts returned to the Pac 8 race. "We're still in the race, but we've got to win every game now."

If there was one key, it might have been the seven penalties (for 87 yards) the Huskies drew (as compared to three for 25 yards for UCLA). Three of the penalties resulted from running into kicker Frank Corral.

"They went after Corral probably figuring they could intimidate him," said Donahue. "Frank did a good job keeping his poise and did a much better job, particularly on kickoffs."

Corral boomed the ball into or through the end zone on all his kickoffs and averaged 39.8 yards on four punts.

Northridge gives Poly boot

Record field goal (57 yards) just one of four

By BILL LANGLEY
PB Sports Editor

The record-breaking foot of John Dohle was too much for Cal Poly to overcome Saturday night as the Broncos' losing streak stretched to eight in a 19-0 blanking by Cal State Northridge.

Dohle broke two Northridge records in leading the Matadors (5-2) past the punchless Broncos, who have dropped six games this season and the final two last year after recording their last win at Northridge.

The senior set a school mark for the longest field goal with an amazing 57-yard boot in the third quarter to surpass the previous record of 55 set by Jose Ballina against Poly in 1974.

Dohle kicked four three-pointers — the others being for 35, 47 and 38 yards — to surpass his own record of three in a game set last year against Cal State Fullerton.

A Kellogg Field crowd of 2,500 didn't have much else to cheer about except for the long field goals as neither team could sustain much of an offensive effort.

Behind freshman quarterback Gordy Bohannon, Poly actually enjoyed its most productive game of the frustrating c season by earning 257 yards.

However, it didn't pay off on the scoreboard as Poly, which has tallied only 42 points in six games, suffered its third shutout of the campaign.

Bohannon had a good night in statistics in completing 9 of 16 passes for 107 yards and leading Poly in rushing with 67 yards on 15 carries.

But the freshman from South Pasadena had the misfortune of throwing interceptions just when it appeared he had Poly on a scoring drive.

The key play of the game came at the end of the first half when Poly drove to the Northridge nine only to have it stopped when Bohannon's pass in the end zone was intercepted by the Matadors' Dave Vierra.

Northridge ran off 80 offensive plays to Poly's 56 with the Matadors accounting for 376 offensive yards. Quarterback Paul Feuerborn connected on 10 of 18 passes for 180 yards while Mike Maglione led the ground attack with 102 yards.

Maglione scored the game's only touchdown on an one-yard run with 13:10 left in the game two games after Feuerborn completed a 59-yard screen pass to the Bronco three.

Wide receiver Teddy Myles enjoyed another good night for Poly with six receptions for 66 yards but he was able to catch only one in the second haif.

Poly travels to Cerritos College next Saturday to play Cal State Fullerton.

First loss for Canadiens

Kings surprise Montreal

MONTREAL (AP) — Gene Carr and Vic Venasky scored in a 68-second span of the third period Saturday night as the Los Angeles Kings recorded a stunning 5-3 victory over Montreal, handing the Canadiens their first loss of the National Hockey League season.

Although Guy Lafleur scored three first-period goals for Montreal, the Kings came back to hand the Canadiens their first defeat at home in 38 games since Oct. 30, 1976, when they lost to the Boston Bruins.

Montreal had won six and tied two in its first eight games this season and appeared headed to another victory when Lafleur converted a Jacques Lemaire pass for his sixth goal of the season after just 17 seconds of play.

After Ernie Hicke tied it for Los Angeles, Lafleur scored twice more—again on assists by Lemaire.

But former Canadien Glenn Goldup made it 3-2 with the only goal of the second period, then Carr broke behind the Montreal defense with a pass from Randy Manery and scored, tying the game 3-3 at 7:20 of the third period.

Venasky got the winning goal from a scramble in front of Canadiens goalie Ken Dryden, and Marcel Dionne clinched the victory by skimming a shot into an empty Montreal net with 12 seconds remaining.

The triumph ended a fourgame winless string for the Kings and overshadowed the achievement by Lafleur, who became the 51st player in NHL history to score more than 250 goals. The three tallies gave Lafleur 251 for his career.

Zarate is king via KO

LOS ANGELES (AP) — Undefeated Carlos Zarate of Mexico City retained his World Boxing Council bantamweight championship Saturday night by stopping previously unbeaten Danilo Batista of Brazil in the sixth round.

Zarate, 116½, had taken command in the third round, but it wasn't until the sixth that he scored the first and only knockdown. Batista was up at the count of four, but referee Rudy Jordan looked into the Brazilian's eyes and determined he was too badly hurt to continue.

The end came at 1:28 of the stanza. Batista, 116¼, from Sao Paulo, had outfought the taller champion for the first two rounds, but then Zarate took control and there was little doubt of the outcome.

The 5-foot-8 titlist brought the end with a combination of a left to the midsection, a left to the head, and a right to the head that put his 5-foot-4 foe on the canvas.

Under California rules, the outcome was ruled a knockout even though the 25-year-old Batista was on his feet.

The Brazilian had won all 26 of his previous fights and held the South American 118-pound title.

The title bout was scheduled for 15 rounds, and was the fourth championship defense by Zarate, who had scored knockouts also in each of the others.

Golden Bears shock Trojans

BERKELEY, Calif. (AP) — An interception by California's Anthony Green with 51 seconds remaining killed Southern California's final hope for victory, and the emotionally charged Golden Bears upset the 10thranked Trojans 17-14 Saturday.

Southern Cal's offense, averaging 458 yards per game, converted on only four of 17 thirddown situations as the Trojans lost their first Pacific-8 game of the football season, and the first in John Robinson's two years as head coach. It was also USC's third loss in its last four games.

The Bears, winning the game dedicated to the memory of former Cal star Joe Roth, broke a 7-7 tie in the third period when Jim Breech kicked an 18-yard field goal. They increased their lead to 17-7 early in the final period when quarterback Charlie Young scored on a oneyard sneak to complete an 80-yard touchdown drive.

"There's a special feeling and respect we have for Joe. He wasn't the soapbox type of guy or a flag-waver. We had a moment of silence before we went on the field and each individual Joe in his own way," said Coach Mike White.

"It was a silent tribute, not one of those 'win one for the Gipper' type of things," White added after the victory in the game dedicated to Roth's memory.

"We're a very much uptight team right now," said Trojan Coach John Robinson, whose team was trying to bounce back from a 49-19 loss to Notre Dame. But he added, "We're still in the Rose Bowl race. We're 3-1, and if we win the rest of our games we'll go to the Rose Bowl."

The Trojans got a big break when Cal receiver Floyd Eddings dropped a pass at the Southern Cal 20-yard line, then kept their hopes alive by driving 84 yards and scoring on Rob Hertel's 31-yard pass to Calvin Sweeney with 2:01 remaining.

Southern Cal took possession again with 1:04 left, but Hertel threw one pass incomplete from the USC 32, and the next attempt was deflected by Bears linebacker David Shaw and picked off by defensive back Green near midfield.

The Trojans, 5-3 in all games, are 3-1 in the Pac-8 and in a hectic race for the Rose Bowl bid. Cal made its overall record 6-2, but is 2-2 in the conference.

Spurs' surge tops Lakers

SAN ANTONIO, Tex. (AP) — Larry Kenon scored 36 points and George Gervin added 32 Saturday night, sparking the San Antonio Spurs to a 129-118 National Basketball Association victory over Los Angeles.

The Lakers moved within 95-93 with 8:21 left in the game, but the Spurs, who never trailed, ran off 17 straight points, clinching the victory.

Jamaal Wilkes paced Los Angeles with 29 points and rookie center James Edwards, subbing for injured Kareem AbdulJabbar, scored 20.

The Spurs' final period surge came just a minute after their coach, Doug Moe, was ejected from the game for two technical fouls during an argument with a referee.

The Lakers' Lou Hudson had the often frustrating job of trying to guard Gervin.

"Gervin made some fantastic shots. He scores from positions you don't think he can score from," said Hudson of the chore.

Abdul-Jabbar is sidelined with a hand injury suffered when he hit Milwaukee's Kent Benson in a recent game.

Youngblood vs. Scott

Rams tackle Saints

NEW ORLEANS (AP) — If Jack Youngblood is still smarting from unkind remarks, Bobby Scott's in for a long afternoon today when Youngblood and the rest of the Los Angeles Rams meet the New Orleans Saints in a National Football League game.

Youngblood was a defensive terror last Monday when the Rams demolished the Minnesota Vikings 35-3 in a nationally televised game. But earlier this season he was not playing up to form, and a Los Angeles columnist pointed that out.

"Football's a mental game," said a Rams spokesman. "Jack saw the article and said something like, 'Well, I guess I have something to prove.'"

Prove it he did, harassing Fran Tarkenton mercilessly and catching the veteran scrambler twice for sacks.

Scott — for seven years a backup to Archie Manning — gets his second start of the season today. And it comes when Manning is healthy enough to play. Last season, Scott shared starting time with Bobby Douglass while Manning was recuperating from shoulder surgery. But Scott hadn't played a down this season until last Sunday.

With Manning able to generate only one touchdown in two games and slowed by an ankle injured in a 7-14 loss to Los Angeles two weeks ago, Scott got the nod against St. Louis.

He was 16-35-2 for 285 yards and three touchdowns in a 49-31 loss to the Cardinals.

Mounties tough for Falcons, 13-0

By JIM McCONNELL
PB Staff Writer

Mt. San Antonio College kept its South Coast Conference title hopes very much alive Saturday night with an impressive 13-0 shutout of visiting Cerritos.

The victory leaves MSAC with a 3-1 SCC record, and a 5-3 overall mark. Fullerton stayed atop the SCC and unbeaten on the season with a 27-16 win over Orange Coast.

MSAC and Fullerton (8-0) will meet in two weeks in what will undoubtedly be the title decider in the conference. The Mounties will have a bye this week.

MSAC did virtually everything right Saturday in disposing of Cerritos (1-3, 2-5). The Mounties, displaying a potent ground attack, outgained the Falcons 412-196 in offensive yardage and 21-9 in first downs.

Mal Eaton's crew really put it together on defense to register the shutout. That defensive unit held the Falcons' top offensive weapons, quarterback Kevin Hamilton and halfback Jim Copeland, in check all night long.

Hamilton was limited to eight completions in 18 attempts, for a net of only 70 yards. Defensive back Jerome Covington swiped two of Hamilton's tosses.

Copeland, the conference's leading rusher going into the contest, was held to only 75 yards on 16 carries, most of those in the fourth quarter when the outcome was already decided.

Eaton shuttled in eight different backs in his offensive alignment, and all responded.

Quarterbacks Butch Stocking and Grady Hubbard, passing only sparingly, still managed to hit on a combined eight-of-14 for 106 yards.

Garey High product Stan Webster had a big night despite playing only three quarters. Webster rushed for 86 yards to lead all backs, and scored the game's only touchdown on a picture-perfect 33-yard blast early in the first quarter.

Webster climaxed MSAC's first possession of the night by skirting left end and outrunning the Cerritos' secondary for the score. MSAC marched 83 yards in nine plays for the TD, an earlier Stocking-to-Webster pass completion keeping things cooking.

MSAC was unable to score another touchdown in the game, but controlled the ball, the clock and the tempo of the game thereafter.

Stocking booted two field goals, one in the second and one in the third quarter, to pad the MSAC lead.

Cerritos had a couple scoring chances but the MSAC defense rose to the occasion.

Late in the first half, the Falcons marched to the Mountie 21, but Covington stepped in front of the intended receiver to pick off a Hamilton pass in the end zone to stop that drive.

Quotes

Louisville Coach Vince Gibson: "We learned something — compared to Alabama, we're not a very good football team."

Citrus, Chaffey triumph

Chaffey College rushed for three touchdowns and 323 yards enroute to drubbing San Bernardino Valley, 21-7, to highlight junior college football action Saturday night.

Gary Carr picked up 169 yards on 34 carries, four of them coming on a 4-yard touchdown scamper in the first quarter. The dash ended a 45-yard Panther drive covering 10 plays and provided Chaffey with a quick 7-0 advantage.

After San Bernardino tied the score Don Hargett, former quarterback at San Dimas High, directed a 61-yard Chaffey march in nine plays, sneaking the final yard himself.

Marcus Jennings, who also raced over the century mark (120 yards on 20 carries), picked up the final Chaffey score in the final period.

Chaffey thus improved its Mission Conference record to 3-1 and its overall mark to 6-1.

However, Citrus scored its fourth Mission Conference win in as many outings Saturday night as it decisioned visiting Southwestern, 17-14.

Beginning at the Southwestern 40-yard line, quarterback Brian Johnson, making his first start for the Owls, led his team to a fourth down on the Apache eight.

Rolling to his right, Johnson, amidst heavy pursuit, lofted a cross field aerial to Dave Kirby for the winning score with 2:44 showing on the clock.

Charles Cole, formerly of Pomona High, was the Owls' leading rusher, recording 65 yards on 16 carries.

First win of season

Stags defeat Sagehens

By MIKE BROSSART
PB Staff Writer

Claremont-Mudd's Stags punched across the winning touchdown on their first possession and went on to down crosstown rival Pomona-Pitzer, 13-0, Saturday night on Pomona's Alumni Field.

A low snap caused a 15-yard punt by the Sagehens after the game's first series and gave the Stags the ball on Pomona-Pitzer's 30-yard line. Tailback Jim Reed scored on a three-yard run — his fifth carry on the seven-play drive — and Dave Goldstein's kick gave the visitors a 7-0 lead with less than five minutes gone.

Neither team was able to muster much offense from that time on until C-M quarterback Don Chester hit freshman Brian Bullock with a 30-yard touchdown pass with less than a minute left in the third quarter to complete the scoring.

The win was the Stags' first in five games this season and Pomona-Pitzer's record fell to 0-5. The last time the Sagehens won an SCIAC football game was 1974, when quarterback Larry Cenotto led them to a 33-22 upset against Claremont-Mudd.

Both teams played solid defense Saturday night but the 'Hens killed themselves with turnovers — three lost fumbles and three interceptions — and some poor punt plays. Claremont-Mudd's Greg Palma intercepted two passes and Steve Schiro, a junior from Upland High, picked off the third.

The Stags were guilty of just one turnover, a first-quarter fumble.

C-M lost Reed to a charley horse late in the first period, after he had already amassed 63 yards on 14 carries. His replacement, freshman Blake Isaacson, rushed 26 times for 99 yards as the Stags piled up 225 rushing yards compared to the 'Hens' 69.

Chester, after failing to complete his two first-half passes, hit on his last six of seven second-half aerials for 107 yards. P-P quarterback Lyle Lansdell, bothered by a persistent pass rush, completed 12 of 28 with two interceptions and also had 107 yards passing.

Sophomore tight end Wayne Bergland of the 'Hens caught seven passes for 78 yards.

Collegiate football roundup

Top grid powers impressive

By The Associated Press

Texas, Ohio State, Oklahoma and Notre Dame all scored big points for their college football images with impressive victories Saturday.

Top-ranked Texas hammered No. 14 Texas Tech 26-0, No. 3 Ohio State smashed Wisconsin 42-0, fourth-ranked Oklahoma crushed Kansas State 42-7 and fifth-rated Notre Dame blasted Navy 43-10 in a day of few upsets.

Among the day's rare surprises was California's 17-14 victory over No. 10 Southern Cal.

Texas dazed Texas Tech on a 57-yard touchdown pass to Olympian Johnny "Lam" Jones, followed it with a 60-yard field goal by Russell Erxleben and applied the knockout punch on two scoring runs by Johnny "Ham" Jones.

The hard-earned Southwest Conference victory, before a sun-baked crowd of 78,809 fans in the Longhorns' Memorial Stadium, gave Texas a 7-0 record, and the distinction as the only unbeaten Top Twenty team.

Quarterback Rod Gerald and flanker Jim Harrell combined on a 79-yard scoring bomb on the second play of the game and third-ranked Ohio State went on to crush Wisconsin and keep its Big Ten Conference lead.

Ohio State's veteran, swift defense complemented the attack with four interceptions, two leading to touchdowns. The Buckeyes now have 21 interceptions for the season, 17 in the last five games.

Thomas Lott scored three touchdowns and Oklahoma's whippet-quick defense intercepted four passes, leading the Sooners over Kansas State. Oklahoma used its reserves after Lott's third-quarter score made it 28-0.

Quarterback Joe Montana passed for a career-high 260 yards, scored one touchdown and hit Dave Mitchell for another TD as Notre Dame beat Navy for the 14th straight year.

Quarterback Rick Leach set a Michigan career record for touchdown passes and tied a single game mark with three, leading the sixth-ranked Wolverines to a 23-6 Big Ten victory over Iowa.

Michael Forrest scored on runs of 23 and two yards and Steve Little boomed field goals of 52, 44 and 29 yards as eight-ranked Arkansas subdued Rice 30-7 in a Southwest Conference game.

Chuck Fusina shredded the nation's No. 1 pass defense for 192 yards and two touchdowns, and Matt Suhey smashed for three short scores as ninth-ranked Penn State walloped Miami, Fla. 49-7.

David Walker ran for 182 yards and hurled touchdown passes of 30 and 34 yards to Darrell Smith as 11th-ranked Texas A&M rallied to beat SMU 38-21.

Tom Sorley led 12th-ranked Nebraska to a 31-14 victory over Oklahoma State.

Olivares nets longshot win

ARCADIA, Calif. (AP) — Longshot Rescator grabbed an early lead and held on to win the $33,950 Alibhai Handicap at Santa Anita Saturday in a race dominated by longshots.

Rescator, with Frank Ovivares in the irons, ran 1 1/16 mile race in 1:43 4/5, paying $21.40, $10 and $5.20.

Rescator, carrying 113 pounds, saved ground after breaking fast and raced strongly in the home stretch to hold off a challenge by another longshot, Explosivo, ridden by Fernando Mena.

Prep roundup

Saints, Q's fall

San Dimas High and Don Antonio Lugo both suffered setbacks in Saturday night's prep football action.

The Saints fell to Royal Oak, 19-7, and the Conquistadores were nipped by Nelles of Whittier, 14-13.

Royal Oak (4-1 in Hacienda League play and 4-3 overall) scored three first-half touchdowns before the host Saints (1-4, 1-6) were able to get on the scoreboard in the fourth quarter.

Jack Bron scored two of the Royals' TDs on runs of 2 and 3 yards and Dennis Cunnynham tallied on a 15-yard scamper.

Nelles scored a TD with 8:08 left and added a two-point conversion to edge Don Lugo. Don Pree, running for the twopointer, fumbled the ball into the end zone but fell on it for the winning conversion.

Nelles scored that winning touchdown on a 10-yard pass from George Hernandez to Tim Bouldin. Hernandez had earlier hit Richard Moore with a 10-yard scoring toss in the third quarter after the host Conquistadores had built a 13-0 halftime lead.

Don Lugo used field goals of 35 and 30 yards by Luis Zendejas and an 8-yard TD pass from Bob Malins to Joe Campos plus Zendejas' PAT kick to generate that lead.

The Conquistadores are now 3-2-1 on the year and Nelles s 5-1.

Poets blank Leos

WHITTIER — Chris Terrazas' 20-yard scoring pass to Ray Chavez was the only points Whittier needed Saturday night as they went on to deal La Verne its second SCIAC loss, 13-0.

The aerial strike came with 1:40 showing on the first quarter clock and capped a 56-yard Poet march.

Terrazas struck again in the third period on a 28-yard hookup with Rick Alkire, but the score was not necessary as Whittier's defense held La Verne at bay.

The Poets allowed just 79 rushing yards to the Leos, whose rushing tandem of Ben Morrow and Brad Frick were held to just 45 and 42 yards, respectively.

The closest the Leopards came to putting points on the scoreboard was midway through the fourth stanza when they recovered a fumbled fair catch of a punt on the Whittier 26.

However, three plays could net only six more yards and La Verne turned the ball over when a fourth down pass failed.

By, winning, Whittier enhanced its SCIAC mark to 2-0 (6-1 overall) while La Verne fell to 0-2 and 2-4.

TRAFFIC JAM — A whole herd of high school cross-country runners prepare to tackle the rugged Mt. San Antonio College course Saturday in the start of one of many heat races in the mammoth MSAC Invitational. More than 250 schools particiapted in the event.

Two up at Pensacola

Thompson smiles

PENSACOLA, Fla. (AP) — Leonard Thompson broke out of a three-way tie with a solid, six-under-par 65, established a two-stroke lead Saturday and confidently looked ahead to a victory in the $125,000 Pensacola Open Golf Tournament.

"The time is here," Thompson said after he'd posted a 54hole total of 200, 13 under par for three trips over the 5,549 yard Pensacola Country Club course.

"This is the time to see if I'm man enough, have the game enough, to bring it home. I've only won once in all the time I've been out here and it's time to do it again.

Thompson, whose only previous victory came in the 1974 Jackie Gleason Classic, had a two-shot advantage over 22-year-old rookie Curtis Strange, a former national collegiate champ from Wake Forest, and Jim Simons, tied at 202.

"You just can't predict anything like that," said Strange after his spectacular putting exhibition had produced a 64, the best round of the tournament. He one-putted 10 holes in a row, 11 for the day. Simons shot a 67 in the mild, clam, hazy weather.

It was another two shots back to a group of four at 204, little lefty Sam Adams, Dalny Edwards, Fuzzy Zoeller and Steve Melnyk. Adams had a 66, Edwards finished off a 65 with 29 on the back side, Zoeller and Melnyk had 67s in the ideal conditions.

Stags nab pool win

Claremont-Mudd pushed its SCIAC water polo record to a spotless 4-0 Saturday afternoon with an easy 16-6 triumph over visiting Whittier College.

Louie Caron led the Stags' scoring parade with four goals, while Paul Sanburg sparkled on defense with nine steals. The Stags' J.V. team also won, 10-0, over Whittier.

C-M will try to maintain its perfect conference mark on Wednesday, when it will travel to Occidental for a 4 p.m. match.

Johncock a winner on crash

PHOENIX, Ariz. (AP) — Gordon Johncock got a victory he wasn't sure he could save, when a crash on the final lap prevented Al Unser from making a desperate challenge in Saturday's Bobby Ball 150 for Indianapolis cars.

"I wasn't sure I was gonna be able to hold Al off that last lap," said Johncock, who lives in the Phoenix area. "I had to work pretty hard to stay in front."

Unser was directly behind Johncock the last 10 laps, and seemed to have enough power to pull up on Johncock. He was getting a bead on the leader when fourth-place runner Spike Gehlhausen got wide coming out of the fourth turn and tore into the guardrail along the length of the straightaway.

Johncock and Unser arrived on the scene a few seconds later and dodged through the debris. They ran nose to tail around another lap to the checkered flag.

Helix stuns top entrants

Helix High of San Diego upset both Eisenhower and Costa Mesa to win the Sweepstakes Team scoring at the Mt. San Antonio College cross country invitational Saturday.

Costa Mesa's John Gerhardt won the featured race in 14:56.5 but his team, with a cumulative time of 1:19:24.8, finished third to Helix (1:18:08.0) and Eisenhower (1:19:24.8).

Eisenhower's Chuck Assuma was second (14:57.3) and Helix's Rick Rose third (14:57.7).

Walnut placed 14th in varsity scoring to lead local teams.

The Mustangs' David Mendoza turned a 15:50.1 to lead his team's effort but Claremont's Locke Breaux ran second (to Mendoza's third) in the same race in 15:39.9.

Alta Loma's Randy Brown had the best time among local individuals, a 15:38.6 that placed him ninth in his race.

Pomona's Ed Allen won his race in 15:53.2, Damien's Tony Reyes was fifth in his race in 16:03 and Upland's Gary Borbon (16:10) and Keith Van Lieu (16:19) took sixth and ninth places, respectively, in their race.

No Jacksons among BB's free agents

NEW YORK (AP) — The second annual free-agent draft, a chance for other major league baseball clubs to spend like the New York Yankees for the purpose of winning like the world champions, will be held Friday with no $3 million player in the class of Reggie Jackson apparently available.

Statistically and charasmatically, there is no Jackson around this time. But there really is no certainty that the free enterprise system and the competition of some aggressive owners won't raise the price tag of some free-agent stars to Jacksonian proportions.

Jackson, of course, is Reginald Martinez Jackson, the plum of last year's free-agent crop who was picked by Yankee owner George Steinbrenner for $3 million over five years. Jackson, the Series Most Valuable Player, and pitcher Don Gullett, a $2 million free-agent acquisition, led the Yankees to their first world championship in 15 years.

That success means Steinbrenner's $5 million outlay was money well spent. "You have to spend money to make money," says Steinbrenner.

On the other side of the spectrum were the California Angels, who dipped into owner Gene Autry's saddle bags three times and paid out $5.25 million for Joe Rudi, Don Baylor and Bobby Grich and still finished fifth in the American League West.

Both the Yankees and the Angels are expected to be swinging away again this time, while several other teams will be given the take sign. Reasons range from financial austerity to a belief in building from the bottom through the farm system to a desire to play with a pat hand—whether that hand shows four aces or a couple of jokers.

As of last Thursday, there were 85 players who had declared their intentions of testing the free-agent waters. That figure included 20 full-time major leaguers from 1977 who were unsigned and, thus far, 18 six-year veterans whose contracts have expired and who have notified the players association of their intention to become free. The rest were minor leaguers, who weren't expected to receive much attention.

A handful of six-year veterans, including star pitcher Mike Torrez of the New York Yankees and outfielder Oscar Gamble of the Chicago White Sox, are still negotiating with their 1977 teams and have until Wednesday to declare their free agency.

About a dozen of the 38 major leaguers available could be described as blue-chippers.

Free agents

NEW YORK (AP) — The list of major league free agents, as of Oct. 27, who will be available for Friday's free-agent draft at the Plaza Hotel in New York:

Baltimore—Ross Grimsley (p), Dick Drago (p), Elliott Maddox (of).
Boston—Rick Miller (of).
California—Carlos May (of), Dan Briggs (inf), Mario Guererro (inf).
Chicago Cubs—George Mitterwald (c).
Chicago White Sox—Richie Zisk (of), Jack Brohamer (inf).
Cleveland—Bill Melton (inf), Frank Duffy (inf), Bruce Bochte (inf).
Houston—Ken Boswell (inf).
Minnesota—Larry Hisle (of), Lyman Bostock (of), Mike Pazik (p), Tom Burgmeier (p), Ron Schueler (p), Jerry Terrell (inf), Luis Gomez (inf).
New York Mets—Doc Medich (p).
New York Yankees—Dave Kingman (of), Elrod Hendricks (c), Ron Blomberg (of).
Oakland—Marty Perez (inf), Mike Jorgensen (inf), Willie Crawford (of).
Philadelphia—Ollie Brown (of).
Pittsburgh—Rich Gossage (p), Terry Forster (p), Bobby Tolan (of).
St. Louis—Rawly Eastwick (p).
San Diego—Luis Melendez (of).
Seattle—John Hale (of), Ray Fosse (c), Diego Segui (p).
Texas—Mike Marshall (p).

In the outfield, this year's free-agent crop of Larry Hisle of Minnesota (28 homers, 119 runs batted in), Lyman Bostock of Minnesota (.336 average and 104 runs) and Richie Zisk of the Chicago White Sox (30 homers 101 RBI) compares favorably with last year's team — excluding Jackson — of Joe Rudi ($2.2 million for five years), Gary Matthews ($1.875 million for five years) and Don Baylor ($1.6 million for six years.)

If he doesn't sign with the Yankees, the top starting pitcher available will be Torrez, who won 17 games in the regular season and a pair of World Series games.

Each free agent's 1977 club can also be included on the player's shopping listing, giving him a maximum choice of 14 teams.

The top relief pitcher available, Rich Gossage of Pittsburgh, should be one of the free agents selected by 13 teams, plus the Pirates, and should inspire some spirited bidding. Last year's top reliever, Bill Campbell, was signed by Boston for $1 million over five years, a good investment for the Red Sox, who were kept in the AL East Division race by Campbell's almost daily rescue acts.

Campbell left Minnesota last year because owner Calvin Griffith wouldn't give him the small raise he wanted. This year, the Twins face a larger exodus with, potentially, 11 free agents. Some of the "leaving 11" are minor leaguers and others are borderline major leaguers, but outfielders Hisle and Lyman Bostock are important cogs in the Twins' attack.

The Chicago White Sox, who gambled on bargain-basement free agents Eric Soderholm and Steve Stone last year, could lose four players, including star outfielders Zisk and Gamble.

A hidden silver lining in Chicago's cloud is that the club can sign as many free agents as it loses. If the White Sox lose four players to other teams, they could sign four free agents.

Clubs losing two or fewer free agents are bound by the availability restrictions. If the total of declared free agents by Friday is from 15 to 38, teams can sign a maximum of two players. If the pool contains between 39 and 62 players, teams may sign no more than three free agents.

Best estimates are that the actual number of free agents on Friday will swell to 90, which would combine players from three different free-agent categories.

The first category, unsigned player for 1977, has 33 players, including 11 minor leaguers. This group includes Hisle, Bostock, Gossage, relief pitcher Rawly Eastwick of St. Louis and outfielder Dave Kingman of the Yankees.

Then there are the 48 six-year veterans whose contracts expired following the 1977 season. So far, 18 of them have declared for free agency, including Baltimore pitcher Ross Grimsley, George Mitterwald of the Chicago Cubs and pitcher Terry Forster of Pittsburgh.

The third group, the "Attachment 11" players, had 1976 major league contracts but were outrighted to the minor leagues in 1977. There are 34 of these players, few of whom are expected to arouse any attention.

The draft picks will be made in the inverse order of the 1977 standings, with the two leagues alternating and the AL going first this year. A player is removed from the eligibility list when he has been chosen by 13, teams. Last year, Montreal picked first and went for Jackson.

Raiders, Broncs 'high' for rematch

By Associated Press

They call it the Mile High City — and both the resident Denver Broncos and invading Oakland Raiders will be at least that high today.

"We know the Raiders will really be flying high when they get here," Denver Coach Red Miller said as the Broncos prepared for their American Conference West showdown, a rematch between the defending Super Bowl champions and the unbeaten upstarts who embarrassed them two Sundays ago.

In today's other National Football League games it's Minnesota at Atlanta, Detroit at Dallas, Kansas City at Cleveland, San Diego at Miami, Houston at Cincinnati, Pittsburgh at Baltimore, the New York Jets at New England, Philadelphia at Washington, Chicago at Green Bay, Los Angeles at New Orleans, Buffalo at Seattle and Tampa Bay at San Francisco. Monday night's game is the New York Giants at St Louis.

"This is a whole new ballgame," said Miller, reflecting on the 30-7 humiliation perpetrated by the Broncos, when they ended Oakland's 17-game winning streak. "Certainly we're proud of our first win over the Raiders, but that's all behind us. We're starting all over ... just as we do for every opponent.

"Oakland likes to run but they surprised us a little bit in the last game by coming out passing," added Miller. If the Broncos were really surprised, they showed it in the strangest of ways. They intercepted seven of Ken Stabler's passes and literally drove him out of the game.

Both teams have some players hobbling (among them quarterback Graig Morton and cornerback Louis Wright on Denver and tackle John Vella and cornerback Willie Brown on Oakland) but, as Miller put it: "Come game time, I think all these guys are going to want to get in there."

Like the Raiders two weeks ago, Minnesota was humbled last Monday night, battered 35-3 by Los Angeles. Now the Vikings face the Falcons, one of the NFL's surprise teams this season. Each team is 4-2, the Vikes first in the National Conference Central Division, the Falcons tied with the Rams for first in the NFC West.

"Their defense has come around," says Minnesota Coach Bud Grant. "It was soft through the years, but now they've have changed their defensive thinking around a bit — more blitzing, forcing more mistakes. The defense has won some games for them.

In the last couple of years they have drafted well. They've got some outstanding people. They've sold out their stadium for the game and are looking forward to us coming down there. And I think we may be runnning into the same kind of buzzsaw we ran into out in Los Angeles."

Denver is the only unbeaten team in the AFC. The Cowboys are their NFC counterpart. "Dallas has just a great football team and it will be an uphill struggle for us. We will have to play with great determination to win," said Coach Tommy Hudspeth. His Lions, second to the Vikings in the NFC Central, have managed only one victory on the road in their last 10 games — that one last season against Seattle.

The Lions are coming off perhaps their worst showing of the season, a 28-7 loss to the previously winless 49ers. "The team is disgusted — just like I am — after that loss to San Francisco," said Hudspeth.

The Cowboys may be establishing themselves as the first team to clinch a division title. They're already three games ahead of Washington and St. Louis in the NFC East.

But Coach Tom Landry knows a letdown can hit any time. It nearly did a week ago. After supercharged games against the Redskins and Cardinals, Dallas flattened out and barely managed to beat underdog Philadelphia 16-10 on Charlie Waters' touchdown run with a fourth-quarter blocked punt.

"We were obviously emotionally drained after two emotional games against St. Louis and Washington," Landry said. "Hopefully we can regain some emotion against the Lions."

Cleveland suffered its letdown last year. In the final game of what turned out to be a 9-5 season, the Browns, finally eliminated from playoff contention, gave an uninspired performance against Kansas City and lost 39-14. "I don't think I'll have to go back over that too much," Browns Coach Forrest Gregg said, "but I will remind them of that game.

"I know one thing we can expect from Kansas City — emotion. It will be the same as going into Buffalo last Sunday. The Chiefs are coming off that first win (21-16 over San Diego) and that does things to a team. Buffalo had just won its first game and suddenly there were people in the stands and they had their confidence back."

The Dolphins were expected to just sort of stumble along this year — but they're 5-1 and tied with Baltimore for first place in the AFC East. Quarterback Bob Griese sees San Diego as the start of an uphill climb. "The toughest part of our schedule is the second part and it's coming up starting this week," he said.

PGA players up in arms about schedule proposal

PENSACOLA, Fla. (AP) — A highly controversial proposal, which could change drastically the American pro golf tour, will be considered by the PGA Tour's policy-making body next Tuesday in Lake Buena Vista, Fla.

In general, the rank and file players are solidly opposed to the proposal that would end the American tour with the World Series of Golf around the first of October each year. Foreign tours, particularly in Great Britain and Europe, are watching with interest and concern. Acceptance of the proposal could trigger a change in their schedule, too.

Acceptance, however, is far from certain.

"I haven't yet talked to a player who wasn't upset with (Commissioner Deane) Beman's proposal," said Ray Floyd, one of four players on the 10-man board. "I don't think a guy can just come out and say he's going to cut off four to six tournaments.

"The players aren't going to stand for somebody just stepping in and wiping out these tournaments."

Actually, the proposal isn't quite that severe. As the tour now stands, only one tournament would be eliminated from the official schedule. Other, unofficial events could be added.

In general, Beman's proposal would end the U.S. Tour with the World Series of Golf, which will be moved to a new date, around Oct. 1.

Any events after that would be unofficial.

Greater restrictions, possibly prohibitions, would be placed on players wishing to compete in foreign events during the Jan. 1-Oct. 1 American season. The British Open is an exception.

Beman's proposal was prompted by several factors: lack of public and television interest in golf after the start of the football season, the fact that pro football will begin two weeks earlier next year and a desire to make the World Series the season-ending climax to the tour.

The proposal, Beman said in a published message to players, "would open the door to a couple of interesting alternatives for the players — increased participation in foreign events and the addition of a number of unofficial post-season tournaments in the United States.

"Under such a format, restrictions on play in conflicting events would be tightened before the World Series, but afterward there would be no limitations whatsoever. There are numerous tournaments around the world between Oct. 1 and the end of the year, which would provide our players who choose to compete internationally a chance to benefit world golf by their participation."

And, Beman indicated, it could set up a world tour.

"The Board could also take another look at the PGA Tour's present position on international competition," his message said. "Our current policy is that the PGA Tour will neither cosponsor nor approve foreign events, since doing so would be unfair to our sponsors. A curtailment of the official season would give the Board the opportunity to reappraise its policy in light of the positive influence that we could have on world competition by sanctioning some specific events in the fall."

The players'complaints center around the shorter season.

Tee to Cup

Dave Cink just wins and wins

By PHIL ROCHE
PB Staff Writer

Okay, we all know how to get ready for a tournament, right? We get out to the driving range as often as possible, spend hours on the putting greens, play a bunch of rounds, and watch our swings for any bad habits creeping into that perfect form. Just about all the top amateurs and winning pros follow that practice pattern, right? Wrong.

Now sit down on the green for a few moments while I tell you how Mountain Meadows pro Dave Cink "got ready" for the Southern California PGA Match Play tournament last week.

Yeah, that's the one Dave did so well in. Yeah, he won 1,000 skins , whipped four of the leading pros around here in match play and wound up in the semi-finals. He just about beat the eventual winner Denny Meyer, who's been on the PGA Tour off and on for the past three years.

You know all that, you say. How did he get ready for this match play test of golf? Well, I'll tell you. Cink went out and hit six buckets of balls — that's right, six . . . during the past three months, give or take a week. That's right, Dave found a few moments in his busy schedule now and then to pop out a few practice balls very few. No time for the putting green either. Cink's been busy trying to run Mountain Meadows and co-manage Marshall Canyon with Howard Smith.

Oh, I almost forgot. Dave played nine holes at Mountain Meadows with assistant pro Red Simmons and carded three birdies.

"I figured I was ready then," said Cink.

Anyway, Dave turned up last week at the rolling Huntington Seacliffs layout and began playing matches along with 71 ambitious pros, all bent on the $2,700 first place money.

Cink drew a bye on Thursday morning then "survived" his match with old-timer Frank Purcell of Rocksford Golf Course in North San Fernando, winning 2 and 1.

On Friday morning, Cink began to get the feel of the game again, playing well as he defeated Kevin Fleming of Lomas Santa Fe 1 up.

Dave then took on John Ebersburger of Big Canyon Golf Course, Newport Beach, and in 20 holes emerged the winner 1 up.

By Saturday morning the Mountain Meadows pro was enjoying himself. He had more than his $100 entry fee back, he was playing well, and way back in his mind he was thinking "Maybe I can win this whole thing."

Cink met his boyhood pal, Don Beal, a touring pro from Paso Robles, in a donnybrook of a match. Cink was 3 down at the end of three holes, but began firing on the fourth hole and won going away 3-1.

"I really felt great in that match with Beal," said Cink. "He and I had played golf together for years, and I felt that if I played well, I could beat him." He did.

Cink dropped a 2 up decision to Meyer on Saturday afternoon, but he gave it a good shot. "I was 2 up at the end of three holes in that match," said Cink, "and I guess I wasn't used to being out in front." In everyone of his matches except the Meyer round, Cink was "down" to his opponent early, and sometimes late in the match.

Cink doesn't for one moment think most players should get ready for a tournament the way he did. "I just sort of played myself into shape, and my irons were working just fine."

Okay, now that's the story. Go ahead and practice for the monthly tournament if you want. Me, I'm going to get ready for it by turning up on the first tee with my sticks ready to tee off next Saturday.

Dave Cink'll be proud of me.

For the third straight year, Joe Taylor of the advertising department won low gross honors in the Progress Bulletin's annual golf tournament.

Jerry Nist, runnerup in 1976, was also second last Sunday at Hesperia Golf Course. Ed Prather finished in third place with Tony Ault in fourth.

Low net winner with a fine 68 was Roy Van Eaton, who was followed by Joe Bennett and league president Doug Burnett.

Joe Taylor won the low gross average for the year, and Bob Jones, also of advertising, won the low net average.

The winning team for the league was made up of Ed Prather, Paul Holder, Art Kliewer, and Joe Bennett. The league runs for 30 weeks, with 9-hole rounds played every Wednesday at San Dimas Canyon.

Doug Ferguson fired a net 66 to win the Los Serranos medal tournament on the North Course last Sunday. Ferguson shot a 75 to go with his 9 handicap, coming out with top honors. He was followed by Ron Kramer (3) 68, Chuck Gillanders (4) 68, John Dangleis (10) 68, and Ray Ortiz (9) 69.

Sam Murad shot 78-11 — 67 to win first place in the 11-14 handicap flight. He was followed by Floyd Cooper (11) 68, Tom Herrin (13) 68, Will Vough (11) 69, and Harry Leaming (11) 69.

Earl Guse (88-23-65) walked off with the honors in the 15 and up flight. Other top finishers were Alex Lowe (26) 66, Robert Davis (22) 68, Don Dill (15) 68, and Thomas Hall (19) 69.

First place winners in each flight were awarded $50 gift certificates.

Winners in other flights were: Margaret Nixon, Sue Tennyson, Carol Frady and Bernice Connor.

Mae Wellborn is publicity director for the club.

The Colgate Triple Crown LPGA Matchplay Championship will be played Jan. 26-29 at Mission Hills C.C., Rancho Mirage, Calif.

The field, previously set a 9, has been enlarged to the top 16 women players, and the purse has been increased from $50,000 to $85,000. First prize is a whopping $21,000.

The fifth annual PGA Cup Matches are scheduled to get started on Wednesday, Nov. 17 at Mission Hills also. The International golf series will feature 9 of the best players from the United States facing 9 sharpshooters representing England and Ireland.

Two strokes back in second place were Jim Johnson, Jim Lothridge, Ed Weber and Howard Wigell.

Four San Dimas residents had the dubious honor of recording a team score of 76, the highest gross mark of the day. Bob Poff, Bob Rascoe, Bob Scholer and Loren Wendt were so honored.

Don Spafford won the straightest drive contest and also was closest to the hole on No. 2. Other close-to-the-hole winners were Keith Vint (No. 5), Ed Weber (No. 7), and

Dean Chance still 'pitching'

DALLAS (AP) — Cy Young Award-winner Dean Chance is still pitching. But as a barker on the midway at the State Fair of Texas, his pitch is: "Just 50 cents to toss the rings and win a poster."

Chance, who tossed a no-hitter, started two All-Star games and hurled two 20-victory seasons, is on the State Fair midway from 8 a.m. until midnight each day, attempting to lure customers to his ring toss game.

"Once you've been part of a big cheering crowd, you never get over it," said Chance, 36. "It's like no other feeling in the world. That's one reason I'm here. I love the crowds. I just can't get away from it.

"I've got a farm back in Ohio," he added. "Someone in my hometown had a big poster company. He wanted me to help him sell some of his posters at fairs around the country. I got into this whole thing that way."

Chance now cheerfully distributes posters to fairgoers who can toss a ring around the right colored pole. The kids all want posters of Sean Cassidy, Farrah Fawcett-Majors or Elvis Presley.

But there are some people who remember Dean Chance — as a pitcher and as the roommate of infamous fellow pitcher Bo Belinsky.

"I guess I still get about a dozen baseball cards in the mail each week at home from kids who want me to autograph my card and send it back to them," said Chance, who won 20 games and the Cy Young Award in 1964 for the Los Angeles Angels. "They remember. Sometimes people recognize me on the midway."

In 1964, he led the American League with a 20-9 mark and a 1.65 earned run average. He went 20-14 in 1967 for the Minnesota Twins and posted a career mark of 128-115, with a 2.92 ERA.

"I retired from baseball in 1972," he recalled. "I hurt my back and I wasn't playing at my best any more. When I couldn't do my best, I didn't want it any more."

Quote

"I don't want him to die, but I wish they'd take him off the air." — Lillian Carter, mother of the president, on having to listen to Howard Cosell on the World Series telecasts.

Norton, Young ready for bout

LAS VEGAS, Nev. (AP) — Ken Norton and Jimmy Young put their boxing talents on the line in this gambling capital Saturday night in a bid to earn another shot heavyweigh champion Muhammad Ali.

Both men have fought Ali for the championship, and many boxing observers feel both defeated Ali. Ali kept the title with two controversial 15-round decisions.

Tale of the Tape
By The Associated Press

	..Norton	Young
Age	31	28
Weight	220	210
Height	6-3	6-2
Reach	80	79
Biceps	16	15
Forearm	13	13
Waist	33	33
Thigh	25	25
Calf	15½	15
Neck	18	17½
Wrist	8	8
Fist	13	12
Ankle	10	10

Norton currently is ranked No. 1 and Young No. 2 by both the World Boxing Association and World Boxing Council, and the winner of the scheduled 15-round bout, billed as a heavyweight title elimination, certainly would deserve a rematch with Ali.

In the controversy surrounding his decision over Norton Sept. 28, 1976 in Yankee Stadium, Ali suggested that Norton-Young fight and that he meet the winner.

But Norton feels that Ali is backing down, contending he is trying to price a fight with Norton or Young out of the market by asking for $12 million.

The champion also has other fighters or his mind, and could defend against Leon Spinks or Alfio Righetti in February. Spinks and Righetti fight later this month.

"How long can he continue to rip off the public?" asked Norton. "Jimmy Young and I should be fighting for the vacated title since it's obvious Ali will try to avoid his commitment. The rules (of the WBC and WBA) state that the champion must defend against the No. 1 contender within a year or the title will be vacated. Ali's year was up in September."

The WBC has threatened to take action at its December convention to strip Ali of title recognition if he doesn't sign to fight the winner of the Norton-Young fight.

The fight, which will be televised by ABC, is intriguing in more ways that just for what it means to the winner.

"It's going to be power against deception" said Norton, who when he was preparing for his second fight with Ali in 1973, had a sparring partner named Jimmy Young.

"I got a lot of confidence working with Ken," said Young whose game in the ring is deception.

Young burst into prominence after a spotty career by losing a disputed decision to Ali in Landover, Md., April 30, 1976, dominating hard-punching Ron Lyle over 12 rounds and then knocking down George Foreman and outpointing the former champion in 12 rounds at San Juan last March 17. The victory over Foreman made the 28year-old Philadelphian's record 21-5-2, with seven knockouts.

Norton goes into the bout with an excellent 38-4 mark, but in "big" fights his record had been on the negative side.

Norton broke Ali's jaw in gaining an upset split 12-round decision March 31, 1973, but he lost a 12-round decision and then the disputed the title fight to Ali. He also was knocked out in two rounds in a title bid against Foreman March 26, 1974.

The 31-year-old movie actor-fighter from Los Angeles enhanced his reputation by stopping highly regarded Duane Bobick in 58 seeconds last May 11.

Norton is getting $1.75 million while Young is receiving $1.1 million.

In two 10-round heavyweight fights, which also are set for television, which is scheduled to run from 9 p.m. to 11:30 p.m., EST, Larry Holmes of Easton, Pa., ranked No. 5 by the WBC and No. 6 by the WBA, will meet Ibar Arrington of Seattle and Jerry Quarry of Los Angeles will begin a comeback against Lorenzo Zanon of Italy.

Quarry, once a top contender, hasn't fought since he was stopped by Norton in five rounds March 24, 1974.

Evert favored in P.S. net tourney

PALM SPRINGS, Calif. (AP) — Chris Evert, who has already built an insurmountable point total in the tournament series, tries to add the richest prize of the competition this week in a $250,000 tournament.

The Championship event, the final stop of the 24-tournament international series, carries the largest purse ever in women's tennis.

The series is sponsored by Colgate.

Play among the top eight women in the series' point standings begins Tuesday at Mission Hills Country Club, with the finals of the round-robin singles scheduled for national television Saturday.

Evert, who is the favorite, has collected an unreachable total of 630 singles performance points in series play this year heading into the next-to-last event this weekend in Puerto Rico. Her points championship assures her of the $100,000 bonus points prize.

Martina Navratilova and Betty Stove were tied for second at 500 points each going into the competition in Puerto Rico.

Westminster to host racquetball tourney

WESTMINSTER — Marty Hogan, undefeated in tournament competition this season, headlines the 32-man field participating in the $15,000 Colgate Pro-Am Racquetball Open to be played November 10-13 at King's Racquetball Court in Westminster.

The event is the third in the 1977-78 pro 10-tournament series sanctioned by the National Racquetball Club and co-sponsored by Leach (racquets) and Seamco (balls).

The men will compete for $10,000 with $4,000 going to the winner while the women players will divide $5,000, the winner earning $2,000. Finals are scheduled for Sunday, Nov. 13, at 1:30 p.m.

Hogan, the 19-year-old St. Louis resident now attending San Diego State, was the sport's leading money winner last season with more than $30,000 earned from nine tournament victories. Various endorsements reportedly will push his 1977 income from the relatively infant sport to well over $100,000.

Hogan has won both NRC pro events this season, at Milwaukee and New York. Twice he turned back Charlie Brumfield in the finals 21-17, 21-17 in Milwaukee and 21-10, 21-15 in New York.

Brumfield, 29, is a former San Diego attorney and three times national racquetball champion. He will be seeded third in this event behind Davey Bledsoe, current national champion who upset Hogan for the title last June. Bledsoe was a semi-finalist in New York.

Jay Jones of Los Angeles is the chief area threat in the event. Jones, who reached the quarter-finals in New York before losing to Brumfield, figures to be seeded eighth here. Rounding out the top eight are Jerry Hilacher, Craig McCoy, Steve Serot and Rich Wagner.

Other top players entered are Steve Strandemo, Steve Keeley, Ben Kolteen, Mark Monow, John Lynch and Steve Chase.

Shannon Wright, current champion, is the top-seed among the women. Her chief competition should come from Janell Mariott, Jean Sauser, Kathy Williams and Peggy Steding.

King's Racquetball Court is located at 14731 Golden West Street in Westminster. For ticket information call (714) 898-9841.

Bolt denies temper

RENO, Nev. (AP) — Tommy Bolt, a legend in golfing circles as much for his vocal outbursts as his skills with a club, says it isn't true that he has such a bad temper.

"I'm no more temperamental than any other golfer," said Bolt, winner of the U.S. Open in 1958. "I got a face that when I am concentrating, it looks like I am mad at the whole world."

The 59-year-old golfer, who was in Reno to play in the U.S. Seniors Open, has won 15 major tournaments on the PGA tour.

Dubbed "Terrible" Tommy Bolt by the press, he blamed his public image on reporters who always ask him why he gets mad.

"All the golf stories that were ever written about me were about me and my temper," Bolt said. "That's all they (reporters) ever wanted to talk about."

Some stories say that Bolt has emptied his whole bag of clubs in tournaments by throwing them away in anger, one by one.

"I've only thrown six clubs in my entire life," he insisted. "But I've been accused of throwing them all. I've broken three clubs in my life. They haven't even manufactured all the clubs yet that I was supposed to break. I've never thrown any caddies in the water like they said, either."

So why has the sporting press created such a monster out of Bolt?

"It all started years ago," he explained. "It was kind of a color thing. My temper made good color stories. Nowadays though they really don't have any colorful golfers on the tour ... well, except for Lee Trevino, but he's the only one."

One tag sportswriters couldn't place on Bolt was that of a one-shot champion who wins one major tourney then fades into obscurity.

"I won 10 or 12 major tournaments before I won the U.S. Open in 1958. They can't call me a one-shot guy like Orville Moody and Jack Fleck," he said.

From 1947-1962, Bolt ranked 14th on the all-time money winning list.

How does he rate his golf game today?

"I'm playing about as well as ever, except I don't putt as well as I did. I seem to have no confidence in my putting. I might have to change my style," he replied.

For a man of 59, Bolt appears in great shape.

"I play a lot of golf, practice a lot and just try to take care of myself. That's what it totals up to," he said.

Just then, Bolt's hotel room phone rang. It was one of his golfing buddies wanting him to go out on the town.

"I just want to lay around and rest," Bolt said. "I'm tired after playing 18 holes of golf today. Besides, I'm not much for the night life anyway."

Piano recital slated

Kathleen Parker, 16-year-old daughter of Mr. and Mrs. David Parker of Upland, will present a piano recital at 4 p.m. next Sunday at Ralpha Pierce Music, 822 N. Garey Ave., Pomona.

A piano student of David Tischler of Upland, Miss Parker will play works by Satie, Mozart, Chopin and Tjeknavorian. Admission is free.

Concert planned at P.C.

The Pomona College music department will present a program of Baroque chamber music in Bridges Hall at 8:15 p.m. Friday. Admission is free.

Susanne Shapiro, instructor of harpsichord at the college, heads the list of performers. She is joined by Anna Carol Dudley, soprano; Lynne Sachdeva, flute, and Carol Herman, viola da gamba.

The program will include a Cantata for soprano, flute and continuo by Andre Campra; a suite for flute and continuo by Jacques Hotteterre; a flute sonata by J.S. Bach; and two descriptive pieces for solo harpsichord, the "Battle Capriccio" by Frescobaldi and one of the "Biblical" sonatas by Johann Kuhnau, performed by Mrs. Shapiro.

Mrs. Shapiro also teaches harpsichord at Cal State Northridge, and records for Orion and Musical Heritage. She appears regularly as soloist and in chamber ensemble throughout Southern California.

Miss Dudley has been acclaimed in this country and in India as a singer with purity of sound and depth of musical feeling.

FANCY STRUTTIN' — Musician Michael Jackson takes some time out for dancing with Rona, a member of the cast of the movie version of "The Wiz," during a party at New York's Studio 54 disco Monday night. The party was held to honor Jackson and the other members of the Jackson Five, popular singing group.

Chamber group to play

The chamber ensemble, Music for a While, will present a program of medieval verse and song in Balch Auditorium, Scripps College, at 8:15 p.m. Saturday. Admission is free.

The group will perform a play based on Guillaume de Machaut's "La Fontaine Amoureuse."

Formed in 1970 by four long-time members of the New York Pro Musica, Music for a While has become widely recognized as "among the most distinguished purveyors of the repertory" (New York Times). The performances of medieval and Renaissance music are not only entertaining but historically precise, utilizing the costumes and instruments of the time.

In addition to their concert appearances and many recordings, the four members of Music for a While, LaNoue Davenport, Judith Davidoff, Christopher Kenny and Shiela Schonbrun, are artists-in-residence at Sarah Lawrence College.

"La Fontaine Amoureuse" is a collection of poems set to music by Guillaume de Machaut. Written by Robert Gainer, the dramatic offering presents Peter Johnson playing the parts of Machaut and the narrator.

Linda Hopkins at the Hartford

Tony Award-winner Linda Hopkins will present a new show of music and song at the Huntington Hartford Theater in Hollywood Nov. 10 through 13. The show is entitled "An Evening with Linda Hopkins."

Last year, sold out audiences raved about Miss Hopkins in her Tony-winning performance of "Me & Bessie" at the Los Angeles Music Center and the Huntington Hartford Theater. In her upcoming engagement, Miss Hopkins will perform in her own inimitable style, more than 20 songs ranging from disco and jazz to popular ballads and blues, plus her favorites from Bessie Smith, all augmented by an on stage orchestra.

"An Evening With Linda Hopkins" is produced by James A. Doolittle in association with the Southern California Theater Association. The production will have musical arrangements by Tommy Newsome, costumes by Bob Mackie and lighting by Sam Stickler.

Performance schedule will be Thursday through Saturday at 8:30 p.m. and Sunday at 7:30 p.m.

Citrus College to offer Thornton wilder comedy

Citrus College will present Thornton Wilder's Pulitzer Prize play, "The Skin of Our Teeth," in the auditorium at 8 p.m. Thursday, Friday and Saturday.

The play, a satire, is the story of the extraordinary adventures of the Antrobus family down through the ages, from the time the great wall of ice creeps over the world to the end of the war — any war. The Antrobuses have survived flood, fire, pestilence, the seven-year locusts, the black pox, a dozen wars and as many depressions.

Citrus College drama students in the cast are Dave Ankney, Teri McChesney, Jeff Berlin, Beverly Babcock, Randy Hilliard, Tammy Feldbush, Randy Giovanetti, Karen Caty, Delmo Maestas, John Palos, Michael Schnitt, Sue Kemp, Darlene Falzone, David Rex, Bobby Hicks, Pam Walls, Tim Hughes, Armando Lucero, Cheryl Wilder, Phil Florence, Nick Incorvina, Jan Scaturo, Buddy Richhardson and Vinnie Collins. The play is directed by Frederic G. Carlson, speech and drama instructor.

Tickets, at $2.50 general admission and $1.50 for students, senior citizens and children under 12, may be purchased at the box office.

Dorothy's trouble with Hollywood

HOLLYWOOD — (NEA) — I suggested to Dorothy Uhnak that Hollywood might change the ending of her current best-seller, "The Investigation."

She seemed stunned for a minute by the suggestion, then she smiled.

"It would upset me," she said. "It would upset me very much. When you first said that, I was startled. It just never occured to me that they might do that. But I agree that it is possible."

Very possible. Her book has been bought by Paramount and they figure it is going to be one of their biggies next year or the year after that. But the book's ending is unconventional — I can't go into more detail than that without spoiling it for you, and I'd never do that.

"With Hollywood," Dorothy Uhnak said, "anything is possible. "Judging by what has been done to some of my previous things I should know better."

Uhnak has been burned a few times. Her first book, "The Bait," won an Edgar award, as a top mystery, and ABC bought it for a TV movie. They put some good people — Vera Miles and William Devane — in it, but she says they changed the whole concept and she shudders when she thinks about it.

Then she wrote a book called "The Ledger," which won an award in France. Again it was bought for TV. She says they changed the central character from white to black which, in this case, completely altered the story. That eventually became the TV series, Get Christie Love, with Teresa Graves.

DOROTHY UHNAK

Next came her big best-seller, "Law and Order," which also became a TV movie. Uhnak says it was handled better than the other two, but she still thinks NBC did some things to it which hurt.

She hopes for better things for "The Investigation," but, like I said, I have a hunch Paramount will change the ending.

When she wrote it, Uhnak had a soap opera actress named Ilene Kristen in mind for her leading character, a lady named Kitty Keeler. Kristen plays Dee on ABC's Ryan's Hope and she doesn't know this, but she has a big fan in Dorothy Uhnak. "Every day when I sat down to write", said Uhnak, "I'd get a fix on Kitty by watching Ilene Kristen."

For her cop hero, she thinks Darren McGavin would be right.

It seems obvious now that Dorothy Uhnak was a policewoman. She served on the force in New York and says that all TV cop shows are fantasies — except for Barney Miller. Like many cops I've talked to, she loves that series. She says, "I've known all those guys myself when I was on the force."

But, as for the others, she has nothing but contempt: 'They are all a bunch of nonsense," she says. "Police Story is really bad — no police force anywhere works the way those men work. And Police Woman is worse still. It is a total fantasy.

"But I suppose that is what television has to do to get an audience, to get a rating. If they told the truth about police work, it just wouldn't be very exciting. Seventy-five percent of police cases are solved through the use of informants, who are not very nice or attractive people."

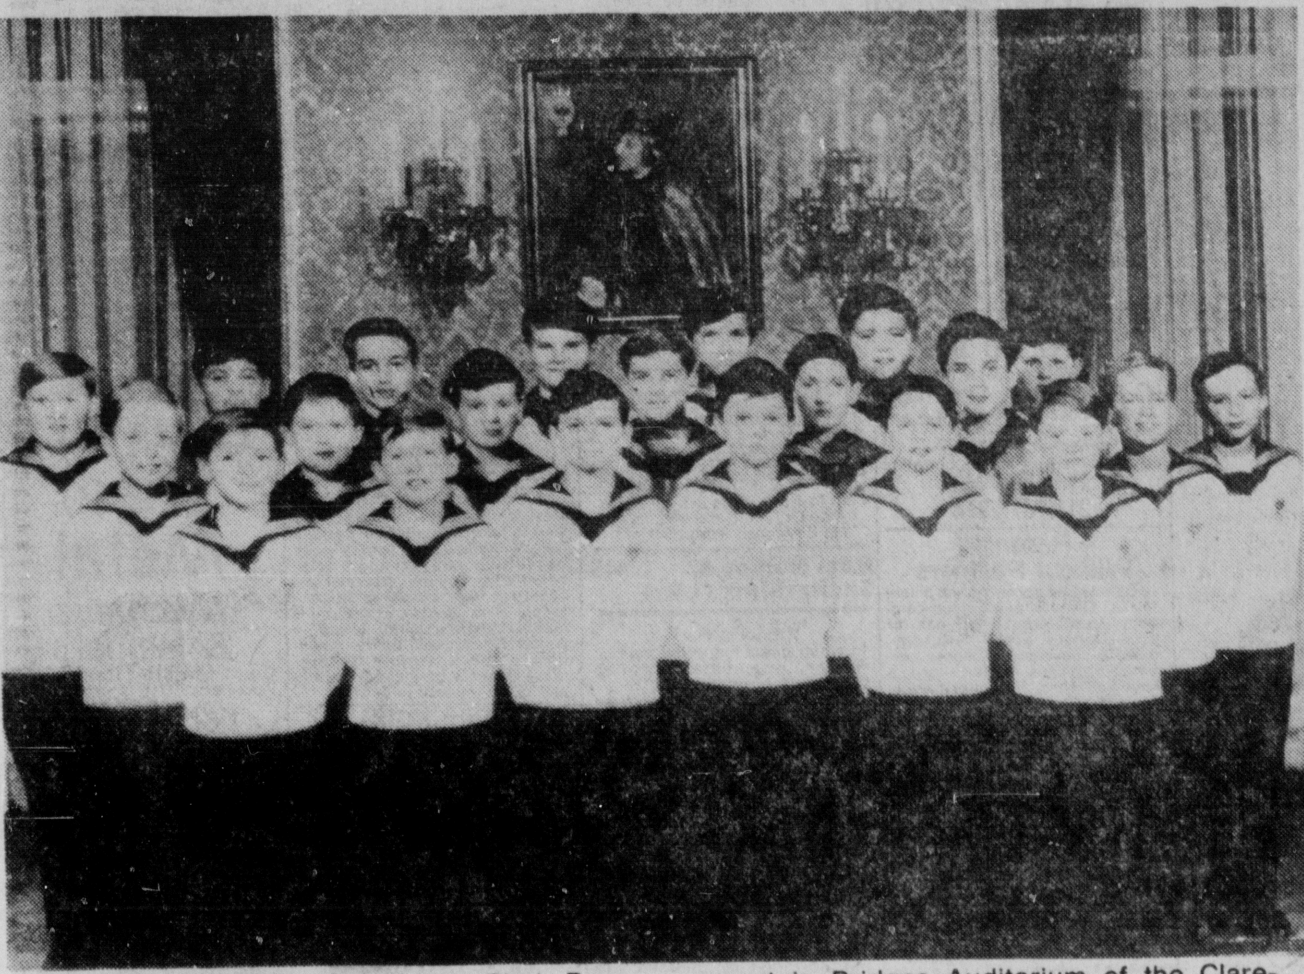
Vienna Choir will visit Claremont



SINGING SAILORS—The Vienna Choir Boys, on their 33rd tour of North America, will give a concert in Bridges Auditorium of the Claremont Colleges at 3 p.m. next Sunday.

The internationally known Vienna Choir Boys will present a concert in Bridges Auditorium of the Claremont Colleges at 3 o'clock next Sunday afternoon.

The choir is made up of 24 boys between the ages of 10 and 13 and since 1924 it has been journeying from the Austrian capital to sing all over the world. Each year, fewer than 100 boys, only 10 percent of the applicants, are admitted to the institution. Before admission to one of the choirs, students receive two years of training. Each boy is given an academic education in addition to his musical one, and, when his voice changes, is aided by the institution in furthering his education for the career of his choice.

PIERRE ALECHINSKY

Belgian artist wins $50,000

PITTSBURGH (AP) — Painter Pierre Alechinsky, whose physician-parents wanted him to be a doctor, has won a $50,000 art prize for dream-like canvas anatomies inspired by fascination with his family.

The Belgian-born artist began a visit to Pittsburgh Monday which culminates Thursday when he receives the Andrew W. Mellon Award. He is celebrating the prize with a 134-piece exhibit at the Carnegie Museum of Art.

"When I make a painting, I make a question," he says. "A painting is not to give an answer."

Alechinsky, 50, who wears a beard and shaves his head, was chosen by an international panel of judges to receive the award named for the late Pittsburgh financier for the most representative living modern artist, according to museum art director Leon Arkus. The new award is to be given every two years, and may be shared by more than one artist.

"We are not saying Alechinsky is the greatest contemporary artist in the world," Arkus said. "That would be impossible to do and unfair."

Alechinsky, whose father fled Russia to escape religious persecution, was born in Brussels in 1927. Although encouraged to enter the medical field, he was facinated by the artists with whom his family lived.

"Upstairs, my aunt produces her well-mannered paintings. On the floor below, grandmother plays Schubert sonatas accompanied by a gentleman from France on the violin," he once wrote of his childhood.

Alechinsky, who now lives in Paris, spoke to reporters through a translator amid four rooms filled with his colorful expressionist paintings of humans and animals.

Alechinsky's bold works are virtually the only ones still done in the COBRA tradition, a form adopted in the late 1940s by a group of artists disenchanted with the abstractionist school.

COBRA is an acronym for the cities of Copenhagen, Brussels and Amsterdam, whose artists broke with tradition to instill emotion and spontaneity in European painting.

"Certainly I don't know what will happen before the work," he says. "But I feel something during the work."

Les Ballets Trockadero to play at Citrus College

"Les Ballets Trockadero de Monte Carlo," the hilarious, all-male satirical dance company, will perform in the Citrus College auditorium at 8 p.m. Nov. 11.

The show is the opening event in the college's popular Evenings at Eight series.

The world-famous troupe has played to capacity audiences in theaters throughout the nation, including the Pavillion of the Los Angeles Music Center.

The Los Angeles Times says of their performance, "They dance magnificently. The Trocks deliver the goods and conquer. These incredible dance artists will have you rolling with laughter."

The company knows classical ballet thoroughly. Vogue critic Leo Lerman says, "Here are some of the most remarkable ballerinas in the world: men, in tutus, whose lethal concern is not impersonation but ballet itself: its cliches, its onstage deportment, its great celebrants — their choreographic devices, their signature styles. From the moment you get a Trockadero program and read, you know that you are meant to laugh. But when the curtain rises and you see the troupe in full, correct, on-point classical Swan Lake flight, you are not so sure, until suddenly you ache with hilarity."

Reserved seat tickets may be purchased now at Citrus College box office, open noon to 5 p.m. weekdays. BankAmericard and Master Charge accounts are honored. General admission is $5.50 and $5, with a discount offered senior citizens, children under 12 and students.

Artists showing at Poly

The Cal Poly Pomona art department is presenting two contemporary American artists in an exhibition in the University Union art gallery through Nov. 11.

The works of Manuel Samaniego, a Chicano artist, and Bill Armstrong, a serial photographer, will be featured in the display. Armstrong is the assistant audio visual coordinator at the University.

The gallery is open weekdays from 11 a.m. until 3 p.m., and on Tuesday and Thursday from 7 until 9 p.m. It is closed weekends.

A reception will be held in the gallery Tuesday from 7 until 9 p.m.

The exhibition is free and open to the public.

Watercolors at Gallery 8

An exhibition of watercolors by eight noted California artists will open with a reception at Gallery 8, 411 Harvard Ave., Claremont, from 4 to 6 p.m. today. The public is invited.

Taking part will be Rex Brandt, Gerald Brommer, Phil Dike, Jim Fuller, Emil Kosa, Elizabeth Baskerville McNaughton, Millard Sheets and Robert E. Wood.

Four of these artists, Brandt, Dike, Kosa and Sheets, all members of the National Academy, represent the founding generation of the group of watercolorists called the "White Paper Painters." Their energies and enthusiasms have spanned a period of 50 years, in which the strong California school has produced numerous followers.

Following in the traditions established in the earlier years, Wood, Brommer, McNaughton and Fuller have contributed greatly to the California art scene, excelling in their own unique styles. The exhibition will provide a broad range for watercolor enthusiasts to view.

Gallery hours are Tuesday through Sunday, noon to 5 p.m.

PVAA to hear artist

Artist Joan Beauregard will give a demonstration entitled, "An Introduction of Oriental Brush," at a meeting of the Pomona Valley Art Association at the Claremont Public Library, Second Street and Harvard Avenue, at 7:30 p.m. Tuesday. The public is invited.

Mrs. Beauregard has been studying Oriental Brush with Claremont artist Ning Yeh. Her enthusiasm for this form of art led her to offer the demonstration to acquaint the public with the beauty of this type of painting.

Oriental paintings by Mrs. Beauregard are on exhibit at the PVAA Gallery, 300 S. Park Ave., Pomona.

Western art at Gannon

An exhibition of Western paintings by local artist Milton Thompson will open with a champagne reception at Gannon's Gallery, 118 W. Bonita Ave., San Dimas, from 5 to 8 p.m. Friday. The show will continue to Nov. 19.

Thompson got his first art training at Otis Art Institute 50 years ago. He has since studied with various teachers, notably Watson Cross of West Covina.

Thompson was a cowhand on California ranches in the '20s and '30s and later studied animal husbandry and agricultural engineering at UC Davis. He raised livestock and went into engineering during World War II. He retired to fulltime painting last year.

Thompson was an early officer of the El Monte Artists Guild and founding member and former president of both the Mid-Valley Arts League and the Aerojet Art Club.

The present exhibit, representing a year's work, is his attempt to link his two fields of interest, art and ranching.

Indian exhibit planned

The seventh annual Indian Arts and Crafts Show will be held from 10 a.m. to 5:30 p.m. Nov. 26-Dec. 4 at the Capistrano Trading Post, across from the Capistrano Mission in San Juan Capistrano.

This year "The Art of the Hopi" will feature demonstrations of Hopi silversmithing, Third Mesa wicker basket weaving and kachina carving. Costumed dancers will perform the Hopi Butterfly three times daily.

On sale will be paintings, baskets, pottery, kachinas and jewelry from the Hopi area of Arizona. "The Story of Hopi Crafts," a pamphlet outlining the fine points of collecting and understanding Hopi art work, is available free.

NEW YORK (AP) — Mrs. Walter B. Ford II has been elected to the national board of trustees of the Archives of American Art, a branch of the Smithsonian Institution.

Mrs. Ford succeeds her mother, Mrs. Edsel B. Ford.

Paper art show set at Scripps

An exhibition of art works made from paper will be shown Nov. 9 to Dec. 21 at the Lang Art Gallery, Scripps College. Paper art is a growing movement of the 1970s which features handmade or commercial paper as the primary expressive medium rather than as background surface.

Berkeley artist Nancy Genn, who is represented in the exhibition, will discuss "Contemporary Papermaking Techniques" at 8 p.m. Nov. 11, in Humanities Auditorium, Scripps College. A reception will follow in Lang Art Gallery. Both events are free and the public is welcome.

The "paper movement" has increasingly attracted the attention of artists, critics and museums. In the Lang exhibit of 70 works by 22 contemporary artists, a wide variety of results are revealed, ranging from the small and intimate to the monumental, from the two-dimensional to the three-dimensional, and from the formal to the conceptual.

A catalogue containing 15 illustrations features an essay and entries written by David S. Rubin, assistant director of the Galleries of the Claremont Colleges.

Gallery hours are 1 to 5 p.m. daily (including Saturday and Sunday); 7 to 9 p.m. Wednesday; closed legal and school holidays. Admission is free.

Polly's Pointers

DEAR POLLY — Wishing to eliminate the grit often left in the bathtub after cleaning it with a scouring powder, my husband tried cleaning the tub with shampoo. It cleaned and rinsed easily and left a pleasant aroma in the bathroom. Be sure to rinse thoroughly! — ROBIN.

DEAR POLLY --- To keep from losing the tiny screws in your eyeglasses, put a small amount of clear nail polish on the screws. --- MICKEY

Send your helpful hints to Polly's Pointers in care of this newspaper.

DEAR POLLY---When you have to move a sofa or other heavy piece of furniture by yourself, put a throw rug under the legs and push it where you want it to go. You'll find this makes the job easier and does not scratch hardwood floors.---J.L.S.

DEAR POLLY---To remove dirt and blemishes from potatoes I am going to bake I rub them with fine steel wool that has been dipped in water, and then rinse thoroughly. The potatoes are very clean and smooth for baking.---ETHEL.

DEAR POLLY --- I use nail polish remover to take off adhesive left from stickers and gummed plastic tape. --- ELIZABETH

DEAR POLLY — When my mom cooks she slips a clear plastic bag over the open cookbook and splatters or spills hit the bag instead of the book pages. — LEE.

CLEAR PLASTIC BAG

DEAR POLLY — Plastic pill containers from the drugstore are great to use for holding mustard, catsup and so on when going on a picnic. — LEE.

DEAR POLLY---A sheet of that new fabric softener is great for brushing and cleaning my navy blue slacks, that pick up lint and dust so badly. Now that these slacks have been so brushed from the knees down, both inside and out, they no longer pick up so much--no doubt because static electrical build-up is neutralized.---LELA.

DEAR POLLY---I read the Pointer about freezing a wet sponge to use on bumps, etc. and this prompted me to send in the method I use. I put a teething ring (the kind that contains liquid) in the freezer and use this cold, dry ring on my first-grader's bumps. It is especially good to use on a hand or finger.---SISTER M.A.

THIS WEEK'S TOP PRIZE QUESTION:
PERRY BOWEN OF FORT SILL, OK, ASKS:
"HOW DOES A BROKEN BONE HEAL?"
IF YOU ACCIDENTALLY BREAK A BONE, THE BROKEN BONE BEGINS AT ONCE TO PRODUCE NEW BONEMAKING MATERIAL TO BRIDGE THE BROKEN ENDS. AT FIRST THE NEW BONE MATERIAL IS SOFT AND EASILY INJURED, AND THE BROKEN ENDS MUST BE HELD FIRMLY IN PLACE WITH A CAST OR SPLINT AS THE BONE HEALS. GRADUALLY THE NEW BONE HARDENS UNTIL IT FORMS A SOLID CONNECTION BETWEEN THE BROKEN ENDS.

"SERVING THE POMONA & SAN GABRIEL VALLEYS FOR 15 YEARS"

Life among the swinging jet set in a Colorado ski resort forms the background for NBC's Novel for television "Aspen" airing three consecutive nights, this Saturday, Sunday and Monday (Nov. 5, 6 and 7) from 9-11PM each night. Starring are Sam Elliott as an ambitious Colorado lawyer, and Perry King as the man whose murder conviction sentence he is trying to have reversed.

There are two major themes for the six-hour drama: a headline grabbing murder trial in which a ski bum is accused of the slaying of a 15 year old Aspen girl, and the jockeying of real estate interests against ecology-minded citizens over the building of a multi-million dollar real estate development.

The secondary theme of the tumultuous drama, finds real estate interests attempting to buy up ranches in the area to lay out ski-runs and condominiums, only to meet opposition from such longtime residents as Tom Keating's father, Owen (John McIntire).

The stellar cast boasts the presence of handsome Anthony Franciosa as an ex-mobster moved into real estate, Joseph Cotten as a respected lawyer whose short-sightedness puts him in the spot to be blackmailed successfully by Sam Elliott; Bo Hopkins as a disloyal Army buddy of the convicted slayer, Roger Davis as the handsome rich guy who marries Sam Elliott's girl, George Di Cenzo (who played Vincent Bugliosi in the TV movie "Helter Skelter") as County District Attorney who fights Sam Elliott for eight years, and newcomer Douglas Matthew Heyes, who stars as a Vietnam veteran for hire.

ASPEN

BATTLE

Stars from the three television networks compete in a wide variety of sports events on Battle of the Network Stars '77, an ABC Sports special airing Friday from 9-11PM on ABC. Howard Cosell and Telly Savalas serve as hosts for the competition with ABC Sports experts Bruce Jenner and Davey Marr reporting on individual contests. Baseball great Frank Robinson serves as Commissioner.

Gabe Kaplan once again captains the ABC team, with Jimmie Walker and Dan Haggerty serving as captains of CBS and NBC respectively. The contests are conducted over a grueling two-day period at Pepperdine University in Malibu, Calif., with the teams vying for nearly $400,000 in prize money. The events include rowing, swimming, bowling, golf, baseball throw, running relay, obstacle course, football and tug-of-war. The teams are comprised of eight members each with two alternates.

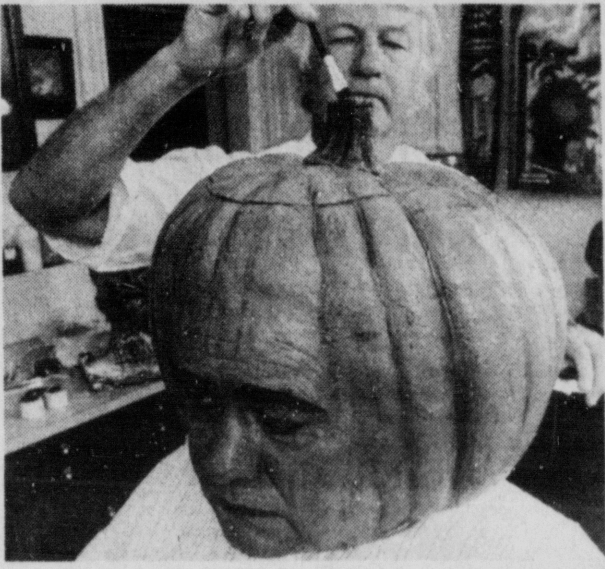
CLOSE-UP

JONATHAN BECOMES A PUMPKIN



"Halloween is all year 'round for me. I dress up everyday." So says Jonathan Winters, who at once can be hip, geriatric spinster Maudie Frickert or mischievous little Chester Honeyhugger. He's also backwoods hick Lamar Gumbody, a zany Scandinavian, an Indian chief, and football coach. And for the first time, this Halloween he becomes a pumpkin. "I don't think there's a field around--even in Fresno--that grows pumpkins like that," he said.

Winters stars in Halloween Hall O'Fame," a special presentation for The Wonderful World of Disney, Sunday evening at 7PM on NBC. Performing the metamorphosis was make-up artist Robert Schiffer, who aged Burt Lancaster 55 years for "Birdman of Alcatraz," and whose credits stretch from "A Night at the Opera" through "My Fair Lady" to "Camelot."

Winters sat for an hour under latex and plaster to make the facial impression used to create the pumpkin-head mask. "It's a spooky experience. They put straws in your nose and that's the only way you can breathe. You feel your whole face shrinking. It becomes quite heavy and your head drops. You can't move or see and you don't know if you're ever going to get out of it," Winters recalled.

Describing the overall experience as "challenging and great fun," Winters said; "My body felt strange. I was secure with my head because I already knew I was a pumpkin mentally. There's a lot of seeds up there--some gone."

By his own admission, Winters is a sensitive individual with definite opinions about acting, art, current events, life and happiness. The 51-year-old actor can now afford to be choosy about the kind of roles he takes and much of his time is devoted to other interests: painting, study of American Indians and writing his autobiography. Although comedy remains his first love, Winters said he would like the opportunity to do a straight dramatic film role. "Hollywood tends to pigeonhole you," complained Winters. "They keep using those little boxes of comedy. You have to edge your way in. If an actor is smart, he will start with a smaller role in a good drama, like a character part, rather than expecting the audience to accept him immediately in his new capacity."

Winters prides himself on being independent. This is one reason he became a painter. "What you put on that canvas is your own," Winters said. "Written words are always going to offend somebody. The same with the spoken word. Not so with art. It's a place to hide and, at the same time, express yourself. That's the beauty of it. Painting is also a release from tension. The world is 'tuned down' when you're painting."

Although he appreciates all art styles, surrealism remains his favorite and the one he does best. His favorite artists are Magritte, Klee, Dali, Rousseau and Chagall. Sunshine, smiling faces, birds and other manifestations of warmth are essential components to Winters' paintings.

BELLE OF AMHERST

The Belle of Amherst, Julie Harris' one-woman celebration of the life, spirit and poetry of Emily Dickinson, airs as a special encore telecast 8-9:30PM, Tuesday on KCET, Channel 28.

The television premiere last season won for Ms. Harris the TV Critics Circle Award—a further confirmation of her highly-praised Broadway performance in The Belle of Amherst which won her a fifth Tony Award. Ms. Harris is the only actress in history to win five Antoinette Perry Awards.

The play, written by William Luce, is based on Miss Dickinson's poetry, notes and correspondence; it was produced by Mike Merrick and Don Gregory and presented by KCET/Los Angeles. Under the direction of Charles S. Dubin, it was performed in KCET's studios before a live audience without interruption, except for the play's original single intermission. Charles Nelson Reilly, who directed the stage version, acted as artistic advisor.

Ms. Harris portrays the poet throughout the span of her life, from her early teens—when she wrote that she would surely be The Belle of Amherst—into her early fifties, when she had written most of her more than 1700 poems.

Ironically, only seven of those poems appeared in print during her lifetime—and they were all published anonymously. Some five years after her death, with the publication of her first volume of verse, the world became aware that a genius had lived and worked in the little town of Amherst, Massachusetts.

Veteran character actress Marjorie Bennett, who has appeared in hundreds of motion pictures and television shows during her 50 years in the entertainment business, has been signed by producer Rick Rosner to make a special guest appearance in the "Taking Its Toll" episode of CHiPs, MGM Television's new action adventure series in association with Rosner Television seen Thursday nights at 8PM on NBC. The series stars Larry Wilcox and Erik Estrada as two young California Highway Patrol motorcycle officers covering the vast Los Angeles freeway system.

ASK THEM YOURSELF

Send the question, on a postcard, to "Ask," Family Weekly, 641 Lexington Ave., New York, N.Y. 10022. We'll pay $5 for published questions. Sorry, we can't answer others.

FOR BARBARA WALTERS, ABC newscaster

I never see your tasteful and beautiful clothes more than once. Why?—Frances C. Viverette, Rocky Mount, N.C.

● I do wear my things more than once. Year after year, in fact, and I often repeat my outfits on the air. I guess it seems as though I don't wear the same clothes twice because I have mostly separates — sweaters, blouses, skirts and pants — and mix and match a lot. Switching gives old stuff a new look.

FOR LEE MAJORS, star of Six Million Dollar Man

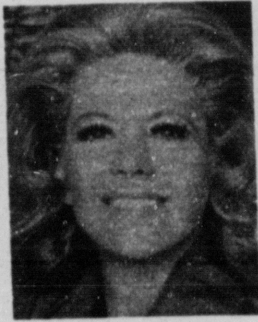
I hear you do your own stunts. Have you ever seriously hurt yourself on the show?—Donna Rebers, Watertown, Conn.

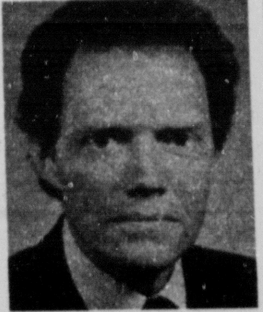
● I've never been seriously injured during my adventures, but almost every day I do pick up some new bruises. I've also pulled muscles and sprained my ankles quite a few times. One recent stunt I won't soon forget was climbing out of a hovering helicopter, down a rope ladder, and then back up and into the copter — all without a harness.



FOR DINAH SHORE, singer

Why don't you ever wear a short dress, or anything that shows your legs? —Dawn Fink, Gloucester City, N.J.

● It's not because I have bad legs. I just find I'm uncomfortable in short dresses because they have a trick of inching up when I sit down. And, as I sit a lot, I'd rather be comfortable and give my attention to what I'm doing and saying than wonder about what I'm showing.



FOR J. CARTER BROWN, director, National Gallery of Art, Washington, D.C.

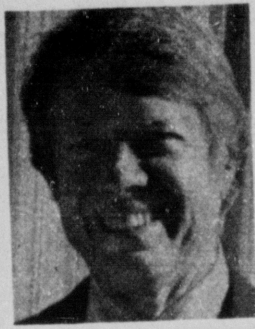
Of all the fabulous King Tut artifacts seen now by several million people, which did you find the most fascinating?—Carol Hunt, Boise, Idaho

● The gold sculpture of Tutankhamen as harpooner. Unlike so much of the static tradition of Egyptian art, this piece captures the delicacy and poise of the young king in action, opening the way for ancient Greek art almost 1,000 years later and the Italian Renaissance another 1,800 years after that.

FOR THE "ASK THEM YOURSELF" EDITOR

Bring me up to date on Marjorie Wallace (Jimmy Connors' ex). —M.K., Nassau, N.Y.

● Marjorie, 23, a former Miss World from Indiana (the only American to win that title), is doing TV commercials. Work is No. 1 with her. She puts in a 10-to 12-hour day and is making more money than she ever dreamed was possible. Lloyd Kolmer, her agent-manager said: "Marjorie has had her fling of dating in the celebrity world and figured it's high time to settle down — to work. She's more concerned with her career than with romances."



FOR PRESIDENT CARTER

When history is written, how do you want to go down in it?—A.G., Port Huron, Mich.

● I hope I can be recorded in history as the man who began the process of eliminating atomic weapons from the world.

FOR LEE MERIWETHER, star of Barnaby Jones

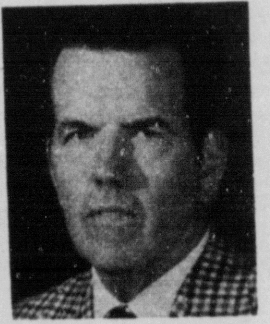
Who comes to mind first when you think of a sexy man?—C.E., Redondo, Calif.

● Buddy Ebsen. Surprised? As far as I'm concerned, sexy and attractive qualities come from the soul of a man; his monetary worth and physical attributes have nothing to do with it. I could give you a long list of other men — but you did ask for the "first" one.



FOR ART McNALLY, supervisor of officials, National Football League

Why did the NFL remove the white stripe from the football?—Stan Castleberry, Lufkin, Texas

● To achieve maximum consistency, the members of the Rules Committee decided that every game should be played with the same brown ball. The lighting conditions for night games have improved immeasurably in recent years, and it was felt there was no need for a stripe to be painted on game balls. To date, there have been no complaints about visibility.

FOR ANDREA McARDLE, star of Broadway's Annie

Do you ever get nervous onstage, and how did you get started? I'm 15, and dying to become an actress. What advice can you give me? —L.V., Greensburg, Pa.

● Kids aren't as scared as adults — perhaps because we haven't got as much to lose if anything goes wrong. I got my start when a New York agent saw me taking dancing lessons at a Philadelphia recreation center and picked me to audition for commercials. I'd suggest you take dancing lessons and try to let a talent scout see you. If not, audition for stage shows. Even if you don't get hired, it's good experience.

FOR JOHNNY RODRIGUEZ, country singer

Are you Puerto Rican or Spanish?—K.G., Gary, Ind.

● Neither. I'm a mixture of Mexican, Indian and Irish. I was born John Raul Davis Rodriguez, the fourth of nine children of a welder in Sabinal, Texas. I guess my Irish ancestry is dominant. How else could I have been so lucky so quickly in what I'm doing? It must be the luck of the Irish.

PRO AND CON

Should Parents Of Children In College Receive Tax Credits For Tuition?

PRO Sen. William V. Roth Jr. (R.-Del.), member of Senate Finance Committee

It is vital that Congress provide tax credits to families struggling to send their children to college. According to statistics, a growing number of qualified students cannot obtain a college education because of skyrocketing costs. Middle-income families are especially hard hit. Millions of families today are neither rich enough to afford college nor considered poor enough to qualify for the different Government aid programs that the taxes they pay make possible. Working Americans do not want Government handouts; they merely want to keep more of their own earnings for fulfilling the American dream of a college education for their children.

CON Dr. Carlene Crumpton-Bawden, principal analyst for education, House of Representatives Committee on the Budget

The tax code is the least feasible place to carry out social policy. Under the terms of most proposals, up to 80 percent of benefits would go to families with incomes above $20,000 by 1983. The needy student is left out all together. True, rising college costs are a burden to parents, but the cost of close to $7 billion in lost Federal revenue, over a five-year period, must be weighed. Under a tuition tax credit, a family's burden is reduced by a very small amount. A $300 tax credit against tuition charges of $4,000 or even $6,000 does not solve the problem. Grants or guaranteed loans are better choices, giving more dollars directly to students.

A SPECIAL MESSAGE OF LOVE AND CARING

"I'm mentally retarded," said Mike Spencer after being introduced at Special Olympics by my daughter Eunice. "But," he added, "please don't call me handicapped."

By Rose Kennedy

November is Mental Retardation Month. "Together, we can do more" is the theme.

Many times over the years I have been asked to give a message of hope and optimism concerning the mentally retarded. Only a parent who has known the anguish of hearing a doctor say, "Your baby is retarded," understands how desperate is the need to hear words of reassurance, to gain the knowledge that there is a place in the world for a tiny human being who must overcome a grave handicap.

My daughter Rosemary was such a child, and I was such a parent. At first, I had only faith to comfort me. There was nowhere to turn, nothing doctors could do or say, no medical or community resources to console or support us.

But that was more than a half-century ago. Over the years much has happened to ease the loneliness and to sustain the confidence of families with special children. And much has been accomplished in making a place for these children.

It is hard to believe that only 30 years ago, when one of the founders of the Association for Retarded Citizens wanted to place a notice in her local newspaper asking other parents of special children to get in touch with her, the editor refused to let her sign her name or include her address. Mental retardation was considered a guilty secret to be wept over alone.

Today all that has changed. The National Association for Retarded Citizens has more than 250,000 members, with representation in every state. Many of those members are the retarded themselves. For, increasingly, we have learned that the great majority of the mentally retarded are fully capable — within some limitations — of living happy and useful lives of work, play, love and responsibility.

Much of what has happened to improve life for the retarded has come about since my son Jack was President. Of all he did in his tragically few years in office, the focus of his Administration on the retarded may well have been his most lasting and magnificent achievement. As he said in 1961, when he established the first Presidential panel on mental retardation in our country, "It is the emotional strain, the problems of adjustment, training, schooling and vocation — the attempts to make possible a full life for the child — that represent the major impact of retardation. Our goals should be to prevent retardation. Failing this, we must provide for the retarded child the same opportunity for full social development that is the birthright of every American child."

The American people, all of you, have responded generously and nobly to this call for equal opportunities for the retarded. The many young people working in summer camps and community programs have especially dedicated themselves to helping the retarded learn the skills of both work and play that were so long denied them.

But guaranteeing this birthright has not come quickly or easily. As Dr. Richard Masland, one of the great pioneers in the field, has said, "We make progress in mental retardation by many small advances across a broad front."

Employment of the retarded, for example, has come slowly. In the Federal Civil Service the rules had to be changed so that the retarded could be given a chance to prove what they could do — rather than be required to make a certain score on an intelligence test. Now thousands of the mentally retarded work for Federal, state and local governments.

In thousands of communities the retarded now work in industry or in workshops where they can perform useful and constructive tasks under special supervision. I stress the importance of work because through it we learn to value ourselves most highly and to fashion a meaning and purpose for our lives. Even if it is only making candles or packaging parts for do-it-yourself kits, the dignity of work and the pride of accomplishment are possible for the great majority of our retarded citizens. Private and public employers and labor unions have become more enlightened than they were when Jack was President, but there still is a long way to go. I have been given assurances by many labor leaders that we will continue to make advances until jobs are available to all the mentally retarded who can qualify for them.

Just as important as the growing opportunities for work are the new laws that guarantee every special child and young adult the chance for an education equal to that of any other child. One new law — Public Law 94-142, passed by Congress last year — assures that every retarded person, even the very seriously handicapped, will receive the benefits of a public education tailored to his or her needs and abilities. That means that parents do not have to ruin themselves financially to send their children to special schools or to keep them in private institutions. As Jack said 16 years ago, "The grim struggle for survival does not allow us the luxury of wasting our human resources." Now we are beginning to translate that important insight into national practice.

When Public Law 94-142 was being debated, we found that, while it provided for academic and vocational training, it did not include provision for physical education. Since 1968, The Kennedy Foundation, which my husband and I established, has sponsored an international program of physical fitness and sports competition called Special Olympics. More than 650,000 mentally retarded people take part in this program in every one of our states and 19 foreign countries. Special Olympics has taught us a great lesson: the more the mentally retarded build their physical skills, the more they develop socially and even intellectually. Thus, because play and exercise have been proven to be so beneficial to the retarded, equal access to physical education is included in the law.

Last year, The Kennedy Foundation started a new program of Internships in Recreation for Special Olympians who can qualify for jobs in the recreation field and whose communities will guarantee them a permanent position once their one-year internship is over. The first three Kennedy interns are now entering permanent employment. One of them, Mike Spencer, is going to teach swimming in the Danville, Va., Park and Recreation Department. He learned to swim in Special Olympics, and he learned to love people because he saw love all around him.

At a meeting of Special Olympics, my daughter Eunice introduced Mike as "One of our handicapped interns."

"I'm mentally retarded," Mike said with great dignity and firmness. "But please don't call me handicapped."

This, I think, sums up beautifully the message I have for the parents, relatives, friends and neighbors of the mentally retarded. We need no longer be afraid of this term as the description of a devastating and hopeless handicap.

For millions of lively, interested, loving and active boys and girls and men and women we once committed to the oblivion of institutions, the doors are now open to most of what society offers to all of us.

In the past 50 years I have seen the world come to terms with its mentally retarded children, accept their human qualities and come to know them as warm, tender, feeling human beings.

Parents often ask me for consolation or advice, and I used to feel that the best I could offer was a prayer of strength and courage, such as my own favorite, the "Meditation," written by John Henry Cardinal Newman. But now I feel confident that I can help sustain them with the reality of expectation, with the conviction that a life of many glowing possibilities is now open to their special children.

Yes, those fateful words, "your child is retarded," still darken our joy at the advent of a new life. But we have learned that the words mean almost nothing in themselves. We are all, in a sense, retarded. All of us fall short of the ideal. All of us are slow and awkward compared with others.

A mind that is slow need no longer mean a life that's unfulfilled. A retarded person need no longer depend on the whim of charity or the shelter of high walls.

Now there are dedicated scientists, skilled teachers, just laws and understanding communities. True, much needs to be accomplished before mental retardation is eradicated. But today there is a richness of life for the retarded who already are learning, playing, reading, painting, making poetry, loving, swimming, dancing, worshipping, working. Yet, we must keep working and striving for all those who, like my daughter Rosemary, are retarded in mind but blessed in spirit.

My vision is a world where mental retardation will be overcome, where we no longer mourn with mothers of retarded children but exult and rejoice with parents of healthy, happy youngsters. Then, and only then, can we say, in the words of St. Paul: "I have fought the good fight. I have finished the course. I have kept the faith."

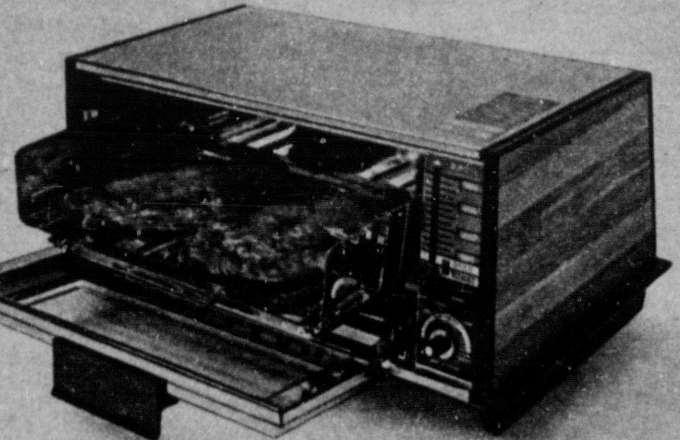
It broils! It bakes!
It toasts 4 slices automatically!
It's the Toast 'N Broil
Toast-R-Oven® toaster from GE.



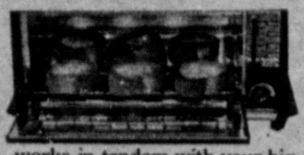
If you want a toaster oven that does everything this toaster oven does, get yourself a GE.

It's a 2-steak broiler.

This GE toaster oven has a separate broil setting that lets you broil steaks, hamburgers, hot dogs—easily and conveniently. And because it broils, GE's toaster oven makes more than two hundred dishes you can't make in most other toaster ovens! The high-wall broiler pan helps protect the interior from spatters—and it pops into the dishwasher for easy cleaning.

It's a great oven.

GE's toaster oven handles the dozens of small cooking jobs you'd hate to heat up your big oven for. Like top-browning sandwiches, baking casseroles, warming leftovers. And it works in tandem with your big oven when you want to cook foods that require different temperatures.



It's an automatic toaster.

It takes the place of a 4-slice toaster. It toasts odd-size breads and rolls, both sides at once, and shuts off automatically. A bell rings when toast is ready.

Features! Features!

The thermostatically controlled oven has settings from 200°F to 500°F. Automatic Top Brown setting is great for melting, crisping and browning. And a signal bell rings when food is ready. Removable rack, oven tray, broiler pan and swing-open crumb tray make cleaning easy.

Only GE gives you so many models to choose from.

See them all at your GE dealer's now. The model featured here is the T26. The T23 broils, bakes and toasts 2 slices. Non-broiling models include the Deluxe 2-slice Toast-R-Oven toaster (T93B) as well as the King Size 4-slice Toast-R-Oven toaster (T97). There's a size for every family, a price for every budget.

Whichever model you choose, once you own a Toast-R-Oven toaster from GE, you'll wonder how you ever managed without it.

¾ cup nonfat dry milk

1. Mix honey and peanut butter in bowl. Stir in nonfat dry milk a little at a time until thoroughly blended.

2. Shape into narrow roll. Wrap in wax paper and chill until firm. Cut into 1-inch pieces and wrap in cellophane.

NORTHWESTERN APPLE CANDY

4 to 5 unpeeled apples
Water
2 tablespoons unflavored gelatin
½ cup cold water
2 cups sugar
1 tablespoon cornstarch
⅛ teaspoon salt
⅔ cup coarsely chopped walnuts
1 teaspoon grated lemon peel
1 tablespoon lemon juice
⅓ cup confectioners' sugar (for rolling)

2. Put through food mill or sieve and measure 2 cups pulp into a heavy, 2-qt. saucepan. Cook until thick, stirring often.

3. Soften gelatin in cold water. Mix sugar, cornstarch and salt; add to apple pulp. Cook again over low heat, stirring constantly, until mixture is thick. Add gelatin; cook over low heat, stirring until gelatin is dissolved and mixture thickens again. Remove from heat.

4. Stir in walnuts, lemon peel and juice. Turn into an 8-inch square shallow glass dish that has been rinsed with cold water. Let stand 24 hours.

5. Cut into rectangles — about 60. Roll in confectioners' sugar. Place on rack until outside is dry. Store in a covered container.

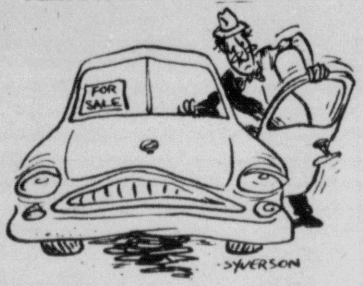
ARMOUR'S ARMOURY



AND WHAT ABOUT MILEAGE?

As different as people are,
They're not so much so as a car.
Cars come, for instance, in more hues:
Imagine people greens and blues.
And people may be short or tall.
Or fat or thin — that's nearly all.
But think of cars, the two-door, four-door,
The rear a lift-up, like one more door.
Consider dashboards and upholstery,
The latter being firm or bolstery.
Consider square or sloping backs,
All types of bumpers, lights and racks. . . .
I'm glad I'm not a car, I know—
My trade-in value would be low.

If little else, Billy was known to be a very fast thinker. His teacher asked, "Billy, why is your composition on milk only one-half page long and everyone else's is at least two pages?"

Billy thought, but not for long. "Well, my story is about condensed milk," he replied.

THROUGH A CHILD'S EYES

Recently, my 5-year-old daughter and I were discussing the bad language being used on a particular TV program. I suggested that we should just pretend we didn't hear the bad words. It's Inside You . . .

Can You Wake Up That Financial Genius?

"... More Than 100,000 People Have Discovered How To Really Do It..."

THE DIFFERENCE

If hours, efforts, or brains are not what separate the rich from the average guy who is swamped with debts and very little income then what is?

I learned the answer to that question from an old fellow in Denver. This fellow worked in a drug store stocking the shelves. Very few people knew that he had $200,000 in the bank, all of which he had earned starting from nothing.

Within a year after meeting him, I was told and shown the same thing by a young man who had recently earned over a million dollars. By this time, I began to realize that what I was being shown was truly a remarkable and workable way to grow rich.

THE BEGINNING

I began to apply the principles and methods I had been shown. The results were amazing. I couldn't believe how easy it was, in fact it seemed too easy.

But then I met an elderly lady (83 years old) who, although not very smart, has made $117,000 using the same formula.

I then figured my beginning wasn't luck.

For three and one half years, I worked hard to refine and improve on the formula that I had been shown, so that it would be easy to get quicker results.

As I did this, my assets multiplied very rapidly (160% per year) to the point that I didn't have to work any longer.

MORE LEISURE

I guess I am bragging now, but I did start spending a lot of time in our back yard pool, traveling around the country, and doing a lot of loafing.

Then one day a friend asked me how he could do what I had done.

So I began to outline the formula that I had improved to show him really how simple it was, and how he could do the same thing.

Mark Haroldsen spent four years perfecting a "wealth formula" and became a millionaire in the process:
"I've found," says Haroldsen, "that most people just need a very specific road map to follow. . . they can do what I've done. Millionaires are not smarter than you, they just know the wealth formula."

One of many unsolicited comments on my material:

> " . . . when it came I read it. Then I read it again, and have read it about once a week since it came. No magic. No secrets. A plain, easy-to-understand, 1-2-3 way for anybody with a little patience and common sense to become totally independent within a reasonable length of time. The one book I've been looking for for at least fifteen years. . . ."
> – Jerry Donaho, Valdez, Arkansas

By the next time he approached me, I had written almost a complete volume on the easy way for him to copy my results.

EASY TO READ

I wrote this in simple, straight-forward language so anyone could understand it.

This time my friend's questions were very specific. (He had already begun buying properties with the formulas I had been giving him.) Now he had a property he wanted to buy, but was out of cash. How could he buy it?

I not only showed him how to buy without cash, but by the time the deal was complete, he had $5,000 cash in his pocket to boot.

I also showed him how to buy a $26,000 property for $75 down.

ANYONE CAN

You can do exactly what I did, or my close friends have done; in fact, you may well do it better. (I began doing this in my spare time only.)

It doesn't matter where you live or the size of your town or city, my formula will show you exactly how to:

- Buy income properties for as little as $100 down.
- Begin without any cash.
- Put $10,000 cash in your pocket each time you buy (without selling property.)
- Double your assets every year.
- Legally avoid paying federal or state income taxes.
- Buy bargains at ½ their market value.
- Allow you to travel one week out of every month.

When you send me a check or money order for $10, I will send you all my formulas and methods, and you are free to use them anywhere and as often as you would like.

IT'S GUARANTEED

Now if you were a personal friend of mine, I know you would believe me and not need any kind of guarantee, but since you don't know me personally, I will guarantee that you will be completely satisfied and that my formula will work for you if you apply it. I will back up that guarantee by not cashing your check for 30 days, and if you for any reason change your mind, let me know and I will send your uncashed check back.

You may ask, why am I willing to share my formula for wealth? Well, simply because those of you who order my material will be helping to increase my net worth.

You shouldn't care if I profit as long as you profit. I guarantee that you'll be satisfied that my methods will help you or I'll send your money back!

"FINANCIAL FREEDOM"

To order, simply take any size paper, write the words "Financial Freedom", and send your name and address, along with a check for $10.00 to Mark O. Haroldsen, Inc., Dept. E-986 Tudor Mansion Bldg., 4751 Holladay Blvd., Salt Lake City, Utah 84117.

If you send for my material now, I will also send you documents that will show you precisely how you can borrow from $20,000 to $200,000 at 2% above the prime rate using just your signature as collateral.

By the way, if you feel a little uneasy about sending me a check or money order for $10.00, simply postdate it by 30 days which will completely eliminate your risk.

YOUNG COLLECTOR'S STAMP OF-THE-MONTH-CLUB

a membership club at only $4.95 per month!

Your Child's World...
To capture his or her imagination...
by shimmering colors...through names never before seen or imagined. Collecting and
far off... learning ...

The F.C.I. Collectors Society announces the formation of its special division for children — from six to sixteen. Your child is invited to become a Charter Member, receiving not only the monthly stamp selections of the Club, but also the special bonus offerings, free quarterly membership prizes, and stamp albums!

The F.C.I. Collectors Society, the parent organization of the new YOUNG COLLECTOR'S STAMP OF-THE-MONTH-CLUB, is the pioneer in new stamp investments, numbering thousands of farsighted investors on its rolls.

Monthly Dues of only $4.95!

Your child will immediately receive a Charter Membership card, a warm welcome, and a request for birthday information (in order to receive an annual bonus set of fine stamps),

- the first monthly selection detailed in full below (a $7.63 true value, for $4.95), fully described as to country of origin and representation on stamps,
- a quarterly membership prize, stamp related, of course,
- and his or her first free stamp album (to be followed by others as needed).

Your child — and this grand project

Is there a child who doesn't collect? At first stuffed animals, baseball cards, models of cars or dollhouses. But as time goes on, those first precious items give way to a "collectible", something to show to a parent or friend, or bring to school as the basis for a report or project. Happy is the parent who leads a child into the peaceful pursuits, where collecting becomes knowledge, and knowledge — happiness.

Don't doubt the romance of stamps. Suddenly very dry words such as "geography", "history", "art", turn into vibrant reality! Happy is that parent who, when discussing the events of the day in Asia, hears his child say: "Mom, Dad, I have a set of stamps from the Phillipines. Did you know that they used to belong to America?" And so begins a stimulating process each of us desires to see in our children.

THE FIRST MEMBERSHIP SELECTION

(24 Stamps, 3 Complete Sets!)

This magnificently conceived Olympic Stamp Issue by the Dominican Republic commemorates the 1956 Melbourne, Australia Games (16th Olympic Games).

Present and past legendary heroes, such as Mildred "Babe" Didrickson, Bob Mathias, Jesse Owens and many others are to be seen, each caught at the peak of his or her event. Many countries are represented, almost every event! ACCOMPANYING THE THREE GORGEOUS SETS, YOUR CHILD WILL RECEIVE A COMPLETE DESCRIPTION OF THE COUNTRY OF ORIGIN. The presentation album, stamps and information will please you — and your child!

In the 1978 Scott's Catalog the set is valued at $7.63. It is typical of the Club's purchasing power and worldwide contacts to save your child over 33⅓%. Our eye will always focus on value for members.

In the future

Equally fine sets of stamps will be offered — each fully described (country of origin and reason for creation).

Through our Club's capacity to research the better stamps of the world, and also because of our massive purchases of almost entire issues, prices of stamps will be difficult if not impossible to duplicate. We well remember the unhappy child-turned-into-adult who laments that — "if only I knew something about stamps when I was young, my collection would not just be a collection of worthless paper!" We don't want that to happen to our Club Members!

Won't you give your child a Charter Membership in this New, Exciting Program?

Parent — grandparent — uncle or aunt, send us the child's name and $4.95. Then let us entertain and inform the child. There is never any obligation to continue. Any selection can be returned for full refund within 10 days.

FLEETWOOD MAC: ROCK'S RED-HOT GROUP

They've just broken the all-time chart record for their album Rumours and are about to tour the country.

By Andrew Frances

One of the longest-standing records in music history was broken last month. The title had belonged to the king of rock himself, the late Elvis Presley: 20 weeks at the No. 1 spot for his album Blue Hawaii. Ten years after Elvis's triumph and 21 weeks after their album became No. 1, the title went to a group named Fleetwood Mac. Their chart-topping album, which has already sold more than four million copies, is called Rumours.

The band dates back over 10 years, but numerous personnel changes had made the group the revolving door of rock, leaving them without an identifiable sound. Last year, though, thanks to the addition of two Americans (guitarist Lindsay Buckingham and sensuous singer Stevie Nicks) to the original British core of Mick Fleetwood (drums) and John and Christine McVie (bass and keyboards respectively), Fleetwood Mac have finally managed to achieve their promise and have sold more than eight million albums over the past 18 months. Their concert tours are now stadium sellouts, and, to crown it all, they garnered the three top honors (Best Album, Best Group and Rock Personalities of the Year) on TV's Rock Awards.

Mick Fleetwood, the group's founder, is also their manager, handling everyday professional responsibilities. It was Mick who approached John McVie to start Fleetwood Mac. John had recently learned to play bass "by taking the two top strings of a Hohner (six-string) guitar and playing bass on that." He had originally wanted to be a trumpeter. Though completely confident about his music now, John does not compose for the group and still feels "a little scared sometimes — you look up and say, 'All these people — for us?'"

His wife, born Christine Perfect ("I was Perfect until I married John," she quips), was originally an art teacher, occasionally doing window design on London's fashionable Oxford Street. Her parents had to force her to learn piano because she hated it. Now, though, she has written three giant hits for the band ("Over My Head," "Say You Love Me" and "Don't Stop"), and her sultry glow is confident and powerful yet provocatively vulnerable.

The group's new-found accessibility also seems to owe a lot to last year's additions. Lindsay Buckingham, a guitarist of extreme technical expertise, combines a gut-level feel for music with an atomic-energy source for expressing himself. His guitar solo rips regularly through the middle of his contribution to the Rumours album, the scorching hit, "(You Can) Go Your Own Way." Then there's blond-shagged vocalist Stevie Nicks, who, as the center spotlight's closest friend, is often a swirl of chiffon portraying the dreamy Welsh witch Rhiannon from the hit song she wrote for the band earlier this year. "My songs are a rolling diary," she says. "I'm a storyteller. I add a little, or take away." For Stevie it began in high school. "I fell madly in love with this guy. Then he went to Mexico and I fell totally apart. I just sat down and wrote a song. It was terribly sad, terribly emotional. It was a bummer, but it was a beginning."

Rumours and the preceding album, Fleetwood Mac, also recorded with the current lineup, have an energy and enthusiasm unmatched in rock. The songs on these albums have distinguished the new group not only from their earlier incarnations but also from every other band.

Talking about their phenomenal year, Stevie explains, "I think audiences really like us as people; I think they have a good feeling towards us in a human way."

Soon Fleetwood Mac again will be crisscrossing the country on tour. We can only guess at the direction the group will take. Says Christine: "We never seem to stop progressing. Once you slot yourself, there's only so far you can go in any one tight direction. I don't want to stop experimenting, especially now that we have a combination of people who are able to do so many things so well."

"We can't really say where we're going," says Lindsay, "because ideawise, we're always a little ahead of ourselves, which is the best creative situation to be in."

How can you argue with that?

15 Minutes Ago My Feet Hurt Like the Devil.

Not Anymore!

For years, painful tired feet and legs — and aching back — were really hard on me. By the end of every day I felt like I couldn't take another step.

I spent a fortune on special shoes — on arch supports — on lotions, salves and salts.

Nothing worked for me.

Then, quite by accident, I stumbled onto the real secret of pain relief that I had been waiting and praying for.

ROLL-A-MAGIC!

It was a simple device that had been designed by a friend of mine. He called it ROLL-A-MAGIC — and he promised that it would work like magic.

To tell the truth, I didn't believe him. He told me that it had helped his wife and his parents. I still didn't believe him.

But then I tried it for myself — one night before going to bed. In less than 15 minutes I had great results — better than I had ever dreamed possible.

I used ROLL-A-MAGIC every night for a week. The aches and pains that had plagued me for so long long seemed to disappear into thin air.

Now, since I am not a doctor or anything like that, I don't quite understand "why" ROLL-A-MAGIC works. It just does!

And, it's WONDERFUL!

NOW YOU CAN GET ROLL-A-MAGIC!

I've now been able to convince my friend to make ROLL-A-MAGIC available to you — to men and women who want and need pain relief right away.

Yes! Unless you are one of the fortunate few who never suffer tired, aching or painful feet, legs and back — here is good news.

Now YOU can use ROLL-A-MAGIC without risking a single red cent. Let me explain.

I want to send you ROLL-A-MAGIC at once. Try it out for yourself — in the privacy of your own home.

Judge the benefits for yourself.

You MUST agree that ROLL-A-MAGIC gives you more solid relief than you've ever dreamed possible — or simply send it back for a full refund — no questions asked.

That's right. ROLL-A-MAGIC is absolutely GUARANTEED to help you or your money back.

AN IMPOSSIBLE DREAM? NO!

Does all this sound like an impossible dream — like something too good to be true? Well, it's NOT! Not when you use ROLL-A-MAGIC — specially designed to:

●●● Gently massage the tender reflex and acupressure points — instantly stimulating and invigorating your tired feet, legs and back!

●●● Bring you a tremendous feeling of well-being—a new relaxation—a new spring in every step.

Just imagine how wonderful it will be when you can say — after a simple 15-minute "treatment"—"My goodness, I feel wonderful. I don't have a single ache or pain. My feet are simply NOT tired. My back feels rested. It's just like a miracle."

It's NOT a miracle. It's ROLL-A-MAGIC!

And, ROLL-A-MAGIC comes complete with step-by-step, easy-to-follow instructions — that make it so simple to use and benefit from that even a child can master it in moments.

Since it weighs less than 3 ounces and is but five inches long — you can use it in your home — or take it with you when you travel.

And perhaps most important, please remember that it is ABSOLUTELY GUARANTEED to bring you the blessings of relief — or your money back without quibble or question.

So, to order your guaranteed ROLL-A-MAGIC — simply complete and mail the Pain Relief Coupon below with your payment of just $4. Yes! Just $4 complete and postage paid.

Remember — it makes no difference if you are a man or a woman — no difference if you are young or old — ROLL-A-MAGIC must work for you or your money back!

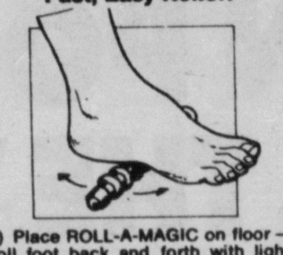
Fast, Easy Relief!



1) Place ROLL-A-MAGIC on floor — roll foot back and forth with light pressure. Blessed relief!

2) Use the ball-bearing knob to massage and soothe feet, legs and back. Blessed relief!

NOW IS THE TIME TO PLAN YOUR FINANCIAL FUTURE

By Kate Kelly

You may be 25 and spending money on the hospital costs of your firstborn, or 45 and making payments on your teenager's college tuition. No matter your age or anticipated expenses, today is the time to start forming a long-range financial plan. Even with Social Security and a pension, the pleasures of your leisure time in retirement could be diminished if you haven't saved any money on your own.

How can you avoid being stranded with limited funds at retirement? The first and most important step is to start saving immediately. Almost everyone finds it difficult to set money aside, so you'll need to develop a regular system. At your request, many banks will automatically transfer a specified amount from a checking to a savings account each month. Some companies have similar plans and will deduct money from your paycheck. These methods assure regular deposits and spare you the temptation of spending the money.

Writing a check to your savings account when you make your rent or mortgage payment is another alternative. Then you can put away more whenever you can afford it. You might start saving 3 to 6 percent of your take-home pay, and you should have at least three months' salary in savings for emergencies.

If you're working, you're probably covered by a pension plan, right? Wrong. Hans P. Ziegler, vice president of the Trust Division of Manufacturers Trust Company in New York City, notes, "Very few people realize that 50 percent of our total work force is not covered by a pension plan." You should investigate your status by checking with your company personnel office.

If you're not already covered by a pension plan, consider an Individual Retirement Account, which is available through most banks. Workers may set aside up to 15 percent of their annual salary or $1,500, whichever is less, and that money is exempt from current taxes. Then, starting at age 59½, you make withdrawals at any rate you wish and are taxed only on the amounts you withdraw each year. Be sure the money deposited will not be needed for emergencies. Should you need it before you reach 59½, you will be stiffly penalized.

If you're self-employed and wish to set aside retirement money, the Keogh Plan is for you. It functions like an Individual Retirement Account, but the limit is higher. Fifteen percent of your annual income or $7,500, whichever is less, may be set aside, and it is tax-deferred.

What about life insurance? For most people it's an important part of long-range planning, but there are some points to consider before buying.

Perhaps you won't need to purchase insurance. If you're covered by a company group policy, it may be adequate. Do you have dependents? If not, buying insurance may not be the best use of your money.

If you do need insurance, you'll want to know the difference between term life insurance and whole (or ordinary) life. Term insurance offers maximum protection for minimum cost for a limited period of time. Whole life or permanent insurance is more expensive for the amount of protection you receive, but people find it attractive for other reasons. For instance, as annual premiums are paid, the policy takes on a cash value, which you can borrow against or — near retirement — take in cash or as an annuity. (An annuity is an arrangement in which the insurance company makes monthly payments to you for an agreed-upon length of time.)

Some families buy a combination of whole and term insurance. The term insurance provides a large amount of protection against the untimely loss of income, while the whole life helps prepare for the future. You'll need to evaluate your own needs and then find a good insurance agent to help select the best plan for you.

Suppose you have a savings base, your pension plan is fine and you have insurance. Should you invest? Yes. If you have money that won't be needed for emergencies then look into such growth investments as stocks, mutual funds, real estate and business ventures. Naturally, there are other possible growth opportunities, and if you're knowledgeable in those areas and have the money, they can be rewarding investments.

Whatever your course of action, if you earn money, start making your long-range financial plans today.

IF YOU HAVE IRON POOR BLOOD ALL THE VITAMINS IN THE WORLD WON'T HELP

Iron poor blood is the most widespread nutritional ailment in America today. And taking vitamins can't help, because vitamins don't contain iron.

What you need is Geritol, every day. Geritol is so rich in iron, just one tablet contains more iron than even a pound of calf's liver. Plus vitamins important to your health.

Geritol's iron can actually build your blood day by day. That's what makes it different from vitamin pills—and so important to you.

It takes more than love
to make a happy marriage.

Strange how the last thing many couples think about in planning their marriage is the matter of religion. Only after the caterer, the photographer, the printer have been provided for, only then is church mentioned. And church often is more a matter of social custom than real religious conviction. No wonder so many marriages get into trouble. God barely makes the guest list.

If you are about to be married and religion is not important to you, do you know what your chances for a happy life are? The odds are not good. If you are already married and religion has been packed away with the bridal gown, do you wonder that life has become a bore or a battle?

Maybe you are one of those unhappy people who has decided that life is meant to be boring and absurd. If so, we invite you to look into our pamphlet "The Real Secret of Successful Marriage." Write today. No one will call on you.

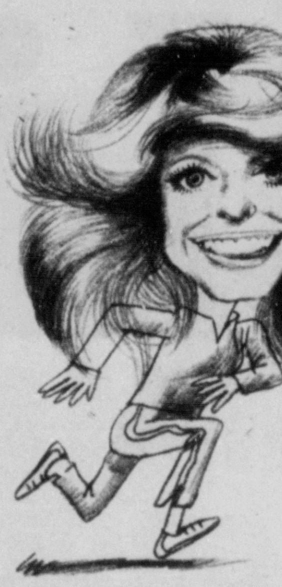
HOW THE STARS TRY TO KEEP FIT

They fast and dance and jog, but some still agree with Milton Berle: "Exercise only means that you'll die healthier."

By Joey Adams



The Mayor of New York City appointed me Commissioner of Youth and Physical Fitness — neither of which I have — so I decided to find how others stay in shape.

I soon discovered that Jimmy Carter keeps fit by playing tennis or, when he's in Plains, canoeing and swimming. He eats properly, rarely drinks and never smokes. And no matter how busy he is, he finds time to walk up stairs rather than take the elevator, which keeps his Secret Service tubbos in shape, too.

Then I checked out the stars. Charlton Heston told me that he runs to keep fit but "hates" it. "I do it because I make my living with my waistline," he said, "and 15 minutes of running is as good a conditioner as there is. It's boring and no fun. You can't sing or rehearse poems in your head while running, but an actor's body is the instrument he uses, and any demanding role requires physical fitness."

I soon noticed that jogging is the "in" outdoor sport. From my window overlooking New York's Central Park you can see all sorts of shapes, sizes and forms bobbling around the footpath of the reservoir. On a clear day you sometimes can see Robert Redford or Bess Meyerson huffing and puffing, and Paul Newman, Lee and Farrah Fawcett-Majors, Brenda Vaccarro, Abe Vigoda, Al Pacino and Lola Falana are other jogging nuts.

Octogenarian George Abbott dances for hours at Roseland, Manhattan's world-famous dance hall, and usually outlasts his much younger partners. Alice Faye, Racquel Welch, Ginger Rogers and Shirley MacLaine are others who keep their figures trim by workouts on the parquet.

For some reason, most comedians avoid any kind of exercise except a round of golf, and that's providing there's an electric cart handy. When George Burns has to open a window he calls the handyman. Buddy Hackett doesn't even watch sports. Jackie Gleason, who needs help with his toothbrush, yawns, "I get plenty of exercise. Immediately after waking I always say sternly to myself, 'Ready now, up — down — up — down,' and after three minutes I say, 'O.K., now the other eyelid.'"

Milton Berle says, "Statistics show what really happens if you exercise daily — you die healthier." Bob Hope says, "Observe your dog. If he's fat you're not getting enough exercise."

Diet is a big thing with the stars. Hugh O'Brian eats one meal a day — a big breakfast. Lynn Redgrave eats one meal a day — a small dinner. Nick Nolte eats no meat and fasts two days a week. Red Buttons, Carol Channing, Phyllis Diller, Cloris Leachman and Gloria Swanson allow no junk foods.

Debbie Reynolds swears by a breakfast of radishes, cooked beans and a little castor oil. Sounds tasty — but for humans? Paul Lynde claims he shriveled 75 pounds by inhaling nothing but fruit, crackers and fish on alternate days. Jimmy Coco eats pasta every day. He also gains weight every day. He also goes the Duke University rice diet way every season. The older actresses, like Hepburn and Stanwyck, do the steak and tomatoes and vegetable bit at dinner.

Elvis Presley's doctor, George Nichopoulos, claims the late star was a food junkie. Cooks "mothered him to death" by constantly feeding him junk food against doctors' orders. Elvis had a gymnasium behind his mansion but never used it. He was so uptight about his appearance that he had cosmetic surgery to dispose of the bags under his eyes and even considered a major operation to remove his paunch. But he just couldn't control his insatiable craving for junk food.

Princess Grace Kelly's caviar-logged life led her to sigh sadly to me one day, "If you can figure out how to figure out the diet problem, let me know." She says she now cuts down on everything. She stays off alcohol during the month of August and then lives on salads, fruits and lean meats. She and Prince Rainier regularly go to a spa — and that's whenever the double chins start to try for three.

Paul Newman keeps in shape by driving and training for his racing-car competition. Jolie Gabor, Phyllis Diller, Lauren Bacall, Virginia Graham and some other ladies don't worry about keeping fit. They just have their faces knitted and purled when they want to take off a few years. Says Phyllis: "I've had so many face-lifts there's nothing left in my shoes."

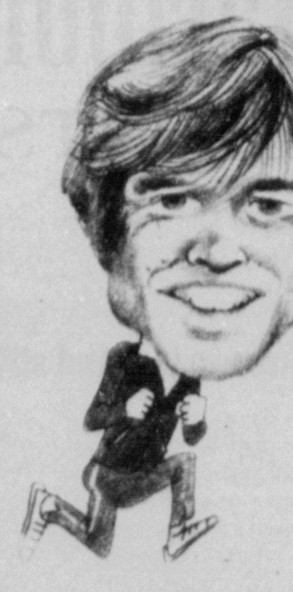
Robert Conrad, a pizza, beer, ice cream and popcorn man, pays dearly for his extravagance: "If I want to lose seven or eight pounds, I'll fast three or four days. I drink just enough liquid so that I don't get dehydrated."

Angie Dickinson and Liza Minnelli go the discotheque route. Tom Jones and Englebert Humperdinck hit the steam bath.

Sylvester Stallone works out daily in a gym. Alan King, Burt Bacharach, Burt Reynolds and Farrah F.-M. are tennis freaks. Shirley Jones believes emotions have a powerful impact on physical health. "The head rules the body so completely that one can become physically ill from emotional problems."

Jack Paar works with his hands. He gardens, plants and carpents and says he's never been happier and "will never ever go back to TV." Sixty-five-year-old cowboy star Roy Rogers bowls to keep himself trim.

So, after learning all this, I still don't know how I should go about getting into shape. But I've got a lot of ideas.



Comedian Joey Adams is the author of Here's to the Friars: The Heart of Show Business.

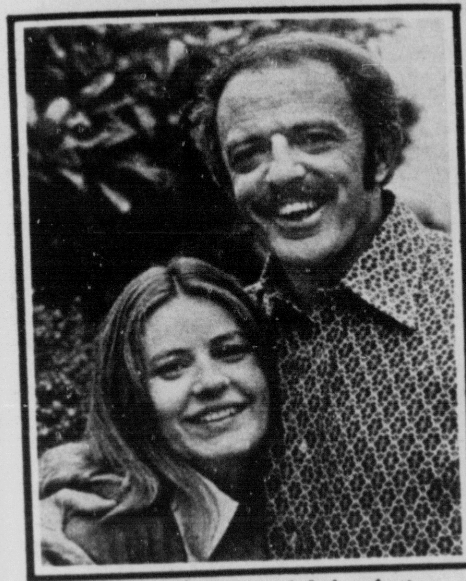
PATTY DUKE TELLS HOW SHE COMBINES CAREER AND FAMILY

She's been acting since age 8 and has won acclaim for stage, screen and television performances.



Patty and husband John Astin.

By Helen Dorsey

The acting Astins — John and his wife Patty Duke — are a talented pair as well as a devoted couple and doting parents of a quintet of sons ranging in ages from 18 to 4. Unlike many Hollywood working couples whose marriages often break up due to conflicting careers or prolonged separations, the Astins have found a happy, workable solution: they work together as a team whenever possible.

Currently, they are working solo. John is starring as Navy Lieut. Comdr. Matthew Sherman in the new ABC-TV World War II series, Operation Petticoat. (Although he's a stage and motion-picture actor, fans will remember him best for his TV work as the Latin-looking, droopy-eyed Gomez Addams in the weirdo series, The Addams Family.)

The affable, witty, soft-spoken, 47-year-old actor is a multifaceted man: he directed and starred in the pilot film of Petticoat, and he received an Academy Award nomination in 1968 for Prelude, his first writing, directing and producing effort, a 28-minute tragicomic featurette about loneliness and the breakdown in communication between people.

Patty, who has been acting for 22 of her 30 years, is a rare example of a child actress who has continued to enjoy success as an adult. The New York City native became the youngest person to star on Broadway, playing Helen Keller in The Miracle Worker at 13, then won an Oscar as best supporting actress for her recreation of the role on the screen. She starred in her own series, The Patty Duke Show, has made numerous movies and won her first Emmy for her performance in the TV movie My Sweet Charlie. She recently won a second Emmy for her performance in Captains and the Kings.

Together the Astins have become a formidable acting husband-and-wife team in an enormous variety of TV roles and have toured the country on and off for three years in Shot in the Dark, Marriage Gambol and My Fat Friend.

"Some people like to be together only one or two hours a day," John says, "but whether we're working or just sitting in the same room, we like to be with each other." They live near the UCLA campus in a comfortable but crowded house that's without tennis court or swimming pool but has a nice backyard.

Patty's life was anything but tranquil before meeting John Astin. Although The Patty Duke Show was a success, Patty doesn't have pleasant memories of it. The hours were extremely long, and the trivia that made up many of the episodes she feels did not allow her to be creative. Eventually, everyone's "all-American teenager" ended up on the psychiatrist's couch. Twice divorced from show-business people, she became the mother of a son, Sean Patrick. She and Astin were married in 1972.

Their unique working style evolved quite naturally. "We had toured together one summer and decided we didn't want to be separated or go through that kind of life alone," Patty says. During a writers' strike in 1973, they took to the road right after their youngest son, Mackenzie, was born. "We needed the money," she reasoned. "And because it's very important to maintain family unity, we decided to drag everyone along." Everyone includes Sean Patrick, Mackenzie and John's three sons by a previous marriage (who took very quickly to Patty). All the boys welcomed the excitement of seeing new places.

Occasionally, Patty goes on location by herself if John's not free. This past summer, for example, she completed a movie for TV in Hawaii entitled Voyage of Terror. (Her sister-in-law, a college professor went along for company and ended up becoming a movie extra. "Now she calls up and asks, 'When is my movie going to be shown on TV?'" Patty chuckles.)

The Astins' ability to enjoy their full and happy life is largely attributable to their pragmatism.

"Our life is very good but very noisy and hectic and messy," Patty observes with a grin, "and the boys have many different interests. For example, Tom, our 12-year-old, is extremely interested in his pet rats."

"By the way, we have an injured rat, Patty," John said.

"How can a rat get an injury? Now I suppose I have to get a back brace for a rat and teach it to strengthen its abdominal muscles. Did it expire yet? Tom will love digging another grave. Our backyard looks like an extension of a cemetery, from all the pets buried there," Patty said with a rueful smile.

WHAT MAKES A MAN HAPPY?

Money? Family? Job? Excitement? It all depends on which stage of his adult life he is going through.

By Shirley Sloan Fader

Recent research has shown that there are different ingredients in a man's life — work, marriage, excitement, children, leisure, money — and that to be happy he needs varying combinations of them at different stages of his life.

Sociologist Joseph Harry of the University of Nebraska has explored the stages men go through in depth. Using a cross section of typical American men, Dr. Harry divided them into six stages: single; married, no children; married, preschool children; married, school-age children; married, teenage children; married, children grown. The happiness patterns he discovered can be useful to every man — and to his family.

Let's take a typical young, single man. We'll call him Phil and go with him through life, noticing what makes him happy and unhappy at each stage. As a bachelor, Phil is happy if he has a fairly interesting job that provides him with a decent amount of money that he can use to create an exciting, fun-filled life. Since he's moving from job to job, Phil's friends change with some frequency.

Phil marries Karen and moves into the married, no children stage. Now his demands on life are more complex. He's still interested in his job and in fun and excitement, but for him to feel happy he and Karen have to agree on leisure activities.

Phil's and Karen's first baby changes their priorities. Because of heavy expenses, they have some battles over money, and when for a few months Karen devotes nearly all her time to the baby, Phil is miserable. Eventually they realize that even if they have to squeeze the budget hard elsewhere, money spent on baby sitters is necessary for a balanced life.

Many experts call this married preschool stage the "life-crunch period." Expenses are high, a man's earning power is usually moderate and the baby's demands on his wife's energy can be overwhelming. Karen may find that satisfaction with her marriage drops during this period.

By the time Phil has two children in school, he finds that his main object in life is "keeping everything synchronized and steady." Things that he once welcomed as exciting have less appeal. The demands of job and children are so high that a good amount of predictability in his life now seems attractive. "Happiness at this period," says Dr. Harry, "seems to depend on keeping life running as a unit with neither job nor family as a prominent solo."

Although Phil manages to achieve this job-family balance, life has some problems. Marriage researchers have found that school-age time can be the most difficult period for a couple. Preschoolers, despite the constant attention they require, have no school or social obligations. Parents can schedule daily routines, vacations and weekends as they wish. But school-age children's school schedules, dancing lessons, Little League, etc. very much shape parents' daily lives. As the children become more independent, research indicates that Phil's and Karen's satisfaction with their marriage will probably take a dramatic upward turn.

By the time the children are teenagers, Phil suddenly realizes time is beginning to run out. He doesn't want to spend his entire life in the same predictable routine. He again wants excitement.

Until now, Phil wasn't worried that he didn't have much money. Now, however, to feel happy he needs a dependable income and some solid reserve. Otherwise, he will fear a difficult retirement.

When the children are grown and out on their own, Phil can relax. He enjoyed the excitement he craved during the children's adolescence and now is content with his life. Though magazines constantly run articles about "empty nest" difficulties, investigations by sociologists show that the modern couple frequently find the period after the children have left to be one of the happiest stages of their marriage. "Phil mellowed," says Dr. Harry. "He's no longer after excitement. Yet he enjoys a wide range of things: family, friends, job, going out, puttering at home, hobbies.

"For people who move through life 'on schedule,' who marry around the age when most people marry, who have children at typical ages, who stay fully employed, married and healthy, life seems to grow happier as they grow older."

Dr. Harry found that on-schedule people like Phil and Karen can expect to have their happiness increase as long as both are healthy and they have an adequate income. His conclusion: "All my research suggests that if a man stays pretty much on schedule in life and seeks the mix of ingredients that work well for each stage of life, happiness will be his." ■

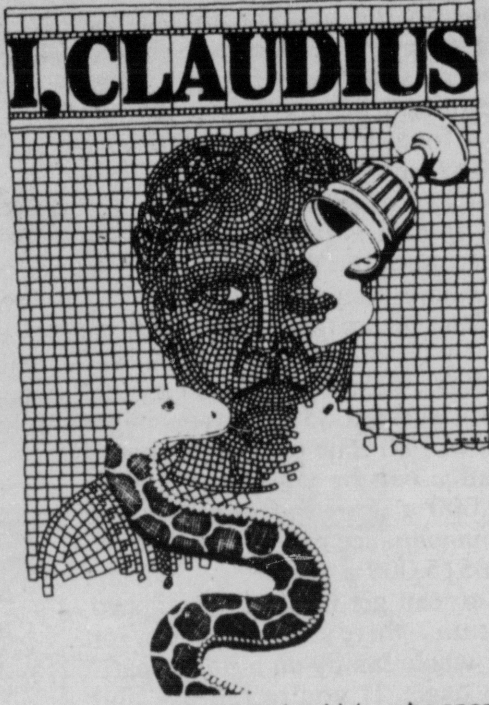
Observations

"I, Claudius," a 13-week Masterpiece Theatre presentation beginning November 6, brings to Public Broadcasting TV the story of Claudius I, emperor of Rome from 41 to 54 A.D. He ascended to the world's most powerful throne through the violent death of the mad Emperor Caligula—despite the fact he himself was considered a half-wit. The new series, a worthy successor to such Masterpiece Theatre productions as "Upstairs, Downstairs," "The First Churchills," "Elizabeth R," and "The Six Wives of Henry VIII," captures not only the historical sense of the Claudian years, but also the spirit and pomp.



Brilliant half-wit. Claudius was the grandson of the scheming Livia, who spent her life (and ended several other people's) plotting to gain the throne for her son, Tiberius. She succeeded briefly, but her efforts also helped bring on the four-year reign of savagery and debauchery of Claudius' insane nephew, Caligula. The physical defects Claudius carried from birth—he limped, stuttered, and twitched—disguised his bright mind and spared him more than once from Caligula's methodical elimination of rivals within his family.

Hail, Claudius. The cruel excesses of Caligula inevitably led to his assassination. The palace guards summarily declared Claudius emperor in the mistaken belief their lives would be far easier with the "fool" on the throne. Claudius surprised not only the guards, but all Rome. His reign was sensible and just; his cherished dream was restoration of the Republic. That he failed in this goal was not the fault of Claudius, but of the power-mad people around him.

Humor and candor. "I, Claudius" is based on the novels "I, Claudius," and "Claudius The God," by the distinguished poet and novelist Robert Graves. It was dramatized by Jack Pulman, whose other television triumphs include "Poldark" and "War and Peace." The production—by BBC/London Film Productions Ltd.—features a superbly gifted international cast. Watch your local television listings for the time the November 6 premiere of "I, Claudius" will be seen in your area. It is powerful television drama.

PEOPLE QUIZ / By John E. Gibson

Does the unconscious mind influence your social life? Can repressed feelings affect the way you invest money?

DON'T SELL YOUR HIDDEN THOUGHTS SHORT

TRUE OR FALSE?

1. Your unconscious mind plays an important role in everyday life.
2. The importance of unconscious impressions to social life is difficult to overestimate.
3. Sensitivity to the feelings and impressions arising from unconscious faculties tends to go hand in hand with creativity.
4. Your unconscious is likely to reveal more about you than anything you say.
5. Your unconscious can be your best friend — or a source of aggravation and embarrassment.
6. Your unconscious even can cause you to lose money in the stock market.

ANSWERS

1. True. Sociologist Otakar Machotka, who sums up his findings in his monograph, The Unconscious in Social Relations, finds that many people develop an amazing use of unconscious perceptions to assess another's sincerity, intentions and so on, and that the most frequent clues that we unconsciously note are the slight movements of the eyes and facial muscles, involuntary gestures, short hesitations and inflections of the voice. Since the evaluation of these clues usually is done unconsciously, we become conscious only of the result of the judgment.

2. True. As Machotka points out, many of our relationships with people are based largely on our unconscious reactions to them: avoidance of certain people, development of friendliness, hesitation in accepting help or cooperation from someone, acceptance of the convictions and attitudes of other people, for example. How much unconscious perceptions help in dealing with others and in coping with various situations depends on the extent to which we heed the promptings that result from these perceptions. They can play a central role in supplying us with a continuous flow of information regarding how others feel about us, how they respond to us, the effect of the interplay of moods and attitudes, etc. All this plays a considerable part in providing smooth contacts with people and in working out a compromise between their interests and our own wishes or values.

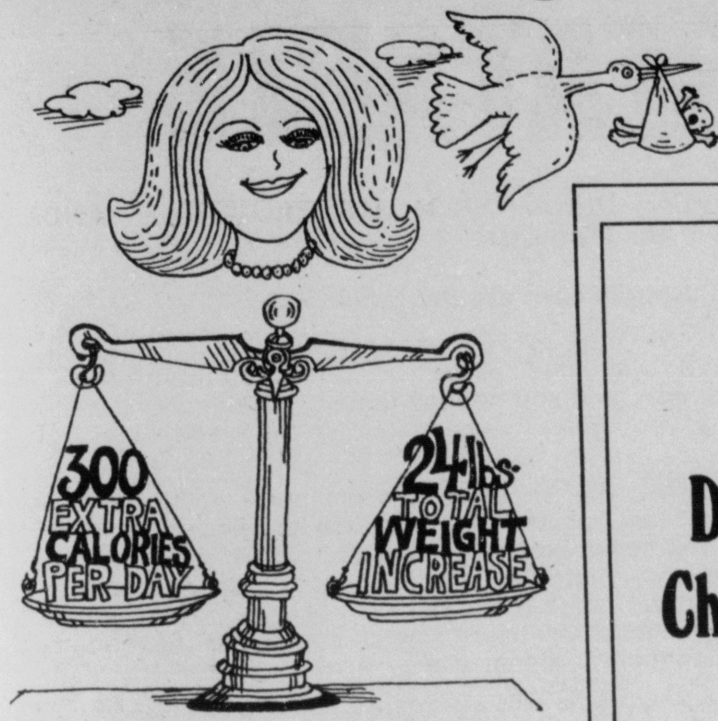
3. True. Studies conducted at the Institute of Personality Assessment and Research cite findings showing that people widely differ in the ease with which they can relax mentally to heed the flow of impulses and imagery arising from unconscious layers of the personality. The research suggests that the more creative a person is the more adept he is in "shifting mental gears," enabling him to tune in on unconscious as well as conscious levels.

4. True. University of Utah professor of psychology Ernst G. Beier points out that simple, everyday behavior when we meet others in social situations "is full of unconscious choices that stem from unconscious motivations. We commit revealing 'errors' and 'slips' for valid reasons that our conscious minds refuse to accept." The slips frequently reveal more about how you actually feel than anything you say.

5. True. People often "give" a problem to their unconscious mind before going to bed — to "sleep on it" — and wake up in the morning with the answer. On the other hand, Dr. Paul Thomas Young, professor of psychology emeritus at the University of Illinois, notes studies showing that "forgetting appointments, losing objects, slips of the tongue, breaking things (including our bones) seemingly by accident, awkward movements and other phenomena of everyday life are motivated by determinants of which the subject is not consciously aware." In their study on Psychological Adjustment, Desmond and Carol Cartwright find that "a large number of non-understandable phenomena may be attributed to the working out of unconscious conflict: the good student who fails exams, the probationer who breaks down in the last week of an unblemished two-year period of probation, the person who always is going to get married, but never gets as far as the altar, for instance."

6. True. A University of North Carolina study cites reports of stock-market experts indicating that "fluctuations of the stock market and the unpredictable activities of those who invest in it are frequently based on psychological rather than on economic reasons." A case history is reported of a businessman's consistent unconscious urge to lose money in the stock market. Analysis revealed a strong unconscious drive to appease guilt feelings brought on by hostility felt toward his father.

Calorie-Counting During Pregnancy



A newborn's health depends largely on what the expectant mother eats. So diet is one of the most important considerations in pregnancy. Producing a baby is work, as most women and almost no men understand. Carrying a child and nourishing it require an extra 300 calories a day in the mother's diet. That's 75,000 calories during the complete pregnancy. But don't do it all at once. Calorie usage should start slowly. Few calories are needed during the first three months when the growing fetus is small, but during the next six months, an expectant mother should take in an additional 300 calories a day.

That's why doctors weigh mothers-to-be each visit. Eating more than 300 extra calories a day puts on excessive weight, which is hard to get rid of later. Too much weight also can lead to high blood pressure, diabetes and problems with delivery. A big mother will produce a big baby, and although large babies usually do well, they are somewhat harder to deliver and could suffer from the procedure.

A small baby that comes from an undernourished mother is the most likely to have complications during the first few hours. Babies from undernourished mothers tend to be undernourished, a condition doctors call fetal deprivation. Such infants have a higher death rate and, if they live, often show signs of nervous-system damage.

An overweight mother-to-be should not diet during pregnancy because dieting increases the chances of producing a sick baby. So plan to take in only an extra 300 calories a day during the last six months of pregnancy, and try to keep the weight gain before delivery to 24 pounds.

Iron is important, too. Most American women do not have enough of it stored in their bodies to supply both their own needs and the needs of the growing baby. The baby will steal from the mother as much as it needs, so diet in pregnancy must include enough iron, which is found in eggs, meat and all colored fruits and vegetables. Calcium is also important. A quart of milk a day will supply the amount needed to form baby's bones and teeth. It also will provide the protein that baby's growing body requires. To be on the safe side, doctors prescribe calcium and iron pills.

How about vitamins? Doctors prescribe them for good measure, but the only vitamin that might be missing if the mother eats a normal diet is folic acid. So doctors sometimes give extra folic acid to expectant mothers.

Are there any medicines to avoid during pregnancy? Surprisingly, despite frequent scare articles, there is no evidence that any of the common medicines harm a developing baby. Aspirin, cough syrups, antihistamines, even cortisone drugs and allergy injections, are safe. Thalidomide, the drug of a decade ago that caused babies to be born with deformed limbs, was a medical rarity.

Dietary pitfalls in pregnancy are few. So normal diet and a few vitamin-mineral pills should prevent many problems. —Irwin J. Polk, M.D.

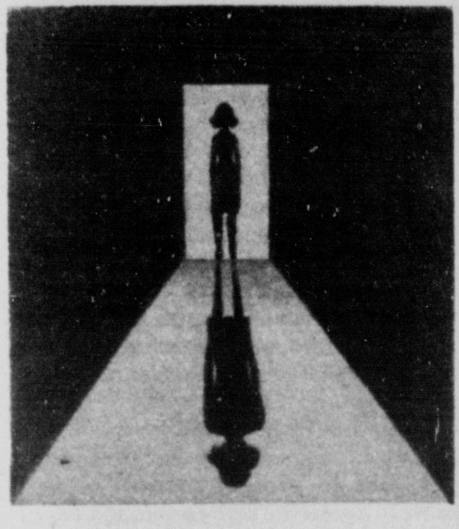
WHEN A HOMEMAKER MUST FIND WORK

Getting a job can be a traumatic experience, but all those years of running a home and raising a family have given her valuable and marketable skills.



By Janet Chase-Marshall

The marketplace is a desert for the ex-manager of a defunct household. She has no unemployment benefits or Social Security checks to ease the loss. And few employers are lined up to offer her work. Currently, there are between three and seven million "displaced homemakers" in the country — women who suddenly find themselves widows or divorcees, often after 20 or more years of marriage.

Those years of dedication to their families seem of little use in an already sorely overburdened job market. Too often, former homemakers are alone, afraid and sure the world has no need for them. In Los Angeles County, according to an official of Public Social Services, about a third of all persons on general relief are displaced homemakers. They have been rightly called the "new poor."

Says one such woman: "After being married for 28 years and raising four children, my husband left me for a younger woman. I have no income; my 'ex' ignores the support he has been ordered to pay me. If I had minor children, I'd be eligible for welfare and legal aid. But I don't really want charity; I want a job, I've looked everywhere. Nothing."

And another: "I'm 55 and a widow. I never had a chance for much formal education. I got married young, and my husband didn't want me to work. Now I don't have any skills outside the house."

Several bills have been introduced in Congress in recent years to help the displaced homemaker. The current bill, called HR-128, has been endorsed by President Carter. It would fund a minimum of 50 centers across the country. Lori Shields, co-coordinator of the Alliance for Displaced Homemakers, is hopeful that legislation will be passed by January 1978. Last year, the country's first center opened in Oakland, Calif.

Besides job-training and placement, the California Displaced Homemakers Center (DHC), offers many other services, including skills assessment, peer-counseling, assertiveness-training and workshops in self-employment, financial planning and coping with divorce and widowhood. Paid internships are available to some of the women while they are in the six-month job-training programs.

The center is managed almost entirely by women who, not so long ago, found themselves unprepared for sudden singlehood and the job market.

Margaret Miller, DHC office manager, had been married for 32 years when her husband left her. At 49, she had no formal job-training and had not earned a paycheck since World War II. "I had spent my whole life being a superdaughter, a superwife, a supermother. Six months of job-hunting turned up only one offer — that of a lamp-shade pleater at $2.25 an hour.

The philosophy of the DHC is that women who have run homes, raised families and assisted their husbands in their work have marketable skills — like budgeting, counseling, administration, community work and health care. So Margaret Miller was hired. Says Milo Smith, the center's executive director (and herself a displaced homemaker), "Margaret came in here saying she couldn't do anything, and now she is running the show."

But, of course, not everyone can work for the center. In a depressed job market, where will these women find work? According to a DHC publication: "New jobs can be created if an employer is convinced that an added service will make his own organization more effective or that the addition of a new job will ultimately save money. [We] also hope to show some displaced homemakers how to be self-employed or establish a new business."

DHC also is gearing its training programs to the community's needs. These include paramedical and paralegal assistance to the elderly; work with disadvantaged groups in such areas as nutrition, housing and consumer advocacy; and fund-raising, bookkeeping and publicity services for struggling community groups.

"We cannot always provide jobs for every woman who comes to us," says Milo Smith, "but we do provide hope. We see women changing attitudes from their initial despair to growing self-confidence, changing roles from dependency to self-reliance and learning how skills used as homemakers can be made marketable."

The Therapist's Art

A picture can be worth a thousand words — at least when it's one painted by a patient in therapy and is being used by a psychiatrist or specially trained art therapist. The art work can be used as a diagnostic tool to help detect a patient's problems; as an aid to therapy, functioning as a springboard to discussion in the same way that a dream might; and as a means of evaluating the patient's response to treatment. "Art therapy is especially valuable with those who have difficulty discussing their emotions, and also with children," says Dr. Irene Jakab, a prof. of clinical psychiatry at the Univ. of Pittsburgh. Dr. Jakab, who recently organized an exhibition of art from 11 countries and 5 states for an international psychiatric convention, says that the style, content and colors of the picture are all important. "The content shows what is on the patient's mind, while the colors suggest the type of feeling and intensity," says Dr. Jakab. For instance, strong colors such as reds, yellows and oranges, are often used by aggressive people, and brown, purples and grays are usually used by the depressed. The picture above was painted by a Finnish woman nearing the end of her psychotherapy, and the smiling figure in a cheerful setting reflects the patient's reconciliation to her problem.

Auto Insurance

Following auto-protection tips can pay off in more ways than one — many insurance companies give reductions for antitheft devices, for example. Check with yours for further information, but in the meantime, here are some things you can do to prevent your car from being stolen. Selection of a good parking spot is particularly important, says Sgt. Edward Lamb, director of Boston's police Crime Prevention Unit. Lamb says you should pick a well-lit area where there is a considerable amount of both motor-vehicle and pedestrian traffic. It's helpful to install different locks for doors, ignition and trunk; even if a thief gets your door key, he won't have the ignition key. And store any spare keys in your wallet, not in the car, where a professional thief will easily find them. Lamb suggests replacing the standard knobbed door-lock buttons with tapered ones, which are almost impossible to pull up with a coat hanger. But remember, even the best lock is of no avail if you don't use it.

Dig They Must

Women are turning up in the most unexpected places these days — like coal mines. McGraw-Hill's Coal Age magazine reports that there are more than 800 women coal miners, and the number is steadily increasing. "Women want to be coal miners for the same reason men do," says reporter Anne Swardson — "they can make more money." Starting salary for miners is approximately $50 a day, enough to keep women at a job most of them don't really like. Who are the women going underground? A survey by the United Mine Workers says that women miners are likely to be either divorcees in their mid-30's with children to support or young singles who want to make a career of mining. Despite some alleged discrimination on the job and opposition from friends and relatives, the female miners seem to be sticking with the job for the long haul, even if, like Sandra Bailey of Ky., they have to "shovel twice as fast and half as much at a time."

Foosball, Anyone?

No, that's not a misprint. . .the name of the game is foosball, better known to others as table soccer, although the pros prefer "tournament soccer." That's right, the pros, because for the past 5 years several hundred men and women have been playing on the international foosball circuit. This week many of them will be in St. Louis, where the World Championship of Foosball will be held Nov. 2-7. Games are played on a 2½′ x 4½′ table, which has 11 6″ soccer-player figures per team connected to 4 long metal rods. Players control the rods with their hands to move the ball into the opponent's goal. First player to score 5 goals wins.

Using Your Fireplace

With its warmth and good cheer a fireplace can be one of your family's best friends. But like any friend, you have to know how to treat it properly. Many people get wood from places like sawmills and lumber companies, but did you ever think of looking in dumps and landfills? Sometimes as much as 30% of the debris in dumps consists of reusable wood fibers. Most wood won't burn if it's freshly cut, so purchase reasonably dry or seasoned wood. Better yet, buy wood several months before you'll use it. Softwoods, like pine, spruce and fir, catch fire easily and burn rapidly with a hot flame, so they're a good choice for a quick-warming fire. If you want a long-lasting fire, try hardwoods, such as ash, beech, birch, maple and oak. Remember to make sure the room is well ventilated, the damper open and the flue unobstructed before lighting the fire as poor ventilation will cause the fire to smoke. And be sure to place a screen in front of your grate to catch sparks. For more fireplace tips, take a look at the Government booklet Firewood for Your Fireplace. Quick Takes

Marriage doesn't pay, at least when income-tax filing time rolls around. Iowa State Univ. consumer specialist Cindy Needles says that a husband and wife who both work generally pay more income tax than two single people with the same earnings, and the higher the income the greater the tax difference. For example, a married couple who have individual incomes of $15,000 and $11,000 and take the standard deductions will pay $750 more in taxes than 2 single persons with the same incomes. . . .Sports fans are going to the dogs says a study by the Daily Racing Form Inc. The survey reports that last year greyhound-racing, college basketball and pro baseball made the largest gains in spectators, while ice hockey and horse-racing both declined. . . .It may come as no surprise to whoever dumps the trash around your house, but each person in the U.S. generates an average of 4 lbs. of garbage and trash every day. . . .Studies at the Boston Univ. School of Medicine suggest that it may be possible to protect almost completely against strokes through early treatment of hypertension (high blood pressure). Animal studies at the school have reported that when high blood pressure is controlled soon after its onset, stroke due to either hardening of the arteries or rupture to the cerebral vessels can be eliminated almost entirely. . . .If they love it in Mobile will they still love it in Manhattan is a question frozen-food manufacturers should be asking, according to data collected by a New York-based marketing research firm. Frozen foods that are fast movers in one part of the country may be shelf-warmers in other areas. For example frozen fish is a hot item in Chicago but gets the cold shoulder in Boston. Minnesotans have a warm spot for frozen dinner bread and rolls but Houston residents pass them by.

WASHINGTON (AP) — The $311 difference between a typical federal employee's retirement check and a monthly Social Security payment helped convince government workers to shun the Social Security system.

But the higher benefit was not the only difference that led federal workers to fight successfully against integration of their pension plan with Social Security.

Some federal employees already qualify for both plans, meaning they can now look forward to two checks.

And civil servants maintain their higher pension was intended. A bigger chunk of their paycheck goes to the retirement fund than is paid by those under Social Security, and career employees enter government service partly because of the promise of the higher pension.

The Social Security system is going broke, however, and the federal employees are being looked at hungrily by some as a potential multibillion dollar infusion of cash for the system.

But the proposal by the House Ways and Means Committee to bring them under the Social Security umbrella was thrown out by a 386-38 vote recently, partly because of civil service resistance and partly in fear that the plan was not sufficiently thought out.

No one has suggested simply substituting Social Security for civil service pensions. But the proposal did not say how the systems would be integrated, a fact that concerned many committee members.

The differences between the systems now can be illustrated by looking at two 65-year-old employees ready to retire at the end of this year: a civil servant and an employee of a private business.

Both make about $16,500 a year, the mean income of American families in 1976.

The civil servant leaving government service after 35 years will get about $748 a month in pension or $8,960 a year, at least part of which is taxable.

The retiring private employe will draw only $437 a month or $5,245 year in Social Security checks, which are not taxable.

If the Social Security recipient has a spouse, the check is increased by 50 per cent, $218.55 a month, making the total benefit $7,868 a year for the couple. A civil servant's pension does not increase solely because of the presence of a spouse.

The non-federal retiree may also receive a private pension.

Federal employees contribute 7 percent of their pay to their pension fund. Social Security now takes 5.85 percent of pay up to a dollar limit, but the percentage is going up.

Under both systems, the employer matches the employee contribution.

The civil service system was designed as part of the compensation for federal employes. It was to provide retirement income by itself, based on years of service and salary.

Looking at it another way, federal pensions are now designed to be roughly equal to the retirement income of a former employee of private business — which is normally Social Security plus a private pension.

Social Security was not designed as a national pension system, although some argue it has essentially become one. It is designed to provide income supplements to the elderly, the disabled and others to prevent them from becoming destitute.

Many civil servants do not want to join Social Security because they are already covered. A survey of civil service retirees in 1969 showed 43 per cent were entitled to Social Security checks.

To put all federal employes under Social Security would deprive many civil servants of the so-called "double dip" — federal pension and Social Security payments.

To qualify for both, the worker must at some point have held a private job and have contributed to Social Security for a number of years. And losing that second pension could cost some future federal retirees $1,300 a year or more.

If the federal employees were brought under Social Security, the pensioners would get retirement stipends equal to the present civil service pension. But this would be less than a regular federal pension plus Social Security.

There are numerous other differences between civil service retirement and Social Security.

The Social Security recipient currently can earn only $3,600 a year in a job before the government begins to cut benefits, although the House has voted to lift that limit.

But the civil service retiree can get another job — paying any amount — and still retain the full pension.

Social Security recipients are eligible for all of Medicare's benefits since the program is financed by Social Security taxes.

But federal employes, who are not eligible for Social Security, are not eligible for Medicare. To retain health insurance coverage, the federal retiree must continue to pay premiums for the government supervised health insurance plan.

Just can't get along without TV sets

DETROIT (AP) — A Detroit newspaper thought it had an offer few could reject — $500 if a family agreed to turn off its television set for one month.

The Detroit Free Press approached 120 families with the offer. And 93 turned it down.

The paper said it was trying to study "television addiction."

Only 27 of the families that were approached agreed to exchange their TV viewing for the $500, the paper reported in its Sunday editions.

A typical response came from a Romulus woman, who said: "My husband would never do it. He comes home from work and sits down in front of the TV. He gets up twice — once to eat and once to go to bed."

The newspaper selected five families that agreed to accept money in exchange for television and sent TV repairmen into their homes on Sept. 19 and 20 to disconnect their sets.

The paper reported these results:

—One couple stopped talking. Six days into the project, the husband ducked behind a newspaper and never came out. "I think he's suffering from withdrawal," his wife said.

—Two people started chain smoking — one going from 1 to 2½ packs a day.

—All the subjects said they saw more movies, read more, visited friends and relatives more often and took more weekend trips.

—While some children played together peacefully, others became cranky, bored and begged to have the set turned back on. Most of the fathers said they got to know their children better, and four families said they were drawn closer by the experience.

Drunk drivers lose in court

State can suspend license over breath test refusal

WASHINGTON (AP) — Motorists arrested on drunken driving charges may be threatened with a temporary suspension of their driver's licenses if they refuse to take chemical or breath analysis tests, the Supreme Court said in effect today.

The justices set aside a ruling by a three-judge federal court striking down a Massachusetts law that imposed a 90-day driver's license suspension on any motorist refusing to take such tests after being stopped for alleged drunken driving.

All 50 states have similar laws.

The Supreme Court sent the case back to the lower federal court with instructions to restudy it in light of a decision by the justices last May allowing for similar state action without a prior hearing.

The lower court decided that the Massachusetts law deprived motorists of their constitutional due process rights because it did not offer them a pre-suspension hearing at which they could dispute whether they did in fact refuse to take the test.

The state law provides for such a hearing after the suspension.

Donald Montrym challenged the law after his involvement in a traffic accident in Acton, Mass., on May 15, 1976.

Montrym's station wagon and a motorcycle collided, and Montrym was subsequently arrested on charges including drunken driving.

After accompanying the arresting officer to a police station, Montrym refused to take a breath analyzer test. Under state law, such a refusal when witnessed by a third party is grounds for a suspension of the motorist's driver's license.

Montrym, however, sued the state and succeeded in barring suspension of his driving privilege.

In appealing to the Supreme Court, Massachusetts Atty. Gen. Francis Bellotti argued that laws imposing penalties for non-cooperation "represent the state's attempts to deter and to detect drunken driving in the most effective manner yet devised."

Bellotti said that the lower court's ruling "involves the extension of prior hearing doctrine into an exercise of state police power never before considered by the court."

Last May, the Supreme Court voted unanimously that an Illinois law authorizing the revocation or suspension of driver's licenses without preliminary hearings was valid.

Overturning a lower court's decision in that case, the justices found that the requirement of holding preliminary hearings in every case in which the state found a driver's record bad enough to suspend or revoke a license would impede the public interest of administrative efficiency as well as highway safety.

In other actions today, the court:

—Agreed to hear a claim by a California man that children should not be included in the definition of a community when community standards are used to judge allegedly obscene materials.

—Refused to review the contempt of court conviction of an idaho newspaper reporter who refused to disclose the identity of a confidential source when ordered to so so in a civil suit.

—Declined to hear an appeal by New York prosecutors who claimed they should be able to use evidence obtained by police against a physician convicted of sexually abusing his patients.

—Disbarred former Atty. Gen. John N. Mitchell and former White House aide John D. Ehrlichman from practice before the Supreme Court because of their criminal convictions in the Watergate coverup.

—Rebuffed for the third time an attempt to dismantle a racial desegregation plan for public schools in the Louisville, Ky., area.

Farmers pledge strike support

TOPEKA, Kan. (AP) — Declaring that low farm prices may wipe out small towns, farmers from six midwestern states gathered to pledge support for a nationwide farm strike Dec. 14.

"If I go down, business which is totally dependent on agriculture will go down, too," said Stan DeBoer, a grain farmer from Bertrand, Neb. .

"That means small town U.S.A. would be finished, my children wouldn't be able to grow up on a farm," he continued. "I've no alternative, I've got to fight."

DeBoer was among the 800 people who gathered in Topeka Sunday for a rally sponsored by American Agriculture, a loosely knit movement of farmers headquartered in Springfield, Colo.

The Kansas rally followed recent similar events in Texas and Georgia, with others scheduled in the future in Nebraska, Iowa, Minnesota, Delaware and other farm states.

DeBoer said prices for most commodities are so low that farmers are going broke. He warned that American farm land increasingly is being bought up by large corporations and foreign investors.

"The nation depends on agriculture," he said. "We spend 19 percent of our money on recreation and 10 percent on food. We have our priorities mixed up. Believe me, people, we cannot have cheap food and have the producers continuing to produce and feed his family and survive."

Prior to the rally, the farmers paraded through Topeka in a cold drizzle. Signs on their trucks and tractors proclaimed: "Don't Cuss Farmers With Your Belly Full" and "Food is Power — 100 Percent Parity or Strike."

Mull aid hike to U.S. firms hurt by foreign competition

WASHINGTON (AP) — President Carter is considering proposals to expand by 50 to 100 percent the government program to help companies, workers and communities hurt by foreign competition.

Administration officials said Sunday the proposals would help American firms compete with imports, but also would try to soften the impact when foreign competition costs workers their jobs.

The proposals would sharply increase the money available for communities hit by imports.

The suggestions, given to the president last week, include low-interest loans to companies seeking to modernize their facilities, higher retraining allowances for displaced workers and aid to cities which have lost industry, administration aides said.

Jumbo jetliner sets 'around world' record

SAN FRANCISCO (AP) — A Boeing 747 set a new record for its class of jet Sunday by flying around the world, over both the North and South poles, in 54 hours, 7 minutes and 12 seconds.

(Photo on page 2)

The 26,706-mile flight marked the 50th anniversary of Pan American World Airways.

On board were 169 passengers. Those in first-class seats had paid $3,333 each, while those in "economy" paid $2,222.

The old record of 62 hours, 27 minutes and 35 seconds was set by a TWA cargo jet in 1965.

Area youngsters warned of Halloween's dangers

By PHYLLIS CANNON
Asst. City Editor

Tonight is Halloween, a magical, fun occasion for ghosts and goblins.

The streets will be filled with the young and not so young, masquerading as gypsies, angels, cavemen, spacemen, witches, princesses and skeletons.

Parents of the masqueraders are urged by a number of safety organizations to not let Halloween turn into a haunting experience.

Each warns that a flashlight is a must for after dark trick-or-treating.

"If your child is going out trick-or-treating," warns the Automobile Club of Southern California, "make sure he can see and be seen.

"Urge your children to walk on the sidewalk and not in the street. And, don't let him wear a mask that may obstruct either his vision or his breathing."

The Los Angeles County Department of Consumer Affairs urges families to keep Halloween safe by accompanying youngsters door-to-door.

Other safety tips from the department are to bring treats home and check them before allowing the children to eat them.

They urge parents to pay attention to any object resembling a pill or capsule. Report suspicious items to the Environmental Food and Drug Program, Los Angeles County Department of Health Services, 213 974-7853.

Parents should select costumes which are flame retardant and easy to see in the dark.

The Insurance Information Institute said to feed children a filling meal before they go out trick-or-treating to discourage nibbling.

"This Halloween will be fun for more kids and peaceful for more adults," the Institute said, "if while kids are watching out for ghosts and goblins, their parents are watching out for their safety."

RJR Foods, Inc., safety adviser Allen Larson said parents should map a route for their children to follow; send children in groups of three or more; have a firm rule on no eating before returning home; and make certain costumes are well fitting and do not drag on the ground.

Use makeup instead of masks because too often a mask may interfere with vision, Larson said.

AAA had a word of caution for motorists.

"With Daylight Savings Time ending the day before Halloween, the club advises motorists to be doubly careful and adjust their late afternoon and early evening driving habits.

"Many drivers will find themselves returning home from work in the dark tonight. Such nighttime driving conditions bring the danger of headlight glare and increased hazards for children who are excitedly darting here and there in their annual prowl for goodies."

Prince wings to Australia after threat

SAN FRANCISCO (AP) — A telephone threat capped off a goodwill tour for Prince Charles, as Britain's heir to the throne completed a hectic two-week swing through nine American cities, authorities said.

Charles left San Francisco for Australia Sunday night after his flight was delayed two hours for security checks because a threat had been received by phone, spokesmen for the prince and Qantas Airlines said. Authorities wouldn't elaborate about the nature of the threat.

A Qantas spokesman said the threat was received by the San Mateo County sheriff's office, which provided security officers for Charles' departure.

State Department officials wouldn't confirm the incident, however. "The security checks were strictly an extra security measure we took," said David Botsko, an agent for the State Department. "That's all we will say."

An airline spokesman also said there had been a minor, mechanical problem with the Boeing 747 jet, but wouldn't specify the difficulty.

Charles, apparently unruffled by the delay, relaxed in an airport lounge and chatted with San Francisco Mayor George Moscone before departing at about 10:50 p.m. PST.

It was a composure the prince had displayed throughout the whirlwind United States tour which demanded he cope with the unusual and unexpected.

In a breathless schedule, the prince donned cowboy togs and rode the range in Texas, received an honorary law degree in Cleveland, Ohio, dined with movie stars in Los Angeles, and fished for sharks in the San Francisco Bay.

Along the way, he was brought alternately face-to-face with crowds of thousands seeking a glimpse at royalty and a persistent show of disapproval of Britain's role in Northern Ireland by small groups of pro-Irish demonstrators in several cities.

During his three-day stay in the San Francisco Bay area, Charles was greeted by 13 miniature black coffins when he arrived at the home of the British consul. The coffins bore the names of the dead of Northern Ireland.

Despite the demonstrations, Charles thanked San Francisco for a "wonderfully warm welcome" in remarks after receiving the key to the city Friday.

The prince spent the last day of U.S. visit on a five-hour voyage on a private yacht Sunday and caught about 10 sharks to bring back for display at San Francisco's Steinhart Aquarium.

Expansion for Garey Shopping Center

Joe Weiss, Palos Verdes Estates builder-developer and owner of the Garey Shopping Center at Garey Avenue and Foothill Boulevard in Pomona, said he plans to add a $400,000 professional building to the 12-acre center.

The new one-story structure, Weiss said, will be placed immediately north of Love's Wood Pit Barbecue Restaurant and face on Garey Avenue.

Weiss purchased the center in 1975 and since has built his total investment to $3 million by renovating existing buildings and completing the center link of the L structure.

The center now accommodates more than 40 businesses built around an ample parking lot and in addition to the restaurant is rimmed around Garey and Foothill fronts by a service station and a bank, a Fotomat and a key maker.

Businesses housed in the center are a major supermarket, liquor store, dry cleaners, beauty supply house, bakery, shoe repair shop, barber shop, auto supply store and a women's apparel shop.

Also, a tropical fish supply house, a record store, a coat manufacturer, boutique, print shop, dance studio, the Family Chiropractic Office (Dr. L. W. Bellwood), a gift shop, a moped store, a church-bingo facility, a coffee shop, radio shop, bridal shop, wholesale fabric store, shoe store, laundromat weight control-medical group office, health foods store and insurance office.

Also, a take-out restaurant, butcher shop, ceramics shop, picture frame store, beauty shop, pizza restaurant, loan company, a store and a drug store.

Weiss, who has instigated 30-minute parking directly in front of the businesses, is expanding parking for business owners and their employees at the rear of the shopping center, which is rimmed by a blockwall fence.

Businessmen and women in the center credit Weiss with "completely changing" the business climate in north Pomona since purchasing the Garey Shopping Center.

Unemployment benefit shakeup?

LOS ANGELES (AP) — At least 78,000 Californians may lose all unemployment benefits under reforms now being developed by the Brown Administration, a Los Angeles newspaper reported today.

To increase benefits for 94 per cent of the state's 1,380,000 claimants, many short-time workers in construction, food processing, agriculture, motion pictures, and retail and wholesale trades would be cut from the program, the paper reported.

People who work just long enough to qualify for the program would also have a harder time collecting benefits, the newspaper said.

By reducing the number eligible for benefits, $44 million would be available to those left in the program, the paper said.

The money would be enough to raise the maximum weekly benefit from $104 to $141 without hiking unemployment insurance taxes, which are expected to hit $1.45 billion next year. The lowest weekly benefit is currently $30, with $73 — 44 per cent of gross pay — being the average, the paper said.

The paper reported that 30 out of 49 other states have higher maximum benefits than California, although only two pay higher minimum benefits.

To determine who would be cut from the program, the Brown Administration has proposed tightening its eligibility test, which requires that a worker earn $750 in one year to collect benefits lasting up to 26 weeks.

That requirement would be retained, but applicants would also have to prove they worked at least 10 weeks.

The new standard would prevent highly paid workers — such as actors — from collecting benefits after earning $750 in only a few days. Fourteen states now have such a standard.

The 10-week cutoff would affect 78,000 workers, the paper said. A 12-week requirement would affect 130,000 workers, with 14 weeks affecting 182,000, the newspaper said.

Martin Glick, director of the state Employment Development Department, said one reason the 10-week requirement is being considered as part of the reform package is to discourage what he called a "lifestyle of minimum work."

"You find quite a few times that the people who have the most minimum work are almost into a lifestyle of minimum work, and then draw the whole UI benefit and then go back to a minimum amount of work to requalify for benefits again," he said.

The reforms, which are in the final stages of development, appear to have the approval of several key interests — including employers and the California Labor Federation, the paper said. The changes require approval by the Legislature.

One major opponent is the Teamsters Union, which represents cannery workers. The union says 14,000 of its members would be hurt by the changes, but the state estimates that 6,200 workers would be affected.

Organized pushers supply truck drivers with pep pills

LOS ANGELES (AP) — Truck drivers who must stay awake to make a delivery on time can dial a phone number in 41 major American cities and purchase a drug that will do the job.

In many cases the drug turns out to be caffeine, although the truckers are paying prices commensurate with the amphetamine market. But according to a copyright story in a San Bernardino newspaper, the pills are often illegal drugs, manufactured in Mexico or in bathtubs in the United States.

The stay-awake pills are sold at truck stops by home-based dealers working for a highly organized distribution ring that up until now has not been bothered by the law.

Federal drug law enforcement officers have made purchases in the past, but found the pills, selling for $45 per 100, to be no more than caffeine, which is sold at drug stores for 1.5 cents per tablet. "It's as unethical as can be, but there's no law against it," one DEA official told the newspaper, because caffeine is not a controlled substance.

But the newspaper made an undercover purchase at a local truck stop and a toxicologist analyzed the pills as high-quality, commercially-manufactured "speed."

The DEA is aware of the nationwide caffeine drug ring operating out of truck stops and has been monitoring the group's activities for two years. Al Russell, acting deputy DEA director, said one person apparently masterminds the operation.

Business cards, with a list of phone numbers to call in 41 cities, are distributed at the truck stops. The word amphetamine is never used in transactions, Russell said, although the truckers are led to believe that is what they are buying.

The product comes in various colors and shapes identical to common amphetamines and similar names are used. Buyers are screened through a well-rehearsed over-the-phone interrogation in CB radio lingo to make sure the purchasers are truck drivers. The paper used a former truck driver to make the calls during its investigation.

Russell said the distribution ring could have been established to market "look-alikes" — caffeine purposely manufactured to look like illicit drugs — but now sells "the real thing."

"That may very well be the case because the name of the game here is greed," Russell said. "They may have started peddling amphetamines."

Caffeine and amphetamines have the same immediate effect — they keep the truck driver awake on long hauls. But the amphetamines cause hallucinations, problems in depth and distance perception and are habit forming, said one drug official.

"From a strictly humanistic point of view, you might say the truck drivers are better off getting caffeine instead of amphetamines," said an official.

Flies make woman an activist

VISTA (AP) — This fly situation has just gotten out of hand, Nellie Barber figured, so she filled a bag with two pounds of dead flies and presented them to the county Board of Supervisors.

A Municipal Court judge in Pomona declared Los Angeles County's fly ordinance unconstitutional this month stating it was too vague to enforce. So far, the county has not appealed the ruling nor passed a new ordinance.

They promptly appointed the 66-year-old retired schoolteacher to the county fly board.

A perfect choice.

"I have no compassion for flies," says Mrs. Barber, who has rigged up a backpack insecticide sprayer to stalk flies in her yard.

The problem, she says, are the chicken ranches near her home. Thousands of flies breed in wet chicken manure left for months on the ground beneath chicken coops.

Largely because of Mrs. Barber's efforts, the county supervisors will consider a new fly control ordinance in November.

What's a good way to collect a bag of flies?

"I can vacuum them off a living room window," she said. "Then I squirt insecticide into the vacuum. See that window over there? Sometimes it is solid black with flies."

In winter, she said, the flies "swarm down the chimney. We can no longer use our fireplace."

"We used to have picnics outside, but the flies would come," she said. "It's embarrassing when we have friends over. It's a crime we can't enjoy our own property."

She said things are so bad that neighbors are always asking each other, "How are your flies?"

County supervisors recently ordered chicken ranchers to turn their manure more often and keep it from building up too high. Turning it keeps it drier and cuts fly breeding.

In the past, ranchers would let the manure pile up as high as four feet, and it would then be taken away by fruit and vegetable farmers for fertilizer.

James Kellogg, a chicken farmer who lives near Mrs. Barber, says he runs a clean operation. "My ranch is as clean or cleaner than the others in the county," he said.

"As long as there is a pile of manure, there will be flies," Kellogg added.

But Mrs. Barber's neighbors are not satisfied with that answer.

RECORD BREAKING FLIGHT

Capt. Walter Mullikin says goodbye to Cleveland travel agent Sheldon MacLeod in San Francisco after they completed a pole-to-pole round the world flight over the weekend. Pan Am flight took 54 hours and seven minutes. Old record was 62 hours, 27 minutes.

Resignations bring crisis

LOS ANGELES (AP) — Patients were diverted from the Metropolitan State Hospital in Norwalk over the weekend and other actions were taken to avert a crisis in the wake of a shutdown of three acute care wards.

"At the present time, we seem to have things under control with the emergency procedures," the county's acting deputy director of mental health, Dr. Harold Mavritte, said Sunday.

Hospital officials say understaffing from recent resignations caused the ward closing, and coincided with the release of a licensing inspection team's report. The inspectors cited the hospital for staff shortages and other violations of state and federal care regulations.

County health officials began sending new patients to other county contract hospitals and put a pool of physicians on standby to help out at Norwalk, Mavritte said. The county can handle its patients' needs through contract hospitals for up to 30 days, he said.

Admissions were sharply cut down but not halted, Mavritte said. The county sent 28 patients to the facility as of noon Sunday compared with the 55.7 patients sent during an average weekend, he said.

Metropolitan administrator Nick Burgeson said the closing of the three wards — eliminating 150 beds — came only because five physicians resigned and left the hospital understaffed.

Burgeson said about half of the licensing report violations cited physical plant problems and hospital officials were already working to correct many others. He said about half of the violations would be eliminated by the end of the week.

On Friday, County Supervisor Ed Edelman asked Gov. Edmund Brown Jr. to order medical personnel transferred from other state facilities to the Norwalk hospital to make sure that critically ill patients won't be turned away. Burgeson said that would create problems at other hospitals.

Burgeson said recruitment has been the hospital's main problem.

"The issue is not simply more money," he said. "Our problem has been that doctors are not lining up at the door. This is not the nicest place in the world."

Calls for end to gag orders

LOS ANGELES (AP) — Calling for an end to gag orders that restrict press coverage of the courts, the past president of the American Board of Trial Advocates has said that extensive publicity doesn't lead to unfair trials.

"The fact of adverse publicity does not so taint jurors that they cannot arrive at a fair verdict," said Edwin A. Heafey Jr.

The Oakland attorney told a Saturday session of the National Homicide Symposium that acquittals won by prominent defendants in recent cases show that jurors can return innocent verdicts even when the cases have received extensive coverage. He noted that John Mitchell, Maurice Stans and John Connally were acquitted in Watergate cases, and Black Panther Leader Bobby Seale and radical Angela Davis in other criminal cases.

"Hopefully, gag orders against the media will be a thing of the past," Heafey said. Secret court hearings are even worse, he said, and have "just as chilling an effect as preventing speech." He said court hearings closed to the public and news media an unconstitutional prior restraint.

File huge suit in rape-slaying case

By BOB SWETNAM JR.
PB Staff Writer

Claims of $4 million have been filed against San Bernardino County by survivors of a rape-slaying incident that occurred in Montclair last May.

County supervisors will consider four claims today for routine denial.

Damages are being sought by Hershel Townsend and Pauline Munro, parents of the rape-murder victim; a nine-year-old boy who witnessed the crime; and a second rape victim.

The claims are in connection with the slaying of 15-year-old Audrey Townsend, the stabbing and beating of her mother, Mrs. Munro, and the rape of another teen-age girl.

The city of Montclair recently rejected similar claims totalling $4 million on behalf of the family, stating there was no precedent for such claims.

An attorney being retained by the family, John N. Learnard of San Diego, argues the county had knowledge that the suspect in the crime "was mentally ill and had a propensity to commit rape and other violent acts."

Learnard said the county did nothing to protect family members from attack, thereby allowing Miss Townsend to be murdered, Mrs. Munro to be stabbed and beaten and another victim to be raped.

A nine-year-old boy, the brother of Miss Townsend who witnessed the brutal slaying, is also a party to the claim.

A West Valley Superior Court jury is deliberating the guilt or innocence of a suspect who has been tried for the crimes.

He is Clarence Hill, a Montclair resident.

10 most 'powerful' U.S. women

NEW YORK (AP) — Newscaster Barbara Walters, tennis player Billie Jean King and publisher Katharine Graham are among the 10 women considered the most powerful in America by Harper's Bazaar magazine.

—Lady Bird Johnson, "a spirited and tenacious campaigner for dozens of environmental projects."

—Washington Gov. Dixy Lee Ray, a biologist who headed the old Atomic Energy Commission and remains a science adviser to the Department of Defense.

Three Upland fires blamed on arsonists

Upland firemen and police are investigating three fires—one separate at a home under construction at Euclid Avenue and 21st Street that caused an estimated $20,000 damage — believed to have been set by arsonists Sunday night.

The first in the series of fires was reported at 10:18 p.m. when police spotted a fire burning on a large construction scraper near 21st Street and San Antonio Avenue. Firemen managed to put out the fire before it caused serious damage to the vehicle.

The second fire, reported at 11:04 p.m., destroyed a new van that had been stripped of its bucket seats, motor and transmission by thieves at Arrow Highway and Benson Avenue.

Finally, at 11:56 p.m. firemen were called to a new home being built in the Lewis Homes housing tract on Euclid Avenue near 21st Street. Firemen said the home, which had been framed, was destroyed in the blaze and several other new homes under construction next to it were threatened. Fire inspectors called in police investigators when it was discovered that an arsonist had possibly set fires at several locations in the home. The loss to the fire was estimated at $20,000. Firemen and police patrolled the area where numerous other new homes are being built for several hours this morning, fearing that the arsonists might strike again.

Police said a black car was seen in the area of the construction site minutes before the fire was reported.

Second crash victim dies

The father of a five-year-old girl who was killed in a traffic accident east of Ontario Saturday died early Sunday morning at San Antonio Community Hospital of injuries suffered in the same collision.

He was Edward J. Zismann, 33, of Altadena. His daughter was Scholle Margaret Zismann.

The accident occurred on the San Bernardino Freeway east of Milliken Avenue when a car lost its wheel and spun to a stop in the eastbound lanes. Zismann's car crashed into the stopped vehicle from which the occupants had fled, and his car was hit by one driven by Geary L. Luke, 26, of Pomona. Luke was treated for minor injuries at San Antonio Community Hospital.

Pomona youth wounded

Pomona police today said a weekend incident which wounded one young Pomonan at Butterfield Road near Grand Avenue Saturday night probably was gang-related.

The victim, Kenneth Ursura, 20, suffered facial cuts Saturday night when he was struck by flying glass from his auto's windshield. A companion, 22, escaped injury.

Officer J.P. Newsom said the two young men had left a friend's home in Westmont and were driving north on Butterfield when a pickup truck overtook them and its occupants fired two shotgun blasts into the victims' auto. Erusa said that when he saw the weapons he lay down on the car seat. The auto went out of control and ran into shrubs as the pickup truck sped away.

Erusa was treated for cuts at Pomona Valley Community Hospital.

Pair gets cash in bar robbery

Two masked men, one with a .22-caliber pistol, robbed the Horseshoe Club at Kadota Street and Mission Boulevard, Montclair area, of a small amount of cash Sunday night, sheriff's deputies reported.

The men entered the bar, displayed the pistol to a bartender and demanded cash from the register, said investigators.

The robbers were described as Latins, 6 feet tall, and weighing 200 pounds. Both had small mustaches.

Woman motorist hurt

A female motorist was injured seriously late Saturday night when the auto she was driving ran into a parked car and then a parked, 40-foot trailer on Garey Avenue north of Grove Street, Pomona police reported.

The victim, Penny S. Mitchell, 21, of Pomona, was undergoing surgery this morning at County-USC Medical Center and her condition was unavailable.

But police said she suffered head and facial injuries, including a broken nose, in addition to a compound break of one leg.

Investigators said the victim was driving south on Garey Avenue when her auto slammed into the vehicles. They described the car she was driving as a total loss.

2 rob service station, flee

Two men armed with a revolver robbed the Shell service station at Vineyard Avenue and Holt Boulevard of a small amount of cash Sunday, said Ontario police.

The men entered the station office and took cash from the cash box after displaying the weapon. The attendant said he was ordered to lie on the floor for 30 minutes after they left.

One robber wore a black beanie, tan jacket and Levis. Both were black.

Woman robbed in Los Serranos

A thin robber wearing a white mask kicked in the door of a Los Serranos home early today and robbed a woman of a small amount of cash, sheriff's deputies reported.

The victim was preparing to leave her home at 5:45 a.m. when the youth kicked open the door. The woman said he had a small handgun, possibly a toy. He ordered her to give him her cash. The robber then fled out the door.

The youth was described as white, 5 feet 8, and wearing a cap pulled down over a white mask. He was dressed in Levis and a blue shirt.

Brother wounded

Pomona woman accused of slaying her sister

By JACK BURSON
PB Staff Writer

A Pomona woman shot her sister to death and wounded her brother early Sunday as the result of a continuing family argument, police reported.

The fatal shooting, shortly after midnight, was the second homicide in the city during the weekend.

The slaying occurred in the street in the 2100 block of Kellogg Park Drive. Police said that Brenda Jean Hyatt, 27, of E. 83rd Street, Los Angeles, was killed instantly by a shotgun pellet which struck her in the left temple. Her brother, Lawrence Turner, 25, of Rosemead, was wounded in the legs. He was released after treatment at Pomona Valley Community Hospital.

Police later arrested the victims' sister, Susan L. Warfield, 32, and booked her on suspicion of both murder and attempted murder.

Investigators said that Mrs. Warfield and her husband, Larry, 29, had invited friends to a party at their home at 2129 Kellogg Park Drive. They said that during the party the suspect, Mrs. Warfield, and the victims argued over child raising.

They charged that eventually Mrs. Warfield ordered everyone to leave and when her sister and brother went only as far as the street she got a 12-gauge shotgun from a closet, fired one shot inside the house and three others at the victims.

The officers who arrived first on the scene reported finding Mrs. Hyatt lying dead in the street and Turner, leaning against a parked car, wounded in the legs.

They arrested Mrs. Warfield inside her home.

The weekend's first homicide occurred Saturday. A 15-year-old Pomona youth was killed in a free-for-all in which knives and tire irons were used, police said.

British take lid off pound

LONDON (AP) — The British government took the lid off the pound sterling today, suspending efforts to hold down its value and allowing it to float freely in the world's money markets.

The value of the British currency shot up from $1.77 to about $1.84 in early hectic trading on the London exchange. Later it dropped to $1.827, then returned to $1.832 as dealers tried to cope with a flood of orders.

The upward revaluation of the pound, which many financial observers had considered undervalued, was aimed primarily at heading off new inflation by making imports cheaper.

What does the move mean to Americans?

British goods will be more expensive and less competitive in the United States and on other world markets.

"The further loss of competitiveness of a rising pound will not be welcome to industry," said John Methven, director-general of the Confederation of British Industry.

The revaluation, with its higher exchange rate, was a blow to the pocketbooks of Americans and other foreign tourists here. It was also an overnight windfall for British travelers abroad.

The pound also rose against other key European currencies in early trading today — from 4.02 German marks to 4.13, and from 8.61 French francs to 8.85.

A prediction of the government's action in a Sunday London newspaper triggered similar increases on exchanges in the Far East, which open some hours before the London market because of the time differences.

The goverment announced that beginning today, the Bank of England would no longer try to keep the value of the pound down by purchasing dollars and other foreign currencies.

The purpose of the national bank's intervention had been to help make British exports more competitive in price. But growing belief abroad that the pound was undervalued resulted in a flood of foreign currency into London to buy pounds and hold them for profitable resale after the expected revaluation. The influx threatened to send the inflation rate up again.

Fluorocarbon container warning

WASHINGTON (AP) — Starting today, newly shipped aerosol cans of deodorants, hair spray and other cosmetic products propelled by fluorocarbon must carry a label warning of possible damage to atmosphere's ozone layer and danger to public health.

But the cosmetics industry got an early Christmas present from the Food and Drug Administration, with the result that some 43 million to 60 million containers of fragrances already in production and distribution for the peak holiday sales period are exempt from the labeling requirement.

Most fluorocarbon containers intended for interstate shipment must carry the legend:

"Warning — Contains a chlorofluorocarbon that may harm the public health and environment by reducing ozone in the upper atmosphere."

The FDA issued the labeling requirement after the National Academy of Sciences reported last year that if the ozone layer is eroded, the increase in ultraviolet light reaching the earth's surface could cause more skin cancer, change climates and affect crop yields.

But FDA Commissioner Donald Kennedy last July heeded a request by the Cosmetic, Toiletry and Fragrance Association that canned fragrances already made or shipped by today be exempt from the requirement until Dec. 31, after the Christmas sales period.

The industry group said it would cost up to $4 million to put new labels on such containers and also would disrupt sales.

The labeling requirement is a step in the government's effort to eventually ban the distribution of fluorocarbon-propelled aerosol products by April 15, 1979.

About 25 per cent of 2.4 billion aerosol cans produced in the United States this year use fluorocarbon propellants. Many manufacturers have switched to hydrocarbons, pump sprays and other means of propulsion for their products because of the ozone controversy.

The FDA has jurisdiction over 85 per cent of the products using fluorocarbons.

The Consumer Product Safety Commission will require an identical warning on air fresheners and household cleaners next Feb. 19. Last April 15, the Environmental Protection Agency began requiring aerosol insecticides and pesticides to contain a simple label notation that they contain fluorocarbons.

Amtrak cutting back on service

WASHINGTON (AP) — Some Amtrak commuters found their regular trains canceled today as the national passenger rail service began making budget-dictated cutbacks, mostly in the Northeast.

An Amtrak spokesman said Sunday four trains were being cut this week and others tentatively are scheduled for elimination on Nov. 6.

He said the lines might yet be saved if Congress approves more money.

A Senate Appropriations subcommittee voted last week to give Amtrak an additional $18 million to keep the trains running, but final congressional action still must be taken.

Amtrak switchboards were swamped with calls over the weekend from confused passengers trying to find out if their travel plans would be affected by the cancellations, the spokesman said.

The planned cutbacks would hit the busy Washington-to-Boston corridor hardest with an average of 22 daily trains serving those routes being dropped.

The trains canceled included two of eight regular Turboliner runs between Chicago and Milwaukee and the "Clamdigger," a weekday commuter service between Providence, R.I., and New Haven, Conn., the spokesman said.

Metroliner service between New York and New Haven also was terminated due to a change in the line's electrical system, he said.

The spokesman said Amtrak also began a "repatterning" of its nationwide route system today, adding to the confusion. The changes mean numerous revisions in schedules and routes, he said.

L.V. police car set afire

A La Verne Police Department patrol car was burned early today at the rear of the police station in what officers believe probably was the result of an earlier confrontation with youth gang members.

Senior Officer Ron Ingels said the fire broke out at 3:30 a.m. and did between $1,500 and $2,000 damage to the black-and-white police car.

Ingels said the arsonists poured gasoline on the auto's exterior and left a trail of gasoline leading 25 or 30 feet away from it. They lighted the trail of gas, sending fire racing to the the car and engulfing it in flames.

Investigators said there was a confrontation with 10 to 12 youth gang members at 12:30 a.m. in the 2000 block of Arrow Highway. During that incident, a police car was hit with a beer bottle. The officers believe that incident may have been the cause of the arson.

Conferees seek compromise on abortion policy

WASHINGTON (AP) — House and Senate members are trying once more to reach a compromise on the abortion policy that will regulate the government's health service programs for the poor during the next year.

But congressional leaders say that even if House-Senate conferees do not succeed by their self-imposed deadline of midnight tonight, the dispute is unlikely to jeopardize paychecks for government employees whose agencies' funds are tied to the question.

The conferees planned to meet today to discuss the last remaining obstacle delaying passage of a $60.2 billion appropriations bill for the departments of Labor and Health, Education and Welfare and some smaller, related agencies.

The conferees have tried without success to agree on an abortion policy since July. The proposal that Congress appoves will affect programs like Medicaid and social services until Sept. 30, 1978.

Should they fail again today, they probably will ask Congress to pass and the President to sign a second resolution ensuring that the agencies have operating money while the debate goes on.

Sen. Warren G. Magnuson, DWash., who heads the Senate conferees, said "the chances are good" that a continuing resolution will go through if no agreement is reached.

But he noted, "I want to get this done if I can on Monday."

Congress passed the first resolution on Oct. 13 to silence the protests of about 240,000 federal employees whose paychecks were threatened.

The conferees have had no formal meetings since then, but members and their aides have worked informally.

If Congress does not pass a second resolution, congressional aides say most affected employees will be paid until Nov. 10.

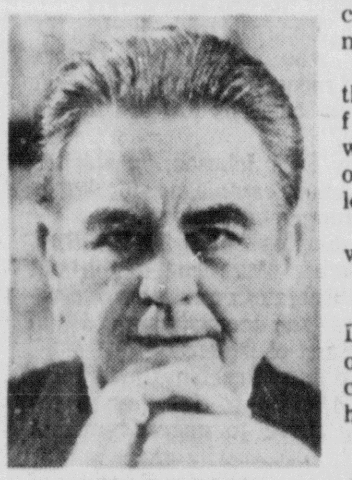
The agencies would be forced to curtail administrative spending, but the government would continue making payments for welfare, unemployment insurance and other social services indefinitely.

The only public action taken by the conferees until now was a 59-33 vote by the Senate last week to reject the latest House proposal.

The House proposal would have permitted abortion funding where a woman's life would be jeopardized by a full-term pregnancy, the same provision that was written into law last year and is still in effect because of the resolution.

The House language also would allow payments for prompt treatment of rape and incest victims who report the incidents to police.

Sirica ending part of career



JUDGE SIRICA

WASHINGTON (AP) — John J. Sirica, whose name became synonymous with the unraveling of one of America's biggest political scandals and the toppling of President Richard M. Nixon, spends his last day as an active federal judge today.

Sirica, 73, will become a senior judge on Tuesday, able to pick and choose the cases he wants to hear. He retains his office, staff and salary.

Sirica is expected to concentrate on civil cases. The judge has said he has found sentencing criminals to be increasingly difficult.

When the Watergate scandal broke in the fall of 1972, Sirica, then the chief judge of the U.S. District Court here, assigned himself to the case.

For the next five years, he was involved in the biggest judicial decisions made in Watergate and its related cases, presiding over the major trial — the cover-up case involving Nixon intimates H.R. Haldeman, John N. Mitchell and John D. Ehrlichman.

Sirica's last Watergate act, earlier this month, was to reduce the three men's maximum eight-year prison sentences to a minimum of one year each. As a result, Ehrlichman already has had his parole hearing, and the other two men will be eligible for their hearings next June.

While he was active duty, Sirica refused to discuss Watergate publicly, except in the most general of terms. He is expected now to write a book telling his side of the long, complicated story and the decisions he had to make.

His staff planned no ceremony to mark his retirement from active duty and he planned no vacation.

A life-long Republican, Sirica was appointed to the bench by President Dwight D. Eisenhower in 1957. Previously, he had served as a private attorney, an assistant U.S attorney and as general counsel for a committee of the House of Representatives.

IN THE NEWS — Ernest Hemingway, left, David Berkowitz and Totie Fields are among the names in the news for this Monday.

Names in news

LOS ANGELES (AP) — A spokeswoman for comedian Totie Fields, who underwent a mastectomy last week, says the entertainer expects to resume her career within three months.

Miss Fields, released Sunday from Los Angeles New Hospital, was hospitalized for exhaustion, her agent said. During the hospitalization, a malignant tumor was discovered.

Doctors amputated Miss Fields' left leg 18 months ago because of a circulation problem. After that, Miss Fields, 46, suffered two heart attacks and underwent surgery on her left eye.

DETROIT (AP) — A love letter by Ernest Hemingway has been sold for $3,400.

The four-page letter, which the author said was written by flashlight during World War II, was sent to his future wife, Mary, from northern France. Hemmingway was a war correspondent for Collier's magazine.

The letter was donated to the Detroit Public Library for the auction this weekend. Hemmingway ordered that his private letters never be published.

The identity of the buyer was not released.

NEW YORK (AP) — David Berkowitz, accused of being the Son of Sam .44-caliber killer, has met with his natural mother, Betty Falco, who gave him up for adoption shortly after he was born, the New York Daily News says.

The paper said in today's editions that Berkowitz had steadfastly refused to see Mrs. Falco during the two months he has been confined in Kings County Hospital, where he is undergoing psychiatric tests.

He was persuaded to allow the visit of his mother, now living on Long Island, after repeated pleas from his sister and his attorney. Berkowitz's adoptive father, Nathan, and his half sister, Roslyn Rothenberg, have visited often.

ATLANTA (AP) — Joan Mondale, who told city managers that the arts can bring a "burst of energy to the downtown section," needed more energy herself as she competed with Mayor Maynard Jackson on an art exhibit swing set.

Vice President Walter Mondale's wife, an unofficial roving ambassador for the arts in the Carter administration, had asked to see the Isamu Noguchi "Playscapes" in Piedmont Park.

She tried out the swings, but couldn't pump them as high as the mayor.

"Oh, we're out of synch," she said.

ATLANTA (AP) — Television interview show host Phil Donahue says Lillian Carter, the president's mother, told Donahue he talked too much. But she still agreed to be on his show.

Miss Lillian is scheduled to tape a show with Donahue in Atlanta on Wednesday.

Donahue said he called Miss Lillian at her Plains, Ga., home to invite her to appear on the syndicated show, and got an unusual, but kind response:

"'Miss Lillian,' I said, 'I know you are very busy, but I'd be grateful if I could get into your schedule. I know you have a lot of other things to do, and I promise not to be a bother to you, but if there is any way you could possibly see your way clear to ...' I never finished the sentence.

"She said, 'Phil, you're talking too much.'"

NEW YORK (AP) — Sakya Trizin, the 40th patriarch of the Sakya order of Tibetan Buddhism, has begun a six-month teaching tour of the United States.

The 32-year-old religious leader was greeted at Kennedy Airport Sunday by about 40 members of his sect who paid hommage by presenting flowers to the patriarch, his wife and 3-year-old son.

Trizin, who ranks just after the Dalai Lama in Tibetan Buddhism, said he had come to New York because "the teachings of the Lord Buddha are needed most at this moment throughout the world."

Oregon Cascades having 1st snow

The Oregon Cascades are having their first major snow of the season with accumulations of from 6-to-12 inches at some spots.

Timberline Lodge had six inches of snow Sunday, and Mount Hood Meadows, another ski area, received a foot of snow.

Thunderstorms extended from northeast Texas and northern Louisiana through Minnesota and eastern sections of the Dakotas. Windy weather also plagued the Dakotas. Light rains and cool weather were reported across Oklahoma.

Thunderstorms also continued over eastern Florida. A tornado touched down near Melbourne, florida late last night. There were no reports of damage or injuries.

Showers were widely scattered from the Gulf Coast across extreme south Texas, just east of the central Rockies and from the northern Rockies to the Washington coast.

Fog formed over parts of the plains still wet from Sunday's rain.

Fair weather was reported in the east, with clear and cool weather reported from New England and down the mid-Atlantic coast. Cloudy skies prevailed over southern Georgia, with cloudiness and scattered showers reported in Florida as well.

Early morning temperatures around the nation rangedfrom 20 at Concord, N.H., to 78 at both Brownsville an Corpus Christi, Texas.

Charges dropped in local assault case

Charges of felony assault with a deadly weapon have been dismissed against a Pomona man who allegedly threatened two off-duty police officers with a scaled down baseball bat last week in Upland.

According to the West Valley Deputy District Attorney's office the felony charge originally lodged against Lee Brian Lucas, 20, was dismissed because of insufficent evidence. Lucas, however, was formally charged with one count of possession of a certain deadly weapon (a billy club), two counts of displaying or exhibiting a deadly weapon and aiding and abetting in reckless driving. He is scheduled for pre-trial hearings on the four misdemeanor counts in the West Valley Municipal Court on Wednesday.

A second man allegedly involved in the incident, Fred Etherington of Upland, was formally charged with possession of a certain deadly weapon and aiding and abetting reckless driving. A juvenile in the case was charged with alleged reckless driving.

The defendants were arrested last week by two off-duty Upland police officers who reportedly saw a vehicle being chased by a second car containing the three or four persons. The officers stopped the second car near the San Bernardino Freeway and Euclid Avenue and claimed that one of the men in the car exited, displaying a deadly weapon.

The defendants claim that they never threatened the two officers who made the arrest and were cooperative.

Scrapbook of veterans draws attention

In view of the upcoming 60th anniversary of the signing of the armistice in World War I, Donald M. Gantenbine of Pomona has aroused the interest of local veterans' organizations in a unique scrapbook compiled by his late sister.

The scrapbook which is made up of newspaper articles on Pomona men who were in the military service in World War I was the work of Cecile Gantenbine Cowan.

It contains scores of newspaper articles clipped from the Progress and the Bulletin, two Pomona daily newspapers which later combined to become the Progress Bulletin.

Both newspapers published accounts of promotions, transfers, schooling and other military activities of Pomona men in uniform. Letters from Pomonans overseas were also reproduced.

Among the well known Pomona men mentioned in the various articles are Eben Gapp, Clyde Paige, Ira Roller, Jack Combe, Ernest Beck, Russell Smith, Heber Clewett, Elmer Pedley, Theodore Booth, and Cecil Short.

Gantenbine said he had had several requests to have the scrapbook reproduced in book form.

Mesopotamia exhibit opens

CHICAGO (AP) — A new permanent exhibit tracing the development of Mesopotamia, ancient Egypt's greatest rival, has opened at the Oriental Institute of the University of Chicago.

The exhibit, called "Mesopotamia," is entered through an archway made of 2,500-year-old bricks from Babylon and deals with thousands of years of conquest, defeat and cultural progress. The influences of the Sumerians, Akkadians, Babylonians, Assyrians and Chaldeans are stressed.

Artifacts on display include amulets, examples of early writing forms, religious figures and a scale model of a typical temple built around 2500 B.C.

Joyce Brothers

Has individualized need

DEAR DR. JOYCE BROTHERS: I worry about my wife because we both work. Our hours are the same yet she seems to need to be alone and quiet more than I. I've asked her many times if she's angry with me. Although she says she isn't, I find it hard to believe or accept that she's going to her room just to read. It depresses me to be alone. I grew up in a large family. In my home when someone went to his room, we assumed that he was mad or that somebody had done something to offend him. We felt togetherness was important. Maybe that's why I feel hurt when my wife takes off. Am I wrong? — P.K.

DEAR P.K.: I think it's important for couples to accept and respect each other's individual needs. For some people, it's vital for their well-being and emotional health to be alone for certain periods of the day. This doesn't mean they're angry, sad or hurt. It merely means they want some time of solitude to think, miditate or perhaps repair frayed nerves.

Dr. John Eccles, Nobel prize winner for his research on nerve cells, feels that unless the average man and woman get away from the bombardment of news, trivia and violence that assaults them daily, their minds become filled with useless thoughts and a kind of chaos results. Every person should take some time each day when he can sit quietly. This enables him to keep his perspective and prevents him from being overwhelmed.

You may not feel you need this, and you may not, but your wife obviously does. Try to understand and allow her this freedom. Too much togetherness can destroy marriage. When both partners maintain their individuality, each has more to bring the other. This adds stimulation to their relationship and keeps it alive.

DEAR DR. JOYCE BROTHERS: My 30-year-old daughter recently got married. We were always unusually close, even after her marriage. Lately, though, she seems remote. I mentioned this to her husband and he admitted that he too has noticed a kind of coolness and depression that didn't use to be there. When I asked her if she was down in the dumps, she said she was. Either she doesn't know why, or else she isn't telling me or her husband. Usually, one afternoon a week we go shopping together. Last week, she canceled. When I called her back she wasn't home so I'm afraid she may be seeing another man. Is there anything I can do? — D.D.

DEAR D.D.: No, I'm afraid not. This is a personal matter and if she wants to discuss it, if it's true, then it's up to her to bring it up. In other words, I believe that unless she comes to you about some specific problem and asks for help, there's absolutely nothing you can do.

I think you may be leaping to the wrong conclusion, however. Your daughter could be going through a period of mild depression caused by some kind of stress she herself is not aware of. Try not to pressure her, but let her know you're there in case she needs you.

If she is seeing another man, and if she does confide in you, then it will put you in a very difficult position with her husband, for no matter how much you like him, your first loyalty must be to your daughter. If she trusts you enough to confide in you, then you're honor-bound not to break that faith.

Until you have solid evidence, assume that her depression is temporary and is something she will work through in her own time.

DAR of Claremont plans 60th birthday celebration

Members of Claremont Chapter, Daughters of the American Revolution will meet Thursday to commemorate the 60th birthday of the chapter. Luncheon will be served at 12:30 p.m. at the Arbor restaurant.

The chapter was organized Nov. 17, 1917, with Mrs. Helen Day Jewell as first regent. Twenty-two charter members were present, including a "real granddaughter," Katherine Tracey Tracy Harwood.

Starting out in the midst of the First World War, the minute book records the wartime activities of the members: service flags were presented to the families of enlisted and drafted men and a French war orphan was adopted. Later the chapter presented a chair for the California Room in the DAR museum in Washington, D. C. They place a marker on the grave of their member Eliza Haskell Harwood, whose father fought in the Revolutionary War.

Member Jessie Durham did research for the National Old Trails Committee in connection with the Madonna of the Trails monument in Upland. One of the outstanding members of the 1930s was Helen Brewer Babcock, who wrote the publicity for the chapter for many years. Her daughters, Adeline Babcock Jaynes and Winifred Babcock Norton are currently member of the chapter. Mrs. Jaynes is a former state vice chairman of bylaws.

Speaker for the birthday celebration will be Dr. Williston Wirt of Pilgrim Place.

Guests for the event will include Mrs. Joseph Visnak of Upland, national DAR vice-chairman for American Indians; Mrs. Ralph Fisher of Glendora, director of District 10; Mrs. Francis A. McKee of Claremont, director of District 11 and state chairman of Americanism; the regents of the Glendora, Pomona and Upland-Ontario chapters, Mrs. Williston Wirs and press representatives.

Mrs. Frank J. Erhart is chairman for the meeting and will be assisted by Mmes. J. Paul Bair, John S. Butler Jr., A. True Hartshorn, Milton S. Peterson, Hugh A. Post and John E. Weaver.

YOGA FOR LUNCH — Belle Tuckerman, yoga expert, limbers up in preparation for a class she will offer beginning Tuesday at 123 E. D St. in Upland. Mrs. Tuckerman's class is named "Yoga for Lunch" and will be offered during the noon hour. She says yoga and a light snack enables office workers to finish the afternoon with more vigor than after a brown bag or restaurant meal at noon.

Hiring pitfalls discussed

Pomona Valley Personnel Association will hold a workshop on "Developing Interviewing Skills and Avoiding Hiring Pitfalls," at Griswold's Inn in Claremont Wednesday starting with a luncheon at 12 noon.

"Our association has felt for some time that employers, businesses and managers need assistance in their hiring practices and interviewing techniques. The workshop is designed for anyone who interviews people," said Dr. Robert White of Cal Poly, who will serve as moderator.

Three individuals will conduct sessions in key areas. J. Kevin Coleman, director of human resources for Aerojet-General, will cover "Making the Right Choice." He has a master's degree in business from the University of Bridgeport and has been in personnel work for 17 years.

Speaking on "Perfecting Your Interviewing Techniques" will be Allan G. Bormann, corporate manager of college relations for North American Rockwell. Bormann has a B.S. degree from Long Beach and joined Rockwell in 1959. He manages the company's nationwide college recruiting programs and has trained their recruiters in proper interviewing skills.

Bormann serves as a director of Western College Placement Association.

Edward A. Burch, former director of conciliation for the Office for Contract Compliance Programs, will cover the "EEO Interviewing Pitfalls." Burch, recently retired, has extensive experience working for the government, both at the state and federal level. He worked 23 years for the Employment Development Department and an additional three years on the Fair Employment Practices Commission. Burch has also taught extension classes at UCLA on affirmative action.

Anyone interested in participating in the workshop should contact Dr. White at Cal Poly, Tom Fitsgerald at Johnston Pump, or Duane Slocum at FMC.

The workshop will be limited to 100 participants. Including luncheon, a keynote luncheon speaker, three workshops, and a wrapup panel discussion, the program is expected to adjourn about 3:45 p.m. Reservations must be made in advance.

A down-to-earth angel

Jaclyn Smith copes with stardom

By DICK KLEINER

HOLLYWOOD — (NEA) — Angel Farrah can't talk about anything because of all the litigation still in the works. Angels Jaclyn and Kate can't talk about Angel Farrah, because that wouldn't be cricket. And Angel Cheryl can't talk about anything at all, because she wasn't there last year.

So there is what amounts to a conspiracy of silence in and around the Charlie's Angels group. Nobody is saying anything about anything, and the show goes on.

But, when you talk to Jaclyn Smith, probably the most angelic of the angels, you can read between the conversation, if you have that suspicious twist to your mind.

"Things are going smoother this year," Jaclyn says. And then she hastens to add, "but I think that's because the scripts are better this year."

(Heaven help us if we jump to a conclusion that the smoothness is because of any cast change.)

"Because the scripts are better, she says, "everything is a little easier this year. There's less pressure."

And then she talks about Cheryl Ladd, who stepped in where angels tread and replaced Farrah Fawcett-Majors.

"I think Cheryl will be accepted," she says. "Of course, she's different from Farrah. She's younger, and she plays her part with a little more innocence. And that way, we can have a little more humor on the shows this year."

With all the furor about the show, it's easy to think that it's been on the air forever. But, of course, Charlie's Angels is only in its second season. It has made eternal stars out of its leading ladies, however. And Jackie, for one, is coping with the giddy glow of glamor very neatly.

She is, basically, a down-to-earth lady. The fact that she happens to be possessed an almost-perfect face seems incidental to her. It is something that happened, like the fact that she is a Texan or tall or has brown hair. None of the above has gone to her head.

And fame hasn't, either. As a matter of fact, she insists that the only change in her life, because of her enormous success, has been that now she has to have a housekeeper.

"But that's just because of time problems," she says. "I just can't do housework when I have to leave around six in the morning and don't get home until seven or eight.

"I like to cook, but it's just impossible. With a housekeeper, when I get home there is a meal waiting for me. Otherwise, all this hasn't changed my way of life at all."

She is, of course, becoming a big business. Like most important stars, there is money rolling in. Unlike many of them, there are chances in Jaclyn Smith's life for a lot of auxiliary income. That's because of her modelling, her beauty, her association with cosmetics and clothing.

"There is a lot of talk," she says, "of my using my name in a line of cosmetics, and and also in a line of housewares, and also in clothing. If that happens, of course, I will have to give up my TV commercials. I am free now; I had a four-year contract with Max Factor, but that's over.

"So there may be a Jaclyn Smith cosmetics line, either put out by one of the big companies or else I might put out my own. I'll have to be very careful, though. I would only want my name put on something good."

She says she is a pretty good business-woman, and attributes that mostly to the coaching she got from her ex-husband, Roger Davis. She says he made some good investments for her, investments that are still paying off.

Whenever she has the time, she goes back home to Houston, where her father — a dentist — and mother and brother and his family live.

"My folks are proud of me, of course," she says, "but there is a bit of a problem, because of all this. They were getting so many calls they had to change their phone number."

She knows that even though her folks are proud of her, if they had their 'druthers, she would be leading an entirely different sort of life.

"They would prefer it," she says, "if I was married and lived just down the street and gave them a granddaughter — they have three grandsons from my brother — and that was that. I'd like to have children myself, and I will, as soon as I marry, but I could never live in Houston again."

Conservation corps

State Sen. Ruben S. Ayala said the state personnel board had approved new civil service classes for the California Conservation Corps.

During October, the board is recruiting qualified persons to register and take the oral interview exams to be held in November.

All applicants must be willing to live at conservation camps and remote and isolated locations. They must be willing to work odd and irregular hours and demonstrate an aptitude for working with young people.

Positions available are conservationist technician, conservationist and conservation administrator. Official state application forms are available at the state personnel board offices and at all Employment Development Department offices.

"This is certainly a great opportunity for qualified applicants to obtain employment working with youth and I urge those with necessary experience and training to apply at an early date," Said Ayala. The deadline for applications is Nov. 3.

The La Verne Parks and Recreation Department will conduct a tour to Universal Studios in Hollywood, Nov. 12.

Those interested in circulating petitions may call 987-3018 or 981-2347. Carolyn Boor is the valley's chairman.

Miami bribes truants to school

MIAMI (AP) — Pupils who play hooky from two local schools may miss out on Frisbees, hamburgers, T-shirts and yo-yos as well as readin', writin' and 'rithmetic.

Children and teachers at Brownsville Junior High and Douglas Elementary schools in Dade County are being offered gifts in an effort to curtail sagging attendence. The prizes for the teachers include gasoline, record albums and dinners.

The two schools have the worst truancy and teacher absenteeism rates in the school system, and that is costing the schools state funds.

The state pays $824 annually for every student enrolled, but only if the student is in school during an annual census count. That count was taken earlier this month, and gave Brownsville and Douglas the poor records.

Brownsville averaged 13 per cent absenteeism last year and Douglas 8 per cent. But both schools reported improvement this year after school officials began putting pressure on parents to send their children to school.

School officials hope their campaign will help pupils even if it doesn't solve the money problem.

The gifts, called "attendance incentives" are being donated by local businesses.

Bollworms threaten state cotton industry

BAKERSFIELD (AP) — Pink bollworms must not be allowed to live through the winter or they could begin to destroy California's cotton industry, officials warn.

"We could well see the beginning of the end of the $500 million cotton industry in California," if the pests continue to spread, said Robert Edwards, Kern County agriculture commissioner.

Market activity

NEW YORK (UPI) — Stocks turned lower Monday as traders, uncertain about the economy's outlook, cashed in on the market's recent three-day rally. Trading was moderate.

Observers said traders were concerned by the Commerce Department's report Friday that its September index of leading economic indicators rose only 0.3 per cent, down from the revised 1.4 percent jump in August.

Recently, the government reported the third-quarter gross national product rose at a 3.8 percent rate, down from the 7 percent pace of the first half of the year.

As a result, the Dow Jones industrial average, which gained 4.07 points Friday and 21 points in the past three sessions, was off 4.33 points to 818.35 shortly before noon EST. The closely watched average gained 14.38 points overall last week.

Declines overtook advances, 540 to 522, among the 1,566 issues crossing the tape. The 504 unchanged issues reflected investor uncertainty.

Vetco Inc., which climbed 3½ in heavy trading Friday, was the most active NYSE issue, up ⅝ to 24⅜. Combustion Engineering has offered $23 a share for all Vetco shares and Vetco directors have recommended acceptance of the offer. Combustion Engineering was off ⅞.

Duquesne Light Co. was the second most active issue, unchanged at 19⅛ in trading that included a block of 100,300 shares crossed at 19⅛ on the Philadelphia Stock Exchange. Lawter Chemical was third, up ⅛ to 8⅜ following a block trade of 100,000 shares at 8¼.

Gold mining issues were weak as bullion prices fell on foreign exchanges. Homestake Mining was off 1¼, Campbell Red Lake ¾ and Dome Mines ½.

Loctite Corp. was ahead ½ after the company raised its quarterly dividend payment to six cents a share from five cents.

Prices were mixed in moderate trading of American Stock Exchange issues. International Banknote was the most active Amex issue, unchanged at 2⅞. Husky Oil followed, up ¼ to 21⅝. Canadian Homestead Oils was third, off ⅛ to 7⅜.

Kid porn

WASHINGTON (AP) — Congress is moving closer to adopting a bill outlawing child pornography, which one lawmaker says has exploded into a multimillion dollar business using children as young as three.

The latest step was an 85-1 vote in the Senate Monday night for passage of a bill outlawing the use of children under 16 in the production of pornographic magazines, films and other materials. It also bars the interstate sale and distribution of such materials.

The measure is similar to one passed recently by the House. But still another bill of this nature is expected to be acted on by the House next week, so the final form of the legislation is yet to be determined.

The Senate bill provides for fines of up to $10,000 and imprisonment for two to 10 years for a first conviction. For a second conviction, the penalties would be fines of up to $15,000 and imprisonment for five to 15 years.

Ontario Tel-law service begins

Tel-Law, the phone-in service that makes free lawyer-approved legal information as "close as a telephone," opens in Ontario Tuesday.

It will be available toll-free 24 hours a day in Chino, Claremont, Cucamonga, Diamond Bar, La Verne, Los Serranos, Montclair, Ontario, Pomona, San Dimas, Upland and Walnut. Residents may call 983-9676.

Tel-Law is a collection of tape-recorded messages written by lawyers to tell you what residents should know about the law and the justice system.

Persons may learn general legal information on their problem and where to go for help. Tel-Law should not be used to replace a lawyer, nor as legal advice for your specific problem. It is general information.

How does Tel-Law work: It's easy. Just call 983-9676 and give the operator the number of the tape you wish to hear. Brochures listing tape subjects by number are available free at 108 W. C St., Ontario.

The Tel-Law program for this area has been developed through the combined efforts of the San Bernardino County Board of Supervisors where it was sponsored by Supervisor Joseph Kamansky, the county Division of Manpower Services, responsible for the administration of CETA VI, the state Employment Development Department of Ontario, the federal Department of Labor, National Executive agency, and the Western and San Bernardino County bar associations.

The San Bernardino and Riverside county bar associations originated and pioneered the program. Scripts were written and edited by the attorneys of these two counties.

There are 81 tapes available through the Ontario number on lawyers, criminal law, civil law, adoptions, your home, consumerism, taxes, senior citizen information, marriage and dissolution of marriage, bankruptcy, employment and Social Security and you and your estate.

Business brief

DEBT COLLECTORS - It is against the law now for debt collectors to curse, threaten, assault or telephone you at midnight trying to get their money.

President Carter signed the bill, which applies only to the collection of consumer loans.

If you have a complaint about an overzealous collector harrassing you, write to the Federal Trade Commission, Washington, 20850. It is the agency with the responsibility of enforcing the law.

Hearing aid ins and outs

The government is moving to eliminate some of the pitfalls facing people who buy hearing aids, but consumers already have power to protect themselves if they know how to shop.

The Federal Trade Commission, which is considering proposals to require hearing aid dealers to offer customers a 30-day, money-back trial period, estimated recently that 14½ million Americans have hearing problems. More than 500,000 hearing aids are sold each year.

Vincent Giglia, president of the Greater Philadelphia Hearing Aid Guild, said senior citizens comprise 60 per cent of the market for hearing aids. Children comprise another 12 or 13 per cent, and the rest of the aids are sold to people between the ages of 18 and 65.

The first step in shopping is a visit to the doctor. Under a new Food and Drug Administration rule, aids may be sold only to people who have had a medical evaluation within the past six months and provide a doctor's statement saying that the aid may help.

(The evaluation can be waived by buyers 18 and over if they sign a statement saying they have been told they should have an exam, but decided they did not want one anyway.)

Edward McDonnell, an FDA spokesman, said the evaluation is necessary because "hearing loss is only a symptom of disease." The condition may respond to drugs, surgery or even a change of diet. If the loss cannot be treated, the doctor may recommend further testing by an audiologist or may refer the patient directly to a hearing aid dispenser. McDonnell said 41 states have licensing laws regulating the sale of aids, but he said many of the laws are inadequate.

McDonnell said the success or failure of an aid may depend "on the orientation the user brings to the learning experience and the set of expectations he has ... No health professional can predict to a certainty whether a person will benefit from a hearing aid."

Bill creates a new agency

SACRAMENTO (AP) — Gov. Edmund Brown Jr., accused last year of being anti-business, has signed a bill creating a state Department of Economic and Business Development.

Signed recently, SB 28 by Sen. John Holmdahl, D-Castro Valley, would organize the department in the Business and Transportation Agency.

It would replace the old Department of Commerce, which Brown scrapped two years ago.

Brown's administration initially opposed the recreation of any such agency, saying its duties could be handled by the smaller Office of Business Development.

But Brown changed his position earlier this year

Claremont league plans to probe water problems

By VONNE ROBERTSON
PB Staff Writer

The Claremont League of Women Voters has just received a $6,500 grant from the Department of Health, Education and Welfare to study Claremont's water problems.

"While we are opposing the Nov. 8 Pomona Valley Municipal Water District special bond election, the grant funds cannot be used for this," explained Mary Jane Merrill, league president.

"The grant covers a special educational project from Nov. 15 to Nov. 15, 1978."

Mrs. Merrill added that a grant from the federal agency for such a project is somewhat unusual although a number of voters leagues in the nation have received grants from federal agencies for environmental studies.

The league's plans, which also have been approved by the Southern California Association of Governments and the California Department of Planning and Research, include the publication of a study report, public workshops and a tour of water facilities.

According to Mrs. Merrill, the grant stipulates that the league publish a report of its studies and make this report available to the public.

The funds will cover the cost of the report plus the expenses required in providing outside speakers at workshops offered as a community informational service.

The grant application, filed last Februrary, was based on the league's two-year study of Claremont's water situation.

"We are anxious to improve the amount and quality of information available to citizens and to improve the communication among experts and governmental agencies involved in water," said the league spokesman.

Other objectives, as stated in the league's grant proposal, are to fully explore alternative solutions to Claremont's problems of water quality and supply and to increase people's awareness of the environmental consequences of their political and personal decisions, balancing costs and benefits from those decisions.

The League of Women Voters is a national organization which has been involved in environmental studies since the 1950s. The Claremont league has engaged in numerous local, state and national environmental activities.

Rules for Goblins

All trick-or-treating should be done in the afternoon or between the hours of 6-8 pm.

Parents should accompany groups of trick-or-treaters.

ALL TREATS SHOULD BE TAKEN HOME FOR INSPECTION BEFORE THEY ARE EATEN.

Only young goblins (13 and below) should be encouraged to go trick-or-treating.

Young goblins should wear short, non-flammable costumes which are light in color. For greater visibility, costumes can be decorated with reflective tape that will "glow" in the beam of a car's headlights.

Youngsters should not wear halloween masks, which tend to restrict vision. Colorful facial make-up can be used instead.

Trick-or-treating should be confined to the young goblin's own neighborhood.

Flashlights should be carried for after dark. If a pumpkin is carried, it should be lighted with a flashlight, not a candle.

Hobgoblins should trick-or-treat only at homes with porch lights on.

Follow these pedestrian safety rules:

- Cross only at corners, never between parked cars, never diagonally across an intersection.
- Look in all directions before crossing the street.
- Watch for and obey all traffic lights.
- Walk, never run across the street.
- Use sidewalks, not the street, for walking. If there is no sidewalk, walk on the side of the road facing oncoming traffic.
- Wait on the curb, not in the street, until the street is clear to cross.

GHOULS AND GOBLINS

200 feet of horror greet neighbor kids

By MAE TATE
PB Staff Writer

"It's 200 feet of horror. Bring your smelling sauce because we're out to scare you."

Thirteen goblins and ghouls along El Dorado Avenue in Ontario have fashioned a haunted house that is the pride of amateur productions.

Black lights cast fluorescent shadows. Bugs creep and crawl. Eerie moans, groans and screeches fill the 10 chambers. Webs wrap their spidery fingers about your face. Wolfman lurches out of a dark corner. Skeletons shake while children quake. Vampires vent bloodcurling screams.

Assorted creatures and beasts add authenticity to the horror of Halloween.

Frank and Mary Scott thought of creating the haunted house at 1319 El Dorador Ave. five years ago.

"I didn't want the kids going trick or treating. It was too dangerous and I didn't want them out," Mrs. Scott, mother of three, said.

Scott told of the changing nature of Halloween from a night of fantasy fright to a real-life horror of poisoned candy, apples with pins, malicious pranksters and molesters.

The haunted house began in a sideyard as a project for the Scott children — Donna, Gordon and Richard. Since then, Donna married, her husband John Sherman joined the haunting; participation spread to other neighborhood youth and the visitors expanded from the northeast Ontario neighbors to more than 300 youngsters from throughout the city.

The 13 young people — the Scotts, the Shermans, Lee Ramsey, Anita and Scotty Doneyson, Jim Zamora, Debbie and Lori Zampiello, Laura Ironside, Charlotte Harlow and Jeff Sullivan — have constructed 200 winding feet of horror in the front yard of the Scott home.

The cardboard frame was collected in bits and pieces from area stores and the wooden boards are from old lumber construction sites. The total house was done entirely by the young people ranging in age from 10 to 20 years.

The haunted house is the talk of the neighborhood now, something that is anticipated annually.

"The people in the neighborhood can't help but know us. The kids come by two months before Halloween and want to know if we're going to have the haunted house this year," Mrs. Scott laughed.

Richard Scott said, "It's fun putting it together. And it's better than getting candy that's poisoned or something."

The haunted house opens its chambers of horror at 6:30 tonight. It's free to all who wish to come in and quicken the pulse at the sight of the Creature of the Deep, Black Death, Frankenstein, the mad doctor, the Walking Dead, witches and goblins.

Mull $1 million bilingual program

Pomona school board will consider a staff proposal to spend $1,077,000 on bilingual education in the district during the next three years when it meets today at 7:30 p.m. in the Education Center.

The proposal is aimed at adding 12 additional bilingual teachers and 20 classroom aides plus additional educational materials to meet guidelines established by the Lau vs. Nichols U. S. Supreme Court decision and implemented by the Chacon-Moscone bill in California. Trustees will also consider a pay hike for personnel in the business office who claim to have put in overtime since June when the office of the assistant superintendent for business services became vacant.

The school board will also consider a proposal for development of a district athletic complex and purchase of the Fox Theater which involves the school district, city of Pomona, and Los Angeles County.

Enrollment

Women pass men at Mt. SAC

For the first time in the memory of school officials, women students outnumber men at Mt. San Antonio College — and the trend is expected to continue.

Enrollment figures show a total of 10,291 women and 9,858 men attending classes at the college.

E.V. Olson, dean of registration, said he noticed the trend last year after government benefits for veterans who continued their educations had expired.

He said that, coupled with the fact that the job market is better, has been responsible for the switch in trend.

"Usually when there is an improvement in the job market the men go to work; the women go to school,' he explained.

He reported that while the women make up 52.8 percent of the daytime population, they constitute only 48 percent of the enrollment at night.

Child raising clinic

Creative Initiative Foundation will conduct a public meeting Tuesday at 7:30 p.m. at Friends Meeting House, 727 W. Harrison Ave., Claremont.

Arleen Forsheit of Claremont, chairman for the meeting, said the program will stress the "how" of raising children.

Topics include how to build mutual respect and dignity with our children and how to create a moral sense.

The public is invited without charge. Creative Initiative Foundation is an educational organization which conducts courses and seminars on the subject.

Honor 1st Mexican-American Superior Court judge with testimonial dinner affair

Carlos M. Teran of Claremont, who as the first Mexican-American to be appointed to a Superior Court judgeship in modern California history has served as an inspiration to other Hispanic young people aspiring to a career in law, was given a testimonial dinner Saturday night in the Biltmore Bowl in Los Angeles.

The occasion was also the annual banquet of the Mexican-American Scholarship Foundation of which Judge Teran serves as first vice president.

More than 700 people, including city and state officials, and numerous members of the bar and judiciary attended the function in honor of Judge Teran who is retiring at the end of this year after 20 years as a judge.

Proceeds from the dinner will go to the foundation which since 1969 has provided funds for Mexican-American students in law school and preparing for the bar examination.

Tributes to Judge Teran's service as a judge and to his humanitarian work were presented by fellow Superior Court judges, include William Hogoboom, presiding justice of Los Angeles County Superior Court, Philip M. Newman, who was master of ceremonies, Arthur Alarcon, Raymond Cardenas, and Leopoldo G. Sanchez.

Presentation of resolutions from the Los Angeles and Pomona city councils were presented by John Ferraro and Ben Ochoa, councilmen of the respective cities. Resolutions from the state Legislature were presented by state Sens. Alex Garcia and Alfred Song, and Assemblyman Jack Fenton.

The first lifetime membership in the Mexican-American Bar Association was presented to Judge Teran by Frank Munoz, a past president. Gold cuff links from Judge Teran's fellow judges were presented by Judge Hogoboom.

In presenting the honored guest of the evening, Judge Sanchez said the real story of Judge Teran is to be found in his work for the community, especially for the less fortunate. He mentioned Judge Teran's work in founding the Council of Mexican-American Affairs, in starting the East Side Boys Club and the Boys Club of Pomona, and of his service on the national board of directors of the Boys Clubs of America. A plaque from the national organization was presented to Judge Teran.

In response to the various tributes, Judge Teran stated that while he was "slipping off the mantle of authority," he was not "going into mothballs," that he was going to be occupied in other challenges. He said he planned to continue his work in support of youth groups. "One of the greatest satisfactions," he declared, "is helping a young person to get along."

Mother chucks city job for show biz

By GEORGE MacLAREN
PB Staff Writer

A woman who received an Associate of Arts degree in theater arts at Mt. San Antonio College and served the city of Pomona for 16 years as its recruiter, has decided to return to her first love — movies and television.

Mrs. Faye Brown was honored by fellow city employees today at a luncheon at Orlando's.

Mrs. Brown has seen thousands of job applications flow over her desk since she was hired by Marvin Crabb 16 years ago the past August.

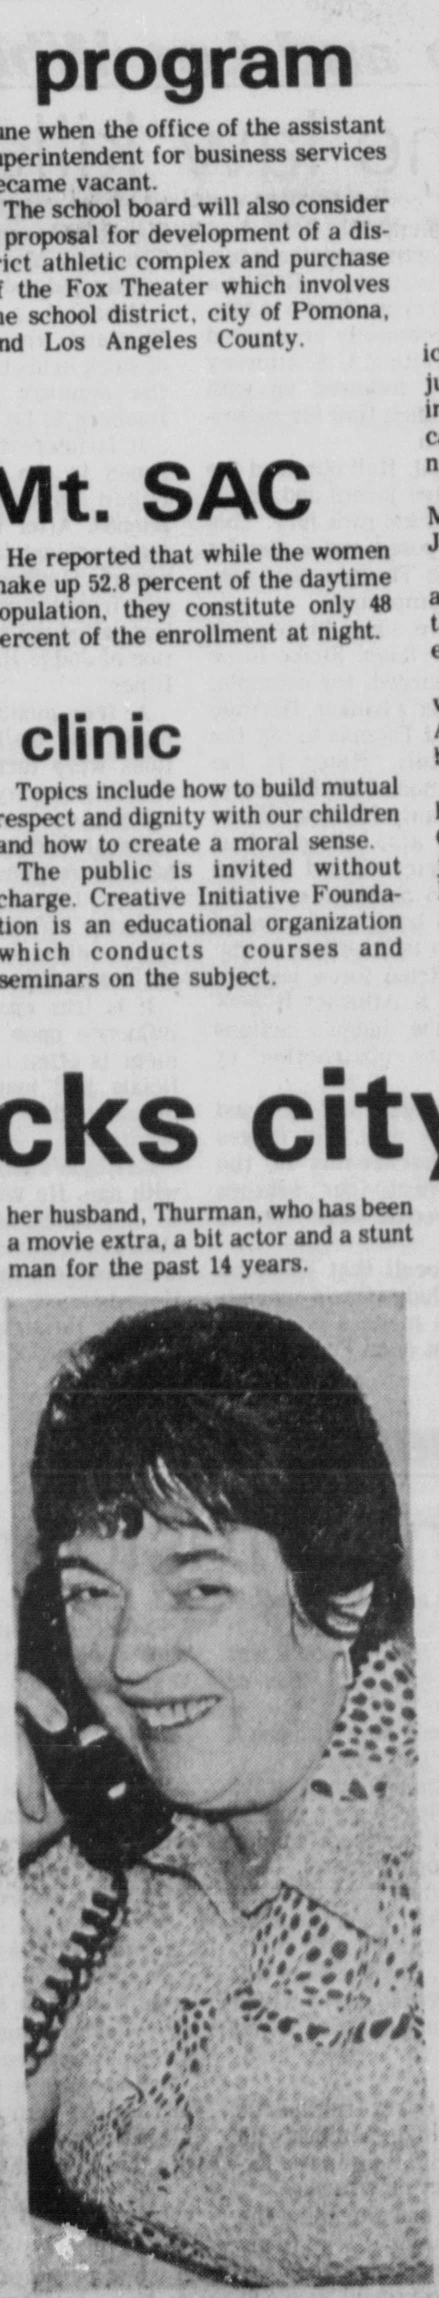
"Now I want to go totally free lance as a script supervisor for both television and the movies," remarked the mother of three.

She explained that it is the job of the script supervisor to master the continuity of a script as it is transformed onto film.

She said that scenes of a movie are never shot in the sequence they appear on the movie or television screens.

"They are shot according to the location used and schedules of actors and actresses to save money," she said.

She explained she has learned quite a bit of what is happening from her husband, Thurman, who has been a movie extra, a bit actor and a stunt man for the past 14 years.



FAYE BROWN

Of course, both are experienced in the legitimate state. They have performed in the Valley Community Theater for many years.

"I love to act, but not now," she said. "I can't do three things at once."

Mrs. Brown explained she must find a producer who will hire her. She said that such a job requires long hours and hard work, often from 7 a.m. to 7 p.m.

She believes that now is the time to trade professions because her children are nearly grown. The eldest is a student at USC. The second is a Bonita High School senior, and the last, Tracey, 14, is a freshman at Bonita High.

Mrs. Brown said she happened to be elected president of the Singers parents group at Bonita during this nation's Bicentennial when the second child, Kathleen, was a member.

She put her recruiting power to work and the parents earned $17,000 in four months with such projects as painting curb numbers in red, white and blue throughout San Dimas and La Verne.

The money paid for a two-week tour up and down the East Coast and to Washington, D.C., for a group of 30, including 20 Chamber Singers who performed on the Ellipse in the capital city, and various schools in the East. compared to the position she has had for 16 years with the city.

She said it was ironic how she went to work for the city. She explained that while her husband was in England with the Air Force, she worked on a federal government job on an English airbase.

"I swore that I would never again work for a government agency," she said.

Along came two children, and Mrs. Brown decided that staying at home was not her cup of tea. She felt security was an important asset.

She told Crabb during her job interview that she wanted a position which would keep her busy.

"I didn't realize what I was saying," she said. "I never have caught up on my work."

Mrs. Brown and her staff handle job applicants from the moment they hand in their applications to the instant a list of eligibles reaches the responsible department head.

She recalled that two years ago, Pomona, West Covina and Upland joined forces to set up an eligibility list of 300 potential firefighters from a list of 1,250 applicants.

Written exams were given, and 500 applicants contacted to take a physical exam at Ganesha High.

The written exams, one hour and 45 minutes long, were given one after the other from 8 in the morning to 9 at night.

"I have reached a point where I can't progress professionally," Mrs. Brown explained.

It is going to be a new life for both Browns. Mr. Brown wants to get into the production end, and hopefully to direct. They might find each other working at the same studio.

"The staff here has been fantastic," she said. "I wanted a people-oriented job. This was it."

Lump in jacket: just a sawed-off shotgun

Curiosity of a Chino police officer about a lump in the back of a young man's jacket led to the arrest of two men and confiscation of a loaded sawed off shotgun and pistol Friday night.

Officer Larry Nordell said he spotted the pair loitering and acting "furtively" in a shopping center at Central Avenue and Walnut Street. He said he drove around the block and spotted them again and this time noticed a large lump under the jacket and down the back of one man.

The other young man ran off as Nordell cornered the other and called for assistance. Moments later Officer Richard Sill captured a 16-year-old boy and confiscated a .38-calibre pistol which had been stolen in Pomona.

Nordell discovered the lump under the jacket of the suspect he arrested was a loaded double barreled 12-guage shotgun.

Booked for carrying concealed weapons were the juvenile and Stuart Willstead, 21, of 5054 Riverside Drive. In addition, Willstead was held on a marijuana booking and the juvenile for possession of stolen property.

Vets win battle, lose the war

If the upcoming Veterans Day on Nov. 11 is confusing in the face of having just had such an observance on Oct. 24 with all federal agencies shut down, including the post office, have patience, for it won't be that way next year when Nov. 11 will once again be the only official Veterans Day throughout the nation.

This happenstance is due to the strident activities of the once mighty veteran organizations such as the American Legion who have prevailed upon all lawmakers to restore the November date as their official day. In doing so the veteran groups have won a battle while all around them they have been losing the veterans' war.

The idea which resulted in an October Veterans Day was part of the plan to observe all but such traditional holidays as Christmas, New Year's and Thanksgiving on the Friday or Monday closest to the actual date, avoiding mid-week work interruptions and giving employees three-day weekends.

As for Veterans Day, originally called Armistice Day, its celebration on Nov. 11 as a day of peace had become somewhat hollow with the advent of World War II, Korea and Vietnam. Since October was without holidays, it was advanced to that month, thus avoiding two holidays in November.

The switching of the day, however, suddenly became a "cause" for the nation's veteran organizations still dominated by WW I veterans. Their campaigning made the lawmakers quickly back off in state after state and in the Congress. Nov. 11 was restored in most states and will be by the federal law next year.

It provides a classic example of how some pressure groups will storm over some relatively unimportant issue and through such distraction overlook things of vital importance to them.

Even before the Veterans Day furor started, the hard-earned benefits gained for those who served their country during time of war were gradually being eroded.

In California the property tax exemption of $1,000 granted veterans following WW I had become meaningless as assessors reduced eligibility down to a pauper level. No longer were home loans under the state's veteran loan program available to all veterans, a means test having been imposed to limit the loans to those least financially able to afford a home.

Job preference for veterans was under attack throughout the nation and in California it had all but disappeared, even though veterans by the thousands were jobless.

In contrast to the attitude while the fighting was going on in WW II which exhibited itself in demonstrative efforts to show nothing was too good for "our boys," such as shipping an overabundance of cigarettes to the troops, distributed for free through the Red Cross and other outlets, signs were going up in all public places telling those veterans they could no longer smoke anywhere excepting the sanctity of their own homes or similar private places.

The unpopular Vietnam involvement had made it easier for anti-veteran actions but resentment of veteran benefits has always been a reaction after the fighting has stopped.

The veteran organization leaders may think they made a great achievement in restoring Nov. 11 as their "day" but in the overall it is of no practical value to any veteran, and a mockery for those veterans who continue to suffer from the injuries received in combat. It is small comfort to listen to the politicians sing the praises of the veteran one day a year while the rest of the time they are either ignoring the veterans' needs or erasing those benefits they had granted during a more grateful era.

"Whoever humbles himself like this child, he is the greatest in the kingdom of heaven." — Matthew 18:4.

"Humility leads to strength and not to weakness. It is the highest form of self-respect to admit mistakes and to make amends for them." — John McCloy, American diplomat.

If I ascend to heaven' O Lord, thou art there. If I make my bed in Sheol, thou art there. If I take the wings of the morning and dwell in the uttermost parts of the sea even there thy hand shall lead me and thy right hand shall hold me. — Psalm 139: 9.

"All the strength and force of man comes from his faith in things unseen. He who believes is strong; he who doubts is weak. Strong convictions precede great actions." — James F. Clarke, American Unitarian minister.

Do not love the world or the things in the world. If anyone loves the world, love for the Father is not in him. For all that is in the world, the lust of the flesh and the lust of the eyes and the pride of life is not of the Father, but is of the world. — I John 2: 15, 16.

Let's get to the root

Dear Editor:

In reading many letters in this column, which I have appreciated, I have not yet read a letter that really gets to the root of our problems. We read about how we can get property tax relief, income tax relief, welfare tax relief — relief, relief, relief, in all aspects of our society.

Really, it seems to me, we are going around in circles and missing the whole point. The real issue, on which all the rest are dependent, is public financing. Without public financing, all the other discussions are a waste of time and effort. For we must use government control for the good of the people — and private interests must come second — by insisting on a fair and equitable profit. For we either protect the economic balance in this society, or we fall, eventually, to communism.

Through public financing our government is free in principle to serve all the people and, by so doing, to challenge business to prove that their demands will not create any extreme or imbalance against the public interest.

But behind public financing, the real root problem of all is inflation. The cause of inflation is extreme private interest dedicated to extreme profit in all possible areas of the economy. When we can control that, through the public financing of elections, especially, and get representatives who will legislate for the good of all the people, and not primarily the special interests, then we will have solved many other problems and perhaps even have saved democracy — and can show how the system might work for the good of all.

We need not worry so much about communism as about becoming more concerned to make our system truly democratic, preserving the principle of balance in legislation covering all parts of our society. This would make communism powerless and without influence, for democracy then would have a greater attraction to both young and old.

Since the principle of harmony is balance in all things, as any one can prove, let's get behind Common Cause and write our legislators, state and federal, to move in this direction and to pass all the legislation that contributes to this goal.

Right now, you can write, urging your state legislator to pass AB-1372, a bill for public financing in the state of California now pending.

You can write your state senator also, to support SB-5 SUNSET. This bill will allow the legislative branch of government to judge whether any government agency is being productive enough to warrant continued funding and expenditure of our tax money.

So let's get together and act now, for it takes the people to organize for their common good. One cannot do it all for others.

Common Cause, our people's lobby, has created the opportunity for us to speak up, so that we the people can show our united will for a government of the people, by the people, and for the people.

Eastland, the law killer

WASHINGTON — Sly, old Sen. James Eastland, D-Miss., has the relaxed air of a man who has power and knows how to use it. His is not the ennobling power to shape bold national policies but the negative, petty power to frustrate and delay the proposals of others.

Eastland is against most of the legislation that passes over his desk. He uses his power to kill laws, stall appointments and bog down the Senate when it tries to override him. "It requires really the entire Senate to budge him," confided a colleague.

Jim Eastland reigns as head of the Judiciary Committee, which handles 60 percent of all Senate legislation (counting private bills). The committee has jurisdiction over federal courts and judges, civil liberties and most things constitutional and judicial.

The slightest rumble from Eastland, therefore, registers high on the Justice Department's Richter scale. He communicates through an almost imperceptible process of grunts, raised eyebrows and knowing smiles. A snort will send top Justice officials scurrying.

No other state is treated by the federal prosecutors with such delicacy as Mississippi. Usually, it isn't necessary for Eastland even to open his mouth; Justice officials react to what they fear he might be thinking. Any Mississippi case that might have political significance is handled with extreme caution.

Complained a federal strike force official: "As long as Eastland remains as chairman of the Judiciary Committee, federal investigations into Mississippi corruption will run into severe problems."

A Justice Department strike force, for example, identified Leo Hall as a major organized crime figure in Mississippi and successfully prosecuted him for counterfeiting. U.S. Attorney Robert Hauberg followed up with another case against Hall for possession of a firearm.

During the trial, Hall obtained the list of prospective jurors and, in effect, handpicked his own jury. This outrage was exposed and a district court clerk, Bob Thomas, was convicted of jury tampering.

But there were some bigger fish who were never fried. Strike force investigators charged, for example, that the racketeer's banker, Herman Hines, persuaded Thomas to slip the jury list to Hall. Hines is the respected chairman of the Mississippi Deposit Guaranty National Bank.

Investigators also alleged that Southern District Court Judge Harold Cox, who presided over the jury tampering trial, met several times with Hines to brief him on the case. In fact, strike force lawyers complained to U.S. Attorney Robert Hauberg that the judge's actions might constitute obstruction of justice.

There is no evidence that Eastland intervened in any way. Yet it was known in the backrooms of the Justice Department, our sources say, that these people were close to Eastland.

Our sources recall that Eastland pushed hard for Judge Cox's appointment. He finally made a deal with the late President John F. Kennedy, who appointed Cox in return for Eastland's approval of Justice Thurgood Marshall for a U.S. appellate judgeship.

Hines is a political backer of Eastland, who owns a small amount of stock in his bank. For that matter, the senator also recommended Hauberg to be U.S. attorney.

It is interesting to see what happened to the strike force when it began investigating Eastland's friends. After the accusations were made against Judge Cox, our sources report, Hauberg withdrew his support from the strike force, which was instructed not to press the investigation of Judge Harold Cox or Herman Hines.

A few months later, the strike force was disbanded and its functions were turned over to the new Public Integrity Section.

Former Assistant Attorney General Richard Thornburgh, who had the responsibility for organized crime investigations, told our reporter Hal Bernton that the decision to disband the strike force did not result from political pressure.

It is true enough that Eastland's influence upon the Justice Department is often invisible. The top officials just instinctively avoid displeasing the powerful Mississippi senator.

Eastland's influence has increased with age. He will be 73 next month. In his inner sanctum, he usually slouches in his chair so only his head and shoulders appear above the desk. Round-faced and close-mouthed, blinking through glasses, he has the knowing look of a stuffed owl.

Commentary

A letter to the President

By ANTHONY RIPLEY

Dear Jimmy:

Sorry I haven't written for a while but the wife's been worrying over the budget and it's taken all I had just to keep the dog and the kids out of the way. When she gets down into the budget, we just try to hide out somewhere where we can't be seen. You know how it is with budget directors. The best thing is to hide behind a houseplant and hope you can survive.

I tried to tell you when you were running for President that all those speeches about trust and truth and throwing the rascals out would come home to roost. Well, it looks like the first rascal was Bert Lance. It'll help get your arm in shape.

I figure you're sort of disappointed about the Secretary of State, Cyrus Vance. Lord knows he's trying as hard as he can. But there is a lot to do.

First, he had to convince the State Department that human rights were important. That's a whole new set of instructions.

Under Kennedy and Johnson it was "which side are you on? Reds or good guys?"

Now it's 'we'll only play with you if you come from a good home."

He's trying to change their ways and that's like trying to get a goat to sing opera. Cyrus has them singing now but it sure sounds funny.

And then he had to deal with the Russians on the SALT. You shouldn't have expected them to go for it the first time through. Any she-bear will tell you that you have to put up with a little cuffing around before the old man gets down to serious love-making.

And to top it off, Cyrus feels a little like the butler out in the kitchen with Andy Young and Big Zbig in the living room trying out new menus.

I think you have been handling the Panama Canal okay. It's a funny thing. A couple of years ago, the canal was as controversial as Kool-Aid. Now it's the big burrito.

Even conservatives are mixed up. Those two columnists, Buckley and Kilpatrick, kind of like the treaty from what I read. So they've got trouble, right there in right-wing city.

Well, don't fret too much about it. Strom Thurmond and Ronnie Reagan are leading the charge against the treaty. A man can always profit from a few well-chosen enemies.

Not much is doing out here in Colorado. It looks like we may get snow this winter, in which case we'll be putting in for blizzard relief. But if it doesn't snow much, there's always drought relief to fall back on.

Just remember one thing about old Bert: better him than you.

Hang in there and our best to the wife and kids and etc.

Just in jest

I am told a florist organization is urging Congress to establish a National Mother-in-Law Day. Well, certainly most of us would agree that is a very worthy proposal, but unfortunately it will never work — not in these days when everyone is so acutely conscious of a thing called sex discrimination. The only way a Mother-in-Law Day could ever get out of the planning stage in this bitterly competitive age would be to grant fathers-in-law equal rights and establish a day for them as well.

I am definitely an advocate of equal rights for everybody. Which is why I contend that turnabout is fair play. When a mother entertains guests by showing them nude baby pictures of her son who is now 12 years old, the only fair thing, I say, would be to let the kid show his friends nude pictures of his mother.

The dangers of Halloween

By EARL G. WATERS

Hobgoblins and witches, jack-o-lanterns and masks, what once marked the innocent observance of the festivities surrounding the harvest and carried over to the more formal event of All Saints Day and the celebration of the Hallow Mass, are with us once more.

Unfortunately the occasion, which in this country was one of happy social gatherings in the churches with games for the young and feasting for all, has become far too much of a specter fraught with perils for the young and old.

It may seem Scroogishly misanthropic to decry the misguided direction Halloween has taken. But tolerating small children prowling the neighborhoods, many totally unsupervised, openly engaging in a mild form of extortion with their "trick or treat" demands, is hardly the way to instill good moral conduct or proper respect for others.

Putting apart the philosophical side of the modern Halloween celebration, consider the perils to the children. Encouraging them to seek sweets from total strangers subjects them to the risks of poisoning accidentally, or deliberately on the part of malicious persons as well as kooks. Furthermore, roaming dark streets exposes them to other hazards, not the least of which is that of being hit by a car whose driver didn't see a child darting out in a not-too-visible costume.

Then there is the harassment of childless couples or the elderly and the sick who are called upon to be unwilling participants in the fun and games, endlessly answering the doorbell at great inconvenience to respond to the bands of kids. Worse, it exposes them to the dangers of opening the door to other than innocent children. For there are the vicious who seize upon the occasion to masquerade as Halloweeners to perpetrate crimes.

The whole idea of "trick or treat" may have seemed harmless when it started but time has proved it to be unacceptably dangerous to the children and their elders.

So its continuation would not appear to be of benefit to anyone excepting the merchants who find a bonanza in the sale of candies and other junk food as well as the costumes and gadgetry for the occasion and thus encourage it through their advertising. Still, the blame cannot all be put on the commercial interests, for the parents and the schools are guilty of aiding and abetting its perpetuation.

Obviously more is needed to divert the guileless energies of the children to happier ways of Halloween partying. If the churches cannot provide the solution, other ways must be found.

And, while all too often the public turns to the Legislature for help, it might just be the lawmakers could aid in this one. That is not to suggest the outlawing of "trick or treat" as one Pennsylvania community has done. But, perhaps, a mandate to the schools to develop better ways of observing Halloween would be appropriate. Working with the PTA, the schools could sponsor Halloween parties at community centers to take up the slack not provided by the churches. In either locale, wholesome festivities could be held under proper supervision, thereby assuring the safety of the children.

Until somebody acts the public can expect to continue to read stories in their newspapers about the malicious poisoning of children and other Halloween atrocities as well as elderly being brutalized and robbed by "Halloween" masqueraders.

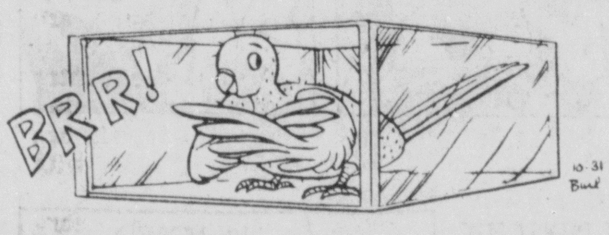
Dr. Miller

Bare bird's best chance



DEAR DR. MILLER: J-bird is stark naked. Believe me, a plucked chicken is beautiful compared to a naked parakeet. I've been told he has some kind of hereditary disease and he may never grow anything but a few pinfeathers. He has made it this far all right, but does he have a chance of making it through the winter? I'd hate to lose him. I've gotten used to looking at him and he's such a plucky (or is it plucked) little bird, I just want to keep him around. — V.T.

DEAR V.T: Obviously, J-bird has to put away plenty of chow to keep his furnace stoked, since without an insulating feather jacket his body heat is constantly and rapidly dissipated from his skin. No matter how much he stows away, however, he can't hope to keep warm on food alone.

He needs outside help. Best bet? A cage setup which provides him with a constant temperature of between 80 and 90 degrees. Preferably, one side of the cage would read nearly 90 and the other around 80. Then he can pick his own best comfort zone. To provide this fairly constant source of heat and prevent drafts, three sides and the top of the cage should be covered with clear plastic which admits light but eliminates air currents. Your bare bird's best chance lies within such a protected environment. Without it, chilling and probably fatal complications would be almost inevitable.

DEAR DR. MILLER: A while back you said that white German shepherds can't be registered. You are in error. I have one and it is registered with the American Kennel Club. — E.N.

DEAR E.N.: I stated the white German shepherd could not compete in the confirmation show ring — they are disqualified. (Upon rereading what I wrote, you will note I indicated they could be registered with the AKC.

DEAR DR. MILLER: I sprout rye grass for my cats. They love it. Sometimes I overwater or forget to water the tray of soil. Would one of those soil moisture meters be a good idea?" — S.M.

DEAR S.M.: Not unless you are particularly fond of gadgets. Your fingertip is as adequate a guide to the condition of the soil. A meter wouldn't keep you from overwatering nor from forgetting to water. Meter money might better be spent, as far as your felines are concerned, on items ranging from good grooming tools to extra water bowls (for the cats, not the plants).

Astrographs

By Bernice Bede Osol
For Tuesday, Nov. 1, 1977
Your Birthday, Nov. 1, 1977

Take a hard look this coming year at any proposition involving new, novel or unique products or things. You could discover something that's a real winner.

SCORPIO (Oct. 24-Nov. 22) Let your logic govern you today rather than your emotions, especially if dealing with one you're not fond of but who is pertinent to your immediate needs. Find out who you're romantically suited to by sending for your copy of Astro-Graph Letter. Mail 50 cents for each and a long, self-addressed, stamped envelope to Astro-Graph, P.O. Box 489, Radio City Station, N.Y. 10019. Be sure to specify your birth sign.

SAGITTARIUS (Nov. 23-Dec. 21) Your inclinations today are to be helpful to friends. Poking your nose into the wrong situations, however, could just be asking for trouble.

CAPRICORN (Dec. 22-Jan. 19) Everybody likes to come out ahead in a bargain, but don't do so today at the expense of one who has always treated you fairly. It could backfire.

AQUARIUS (Jan 20-Feb. 19) If anyone can build a better mousetrap, you're the one. Use your ingenuity today to improve systems workwise.

PISCES (Feb. 20-March 20) Conditions look generally favorable for you today, with one exception: Don't jump into any venture where you don't have all the facts.

ARIES (March 21-April 19) In business matters affecting the family you and your mate won't be operating on the same wave length. Today your ideas are sounder, but sell them tactfully.

TAURUS (April 20-May 20) Be careful of what you say today in front of an acquaintance who is not overly fond of you. Careless remarks could later be twisted.

GEMINI (May 21-June 20) If you're arranging a social activity today where the cost is to be divided equally, exclude a pal who always exits when the check arrives.

CANCER (June 21-July 22) It would be hard to find one more charming than you today, when among friends, yet with your family you're far less tolerant.

LEO (July 23-Aug. 22) Your problem today won't be a lack of bright ideas. It will be your reluctance to depart from your usual way of doing things.

VIRGO (Aug. 23-Sept. 22) You are inclined to take everyone at face value today. This could prove costly if you're dealing with a crafty or unscrupulous type.

LIBRA (Sept. 23-Oct. 23) Normally you are a sharer, but today you might be tempted to use people to serve your interests. Problems could erupt playing this unfamiliar role.

Ann Landers

'Stinky' presents his side

Dear Ann Landers: May I introduce myself? I am "Stinky," the "inconsiderate slob" whose cigars smell up the office. But I have no intention of taking all those insults lying down.

It so happens I have a very good reason for lighting up a big fat cigar the minute I get to my desk. It's the lousy, cheap perfume the girls wear. Can you imagine working in close quarters with four dames who wear Gardenia from the dime store?

The girls also complain that my dentures go "clickety click." I don't actually have full dentures — just partials, but they never did fit right and I feel like I have a small tricycle in my mouth. Yes, I do click a little, but only to drown out the sound of the babes who pop their gum all day long. It drives me bonkers.

So you see, Ann, there are two sides to every story. And please don't suggest that I buy them expensive perfume. No deal. — Maligned

Dear Mal: How about a Truth Session — with both sides offering to give up something in order to gain something? Would you give up the stinky cigars if the gals gave up the perfume? Too bad Cy Vance is otherwise engaged. He'd solve the problem in a hurry.

Dear Ann Landers: Please don't laugh at me. I am very serious and need some of your best advice. I am a girl who will be 15 in seven weeks. A certain boy I like a lot is going to ask me for a date any minute. I can just feel it in my bones.

The problem is I wear glasses. I'm expecting him to kiss me goodnight. He wears glasses, too, and sometimes when both parties wear glasses, kissing can be awkward. Should I remove my glasses when we get to the door, in preparation for the kiss — or would it look too planned? If I took off my glasses and he didn't kiss me I'd fall right through the porch.

Please rush your answer, Ann. This is an emergency. — Toodie

Dear Toodie: I am typing as fast as I can, honey. I hope the advice reaches you in time.

Glasses will not interfere with a goodnight kiss — even if both parties are wearing them. It may take a little tilting of the head and jockeying for position but you'll manage, I'm sure. Others have.

Dear Ann Landers: That letter from "Klutzy Carol" brought back some wonderful memories of the All-Time Winner of the National Klutz Award.

Many people have been known to fall down stairs, but this woman managed to fall up the stairs no matter where she was.

She never failed to burn the toast or the roast or the pie crust because she talked too long on the phone. Usually helping someone in trouble.

There was always a dent in the car fender or a smashed headlight because she couldn't back out straight, yet she had a knack for reconciling warring factions and could get the most difficult people to work together.

During her last years her voice cracked on the high notes when she sang "The Star Spangled Banner" but her spirit was so great nobody noticed.

Mom died three years ago but hardly a week goes by but someone comes up to me and says, "Gee, I miss your mother." — The Klutz's Daughter

Dear Daughter: I loved your letter. The Klutz must have been a real doll.

How young is too young for a child to learn about sex? That's just one thing you'll find in Ann Landers' new booklet, "How, What and When to Tell Your Child About Sex." Send 50 cents in coin, along with a long, stamped, self-addressed envelope to Ann Landers, P.O. Box 11995, Chicago, Ill. 60611.

Photography is no snap

Being a Professional Photographer is difficult if you don't know anything about photography. Ask me. The Progress-Bulletin pays me an impressive salary for a variety of chores which include taking pictures, but I don't know how to work a light meter, and, handed a camera, I still have to ask "What do I press?" Of flashes and non-flashes, of dead batteries and unconnected hookups, of stop openings, shutter speeds and in-and-out focuses, the less said the better. If I got a picture, it was sheer luck.

Because my fuzzy fotographs occasionally make it into the local periodical, I am considered "a photographer," and am frequently called upon by importunate but ill-advised friends to "cover" a wedding or an anniversary party or a sendoff to Mexico. Gamely but ineptly I shoulder my camera and film pack, and point and click at various people and scenes, recording events with what can charitably be defined as uneven results.

It was, then, with some astonishment and relief that I learned recently of the arrival on the market of a new camera that does everything. The advertisement read, "You can learn to take great pictures in 42 seconds." Since I have been working unsuccessfully at this goal for 42 years, I was naturally interested. Perhaps mesmerized would be a better word.

The new Pentax ME is billed as the smallest, lightest, easiest-to-use, fully automatic 35 mm single lens reflex camera ever made. I'll take it, I'll take it! — even if I don't know what a single lens reflex camera is. They did promise "fully automatic," didn't they? You don't HAVE to know what a single reflex lens is, do you?

"All the complicated calculations a pro goes through," chants the advertisement, "the Pentax ME does for you. Automatically. Precisely. Instantly. Without its electronic brain."

Practically fool-proof, right? However, in taking pictures in the average suburban home, electronic brains are only half the battle. The other three quarters are the subjects you want to get pictures of. This human (and sometimes canine or feline) element defies the electronic brain, even if it is the smallest, lightest, easiest-to-use and fully automatic whatever. God has not yet given humans the camera that will make a small boy sit still when his picutre is being taken.

Pentax ME, old sport, try taking a picture of the family around the Thanksgiving table some time. It'll drive you out of your electronic brain. Mother is hiding her face in agony. Suzy is squirreling away olives, Jimmy is making faces, Billy is trying to kick Suzy under the table. Jeffery, the family dog, lying somnolent and picturesque by the hearth fire, sees me aim my camera, and he marches over to happily lick the lens and me. Cassandra, the family cat, curled up on the couch, sees me trying to focus the camera and shoots out of the room like a Roman candle. Children playing Momopoly happily when you sneak out for your camera, are at each others throat in tears and frustration when you return. Fully automatic doesn't quite do it, Pentax, old sport.

What I need is a camera that will not only do the customary things about shutter speed, stop opening and focus, but will gather the whole family on the patio after dinner and order "Say Cheese."

Dr. Lamb

Does sugar provide energy?

DEAR DR. LAMB — I am very active and my preferred recreation is tennis. I eat two or three lumps of sugar between sets to provide "quick energy." I am told that this is in error and that it can actually cause a decrease in blood sugar. Is this correct? What is "blood sugar" and how is it produced?

DEAR READER — Most people seem to forget there is such a thing as digestion. Food of any type has to be processed by the stomach and small intestine before it can be absorbed into the blood stream.

Protein and fat, particularly, are not emptied from the stomach very rapidly. Fat may remain in the stomach for hours. Food in the stomach cannot be absorbed and hence cannot provide a single calorie of energy. That is what is wrong with the steak and egg meal before football games and the like. The steak and egg are usually still in the stomach after the game is over.

Carbohydrates are more rapidly processed by the stomach than any other food. If they are soluble as sugar is, the liquid solution is rapidly emptied into the small intestine where it can be broken down and absorbed for immediate use as energy.

Sugar is glucose and fructose hooked together into one molecule. The molecule is broken down in the small intestine and within 30 minutes to one hour after ingesting a solution of sugar water you will reach a peak blood level of these substances. The fructose is converted to glucose in the energy process. All carbohydrates from any and all sources eventually are converted to glucose for energy. This includes the carbohydrates in cereals, fresh fruits and vegetables.

The sugar you eat between sets does provide energy if you need it. Blood sugar is a general term and could include glucose and fructose and even galactose (part of milk sugar). The major portion of it is glucose. We are particularly interested in blood glucose in terms of diagnosing diabetes or hypoglycemia (often called low blood sugar, but it really means low blood glucose level).

It is not true that the sugar you eat between sets will lower your blood sugar. Some sensitive people who have hypoglycemia will have an excess outpouring of insulin which in turn may cause a rebound low blood glucose level because of the insulin action.

Exercise causes the body to burn glucose. This can significantly lower the blood glucose level. That is why a diabetic who takes insulin may need to eat more or take less insulin if he is going to exercise. The exercise and regular amount of insulin combined may cause an insulin reaction — hypoglycemia. Diabetics need to regulate both their food intake and their exercise to maintain a reasonably stable level of blood glucose.

I am sending you The Health Letter number 3-8, Sugar and Starch: Carbohydrates, so you can learn the facts about sugar, glucose, starch and why all carbohydrates are similar and related. That way you can avoid being confused by statements such as being told your taking a lump of sugar will lower your blood sugar. Others who want to know the facts can send 50 cents with a long, stamped, self-addressed envelope for this issue to me in care of this newspaper, P.O. Box 1551, Radio City Station, New York, NY 10019.

Jim: "How about a week of matchpoint duplicate with emphasis on unusual plays."

Oswald: "One use of an unusual play is to go after a top score. One South achieved this top score by risking a bottom."

Jim: "We don't like to give this particular play any real credit. It just had to be bad percentage. There was no reason to assume that every South player would have reached that same three notrump. Anyway, South could count on nine easy tricks after he won the first spade."

Oswald: "South's play to score a tenth trick was simple indeed. At trick two he led his six of hearts toward dummy. He was risking his contract if East held the heart jack. He could only gain the play if West held the heart jack and ducked."

Jim: "It all seemed worthwhile to South. He did lead his six of hearts at trick two and West fell for it. He played low and now South had ten tricks and took them."

It has now been determined scientifically that the little animals known as gerbils do talk to one another in their own language — saying such things as "I love you" and "I feel lousy today" — but in ultrasonic syllables that can only be picked up by highiy sensitive instruments. Perhaps you have heard the sound of your voice echoing back from the side of a cliff.

The word "echo" comes from an old Greek mythology.

According to the myth, Echo was a beautiful mountain nymph (a nature spirit). Echo loved to talk. She would prattle aimlessly for hours to anyone in her company.

Tiring of her incessant chattering, the gods took away Echo's own voice. All she could do was repeat the last words that other people spoke.

Echo loved a handsome Greek youth named Narcissus. But Narcissus, disgusted with hearing Echo repeat every word he said, refused her love.

Echo was so grieved that she faded away until all that was left of her was her voice, which to this day can be heard repeating the words of others.

And that is how the ancient Greeks explained the echo.

COSTLY FUMBLE

Rams' quarterback Pat Haden (11) has ball knocked loose as he is hit by blitzing New Orleans' safety Chuck Crist in third quarter at Superdome Sunday. The Saints recovered the fumble and converted it into a touchdown in their 27-26 win over L.A.

Rams can't see jokes

NEW ORLEANS (AP) — Winners tell jokes. And Sunday's 27-26 victory over the Los Angeles Rams made New Orleans Saints' Coach Hank Stram a pretty funny fellow.

The Saints won the game on Rich Szaro's 31-yard field goal that hit the right goal post and bounced through the uprights with just over three minutes to play.

"I told him that if he could, to make it exciting — very exciting — to hit the upright. And he followed instructions perfectly," Stram joked after the game.

"It did add a certain drama, didn't it?" added Szaro.

In the seesaw struggle Sunday, the lead changed hands eight times, and the score was tied twice.

One of the New Orleans touchdowns came on a fake field goal. Holder Tom Blanchard hit defensive end Elois Grooms with a three-yard touchdown pass.

"Tom Blanchard will start at quarterback next week," Stram joked. "He did a super job."

"I think I earned a starting shot," Blanchard agreed.

The play sparked a lengthy on-field consultation between Rams' Coach Chuck Knox and game officials. Knox maintained that the referee failed to notify him that Grooms had checked into the game as a receiver.

"He said he told us, but nobody on our bench heard him," Knox said.

Other New Orleans scores came on a 23-yard field goal by Szaro and two one-yard dives by running back Tony Galbreath.

For the Rams, Harold Jackson scored two touchdowns on passes from Pat Haden, one from 18 yards out and one from nine yards away. Lawrence McCutcheon scored on a oneyard burst, and Rafael Septien booted field goals of 36 yards and 27 yards.

Knox didn't think it was funny. The loss left his defending division champs with a 4-3 season record. "They just kicked our tails," he said. "No excuses."

But Stram was happy. It was only his sixth victory in 21 games as head coach of the Saints, his second against five defeats this season.

"This was a game we had to win. Beating a great team like the Los Angeles Rams is a milestone — a stepping stone to bigger and better things for our program," he said.

"This was our first victory against a contending team, and we're very, very happy."

Galbreath gained 100 yards for the Saints on 20 carries.

Chuck Muncie, who did not start because of a minor injury and disciplinary problems, gained 81 yards. Mike Strachan, starting at Muncie's tailback spot, was the workhorse of the Saints' first half offensive display.

McCutcheon carried 26 times for 107 yards. Haden completed 17 of 26 passes for 261 yards. Jackson made eight receptions for 127 yards. The Rams had 376 yards in total offense to the Saints' 343, but seven penalties for 85 yards and three lost fumbles were critical.

The Rams host the winless Tampa Bay Buccaneers next Sunday, while the Saints play at Philadelphia.

Jim Zorn enjoys best day as pro

By P-B Wire Services

SEATTLE — Cal Poly product Jim Zorn returned from the injury list in a big way Sunday afternoon to lead the Seattle Seahawks to a smashing 56-17 triumph over the Buffalo Bills.

Zorn, who had been out four weeks with a knee injury, shook off two early interceptions to rip the Bills apart as Seattle grabbed a commanding 42-3 halftime margin.

His 31-yard touchdown pass to Steve Largent late in the first quarter gave the Seahawks the lead for good at 7-3. The lefthanded quarterback from Poly completed 10 of 21 passes for 251 yards and four touchdowns and ran 4 yards for a fifth score in the fitsy half alone.

Zorn was spelled by backup Steve Myer, the former Mt. San Antonio College star, late in the third period. Myer finished with four completions in six attempts for 37 yards while Zorn connected on 11 of 23 for 296.

"When your offensive line can pick up the blitz, that puts the receivers one-on-one," said Zorn, who also passed 37 yards to Duke Fergerson, 10 yards to Don Testerman and 48 to Largent. "And if the quarterback has enough time, I don't think there's any way the defensive backs can cover them."

"I have to believe they blew their coverage," Largent added. "This was the first time a secondary just ignored us deep. They just came dwon 17 yards and stopped. We made it look like we were running a curl and just ran right by them."

The Bills, who dropped to 1-6 to remain in the American Conference Eastern Division cellar, got behind in a hurry and never got reorganized.

"I never thought it would be this bad," sighed Jim Ringo, the Bills' embattled coach. The loss was Buffalo's 16th in 17 games since Ringo replaced Lou Saban early last season.

"We tried every pass coverage, but Zorn kept throwing and they kept catching it," Ringo said.

Buffalo took an early 3-0 lead on Carson Long's 25-yard field goal. Tony Greene's 19-yard return to the Seattle 16 with the first of his two interceptions of Zorn passes set up the kick. Greene intercepted a Myer pass in the fourth period to establish a Buffalo single-game record.

Ex-Rangers score in Kings' victory

NEW YORK (AP) — Pete Stemkowski had been the last in a long line of players to find homes in Los Angeles when their leases were up in New York.

Many others had preceded him, including Gene Carr, Mike Murphy and Bert Wilson. But when all four scored goals to help the Kings beat the Rangers 5-3 Sunday night, only Stemkowski remembered much of what it had been like here.

"I wasn't happy the way things were going here last season," said the 34-year-old center. "I'd sit out nine or 10 games and get buried into a rut it was impossible to crawl out of.

"I heard a few whispers: I can't play any more. I'm too fat. Overweight and overpaid. But it's the general manager's prerogative to get rid of me," he continued. "It's their business."

Playing for Los Angeles is Stemkowski's business now, winning faceoffs, playing solid hockey and scoring an occasional goal is all that's expected of him. Stemkowski — and the rest — came through Sunday night against their former mates.

"Let's get something straight, though," he insisted. "It's only one game out of 80. There was great satisfaction tonight, but it'll be forgotten by next week."

But it just might be remembered when April comes and the playoffs begin. The two points Los Angeles gained with the victory might be significant — as significant as the two points the Rangers lost.

"I'd be just as happy if we had beaten St. Louis or any other team in the league," said Kings' Coach Ron Stewart, who guided the Rangers until he, too, was let go. "I'm just happy with the two points."

New York center Phil Esposito couldn't be happy with his two points, even though they tied him with Stan Mikita of the Chicago Black Hawks and made both the third-leading scorers in National Hockey League history with 1,348 points each.

Rangers left wing Pat Hickey couldn't be happy with his two goals in a 21-second span of the second period — both of them set up by Esposito — because it hadn't been enough. The Rangers had lost.

The former Rangers had seen to that. Murphy blocked a shot by New York defenseman Carol Vadnais at the Los Angeles blue line and Carr, just stepping out of the penalty box, broke away to open the scoring with a 20-foot shot at 7:16 of the first period.

Dave Schultz connected 43 seconds later, and Stemkowski potted a rebound for a 3-0 lead at 6:08 of the middle period. Hickey's flurry brought New York within 3-2 but Murphy — knocked senseless by a Dave Maloney check with 9:20 left in the session — tapped in another power play rebound to extend LA's unbeaten streak against New York to 10 games dating back to Jan. 26, 1975.

Vadnais attoned for his earlier mistake with a power play tally in the third period, but Murphy hit the empty New York net with 25 seconds left to make it a very successful night for former Rangers.

B. Thoughtful wins 2nd stakes

ARCADIA, Calif. (AP) — B. Thoughtful hasn't let a case of hives stop her from winning a pair of stakes events at the Oak Tree meeting at Santa Anita.

The 2-year-old Bob Wheeler-trained filly, idled for four months because of hives during the summer, raced past Grenzen in the stretch Sunday for a convincing 3½-length victory in the $122,550 Oak Leaf Stakes before a crowd of 29,965.

La Verne loses Frick for year

La Verne College has lost running back Brad Frick for the season.

Frick, All-SCIAC and All-District last year as a sophomore, suffered a broken collarbone in the third quarter of Saturday night's game at Whittier.

In that game, a 13-0 loss, the 6-0, 190-pound junior had carried nine times for 36 yards when he was injured. He also returned two kickoffs for 58 yards and caught one pass for a 10-yard gain.

Through the six games played, Frick had carried the ball 91 times for 401 yards and five touchdowns. He also had 11 kickoff returns for 301 yards including one for 94 yards and a TD. He had three receptions for 21 yards.

"That's a big loss," said La Verne Coach Roland Ortmayer. Replacing Brad won't be easy. He played a big part in our offense."

Ortmayer listed three players as possible replacements. They are Robbie Hogan, a 5-8, 190-pound junior, Dave Maloof, 5-9, 165-pound senior and Dave Serrano, a 6-0, 160-pound sophomore.

'The Juice' to retire?

BUFFALO (AP) — Reports that star running back O.J. Simpson may have played his last game as a Buffalo Bill circulated today following the Bills' 56-17 loss to the Seahawks in Seattle on Sunday.

Immediately after the game, Simpson left for Los Angeles to visit his family and to have another doctor check the left knee that has been bothering him for several weeks.

A source close to the situation said, "If the indications are that the knee would need surgery, he might consider retiring."

The Bills described Simpson's knee problem last week as a derangement and said it was questionable whether he would start in the game against Seattle.

But Simpson did start and carried the ball nine times for a total of 32 yards before leaving the contest in the second quarter. He sat on the sideline the rest of the game.

Simpson's present contract with the Bills runs through the 1978 season. He repeatedly has said he won't play any more pro ball after 1978.

BACK-STOPPING PUCK

Dallas now lone unbeaten team

'Flawless' Raiders turn the tables on Broncos

By Associated Press

Turnabout was fair play — or perhaps it was the turnovers.

"Turnovers were the difference. We had eight of them the last time we met, but we didn't have any this time and were able to keep the upper hand," Oakland Coach John Madden said after his Raiders, literally mugged by Denver 30-7 a couple of weeks ago, turned around and broke the Broncos' backs 24-14 to bring the Mile High City back to earth.

It left the teams tied atop the American Conference West, each at 6-1, an American Football Conference-best record also held by Baltimore.

The National Conference, meanwhile, now has the only unbeaten team. The Dallas Cowboys, off to their best start since the team was formed in 1960, mauled Detroit 37-0 on Roger Staubach's three touchdown passes and Efren Herrera's three field goals.

In other National Football League action it was Baltimore 31, Pittsburgh 21; Chicago 26, Green Bay 0; New Orleans 27, Los Angeles 26; San Francisco 20, Tampa Bay 10; Seattle 56, Buffalo 17; San Diego 14, Miami 13; New England 24, New York Jets 13; Washington 23, Philadelphia 17; Cleveland 44, Kansas City 7; Minnesota 14, Atlanta 7, and Cincinnati 13, Houston 10 in overtime. The New York Giants visit St. Louis tonight.

Red Miller, who had the Broncos flying high in his first season as Denver's head coach, could only applaud Oakland's solid, basic play.

"They used their weapons to the utmost," he said. "They had great blocking in running to their left side ... opposite of what happened in Oakland" when Denver played virtually error-free ball and the Raiders' Ken Stabler was intercepted seven times.

That left side was manned by guard Gene Upshaw and tackle Art Shell, who opened gaping holes for Mark van Eeghen and Clarence Davis. They teamed for 187 yards and had a touchdown run apiece. Stabler started the scoring with a 21-yard TD pass to Cliff Branch and Oakland had a 24-0 lead before Denver did anything.

Cowboys 37, Lions 0

Meanwhile, Dallas did anything it pleased and Detroit, as its score indicated, did nothing. The Lions' biggest problem was coming in against a Cowboy team that woke up after last week's sluggish performance.

"We are more intense now than our Super Bowl teams," said Cowboys safety Cliff Harris. "This is the most intense I've ever seen us in the regular season."

But Tom Landry, ever the cool coach, downplayed the runaway. "We're still not a solid football team yet. We need more consistency," he said ... which left Detroit Coach Tommy Hudspeth almost speechless.

"All I can say is that Dallas is a tremendous football team," he gasped. The Lions didn't even cross midfield until the fourth period.

Staubach clicked on passes of 14 yards to Billy Joe Dupree, 18 yards to Scott Laidlaw and 1 yard to Jay Saldi. Herrera's field goals covered 21, 45 and 30 yards.

Chargers 14, Dolphins 13

Benny Malone fumbled away Miami's victory, giving the Chargers the ball on the Dolphin 33-yard line with 1:48 to play. Exactly 1:48 later, San Diego quarterback James Harris ran 5 yards for a tying touchdown, then Rolf Benirschke kicked the winning extra point.

Chargers safety Clarence Duren starred on defense with three interceptions and a fumble recovery.

Patriots 24, Jets 13

Steve Grogan passed for touchdowns of 11 yards to Darryl Stingley, 52 yards to Stanley Morgan and 4 yards to Don Hasselback in the Patriots' victory over the Jets. In all, Grogan hit 16 of 23 passes for 228 yards with Stingley catching eight of them for 121.

Redskins 23, Eagles 17

Coach Allen asked Joe Theismann to take over for Billy Kilmer and wake up Washington's slumbering offense against Philadelphia. And, as the coach later decided: "He did everything we asked of him, and more." What he did was team with Jean Fugett on a pair of 15-yard TD passes in the first period for a lead Washington never relinquished.

Browns 44, Chiefs 7

Cleveland, first in the AFC Central Division, got 153 yards rushing from Greg Pruitt — 78 on a TD play — and three field goals from Don Cockroft in the rout of Kansas City.

"I think that's probably the best over-all game we've played in the three years I've been here," Coach Forrest Gregg said. "I'd have to say — I would have to finally admit — that the team is where I want it to be."

Vikings 14, Falcons 7

Fran Tarkenton, who had lobbied for Minnesota to acquire unhappy tight end Bob Tucker from the Giants, repaid the Vikings in the fourth priod with a 6-yard touchdown pass to his new teammate to beat Atlanta.

Bengals 13, Oilers 10

Ken Anderson, who replaced ineffective John Reaves at quarterback for Cincinnati in the second period, marched kickoff, then Chris Bahr kicked the 22yard field goal that beat the Oilers with 5:51 gone in sudden death.

Colts 31, Steelers 21

The last time the Steelers visited Baltimore, Terry Bradshaw passed for three touchdowns in a 40-14 playoff romp. This time it was Bert Jones' turn. The Colts' quarterback came through with scoring strikes of 26 yards to Roosevelt Leaks and 13 yards to Lydell Mitchell and a 6-yard TD run of his own.

The Baltimore defense kicked in with five interceptions and Pittsburgh kicked itself around with 112 yards in penalties.

Bears 26, Packers 0

Walter Payton's 205 yards rushing tied Gale Sayers' 1968 club record for a single game — and Chicago's popular running back was delighted he never got the 206th.

"I didn't want to break Sayers' record because Sayers is a super guy. What's a record? I just wanted to win the game," he said after scoring on touchdown runs of 6 and 1 yards and setting up Johnny Musso's 3yard scoring run in the rout of the Packers.

"Walter is super every game, but we wanted to make this a truly great game for him," rookie tackle Ted Albrecht of Chicago said. "The coaches wanted to take him out when he had 196, but we asked them if he could carry for one more play. He did, and he got it."

49ers 20, Bucs 10

Delvin Williams ran 35 yards and Wilbur Jackson went in from the 2 for San Francisco touchdowns, but the Bucs once again helped beat themselves with a costly fumble.

Williams' score came after Ricky Bell coughed up the ball for Tampa Bay, now winless in the 1½ years they've

Thompson regains touch

PENSACOLA, Fla. (AP) — Some regained weight, a friendship with Arnold Palmer and a lot of hard work was the winning parlay for Leonard Thompson.

"This just proves to me that I can do it again," Thompson said Sunday after his solid, three-under-par 68 had produced a two-stroke victory in the Pensacola Open, the last official event of the long pro golf tour.

"Under the circumstances, having been down so long, I really think this is a bigger thrill than winning the first one."

The husky Thompson, a seven-year tour veteran, put himself in trouble a couple of years ago when he went on a crash diet, shedding 40 pounds in four months.

"I went from 225 to 185," he said. "I thought losing the weight would make me play better.

"Well, I never have been accused of being too smart. I lost that weight and I couldn't hit the seat of my pants with both hands. I couldn't do anything. So I put the weight back on and I was still playing bad. I was so far down it was miserable just to be around me in a locker room.

"That's about the time Arnold started working with me. He'd spend three-four hours at a time with me on the practice tee. He didn't have to do that. You know he's got lots of other things he could be doing.

"He's really helped me a lot and I appreciate it. We've got to be pretty good friends. I think the thing is I treat him like just another guy, not like he's Arnold Palmer. I think he likes that."

Thompson, now carrying a solid 210 pounds, capped his comeback with a 50-foot birdie putt on the final hole and sent his putter flipping high into the air with the second victory of his career. He won it with a 268 total, 16 under par on the 6,549yard Pensacola Country Club course.

It didn't come easily, however. He started the final round with a two-shot lead, blew that with a couple of early bogeys, got the strokes back with birdies on the next two holes, then watched rookie Curtis Strange, playing in front of him, mount a determined bid.

The 22-year-old Strange, a former national collegiate champ from Wake Forest, reeled off a string of five consecutive birdies that started with a chip-in on the eighth hole. That pulled him into a tie for the lead.

Joe Louis in hospital

HOUSTON (AP) — A Methodist Hospital spokesman said former heavyweight boxing champion Joe Louis continued to rest comfortably today while doctors, headed by famed heart surgeon Michael Debakey, evaluated his condition.

The legendary ex-champ has been described as "alert" since he was transferred to Houston from Las Vegas last week.

He had complained of chest pains and Nevada doctors feared Louis was suffering from a "dissecting aortic aneurysm."

The hospital spokesman said evaluations would continue through the middle of this week but would not speculate on when Louis might be released.

Stanford leading Pacific-8 race

By The Associated Press

The two remaining unbeaten teams in the Pacific-8 race to the Rose Bowl have been upset, denting their unblemished conference records and throwing the league title up for grabs.

The upsets helped put Stanford at the top of the conference with a 4-1 record, while Southern Cal, UCLA and Washington share second place with 3-1 records.

California, with safety Anthony Green providing two key interceptions, upset 10th-ranked Southern Cal 17-14 and the UCLA Bruins hung a loss on Washington's Pac-8 record with a 20-12 victory.

Stanford clawed to the top by zapping Oregon State 26-7.

But still favored as the team to beat for the conference title — although they have lost three of their last four outings — is USC, the early favorite and once this year ranked No. 1 in the nation.

Said Southern Cal coach John Robinson:

"We're a very much uptight team now, but we're still in the Rose Bowl race. We're 3-1 and if we win the rest of our games we'll go to the Rose Bowl.

The Trojans have the roughest schedule the rest of the way, playing Stanford, Washington and UCLA. UCLA faces Oregon, Oregon State and USC. Stanford must take on USC and California, with a non-conference date with San Jose St., while Cal plays WashingtonOregon and Stanford.

Southern Cal converted on only four of 17 third-down situations in its loss at Berkeley. The Bears broke a 7-7 tie and hiked their lead to 17-7 early in the final period as quarterback Charlie Young scored on a oneyard sneak to complete an 80yard touchdown drive.

Rick Bashore of UCLA scored on a three-yard run to climax a 74-yard UCLA march to open the second half, snapping a 6-6 tie and paving the way for the win over surprising Washington.

Stanford's quarterback Guy Benjamin, staging another air show, fired touchdown passes of 10, 22 and nine yards in the trouncing of Oregon St. The Cards broke open the close game with 16 points in the fourth quarter, including two scoring tosses by Benjamin.

Running backs Dan Doornink, Harold Gillum and Mike Washington powered Washington State's rout. Doornink paced all rushers with 77 yards.

The only Pacific Coast Athletic Association conference game found stomping San Jose State 24-7 as Bruce Gibson carried a school-record 39 times for 127 yards and a touchdown.

In other games involving PCAA teams, it was Wichita State 35, Long Beach State 21; Fresno State 28, Idaho State 7; and Nevada-Las Vegas 24, Fullerton State 21.

San Diego State crushed Tulsa 41-7.

JC harrier titles on the line

Cross country titles in the South Coast and Mission conferences go on the line Tuesday.

The SCC conference final will go at Grossmont, while the Mission finale is slated for Saddleback. Both meets will start at 2:30 p.m.

Mt. San Antonio College hopes to be at full strength for the South Coast final. Grossmont, which won the dual meet title with a perfect 6-0 mark this fall, is a heavy favorite to win the SCC meet on its own course.

"We need to be at full strength for teams like Grossmont and Fullerton," said MSAC coach John Norton. "We'll be in the money for the title but we've got to run like we are capable of running in order to win. It should be a very interesting race."

In the Mission Conference final at Saddleback, Citrus will be one of the favorites, along with host Saddleback and Southwestern.

The Owls top runner of late has been Bonita High product Mike Green. Freshman Dennis McCutcheon, from Claremont High, is also capable of a big race for the Owls.

Citrus is a definite favorite to take the M.C. women's division race. The Owls are paced in that department by Ruth Caldwell, who is unbeaten this year and recently scored a first in the MSAC Invite.

Chaffey College will also be in action at Saddleback, although the Panther runners don't appear to have the depth to break into the top three in the team standings.
